Ford Has 'A Significant Conversation' With Mao

PEKING (AP) — President Ford said Wednesday his hour and 50 minute meeting with Chairman Mao Tse-tung produced "a significant conversation."

It was Ford's first public comment on the meeting Tuesday, which was nearly twice as long as the 1972 talks between Mao and then President Richard M. Nixon.

Ford told Chinese officials and a small group of newsmen: "It was a significant conversation. It covered a very wide range of matters on the international scene as well as our bilateral relations."

Vice Premier Teng Hsiao-ping, seated across a felt-covered table at Ford's guest quarters, nodded his head at the President's remarks and said, "Yes, I agree."

Ford began his second round of formal talks with Peking officials in the yellow brick guest house provided for him. That is in line with a policy of alternating conference sites between the Great Hall of the People, where the Chinese leadership presides, and Ford's quarters.

The President and his advisers formed a receiving line inside the house to greet the Chinese. Both groups then entered the large conference room where they faced each other across the table, 10 on a side.

A brief communique issued several hours after Ford's meeting with Mao said they had discussed "wide-ranging issues in a friendly atmosphere."

The meeting was held in the official residence of the 81-year-old founder of the People's Republic in Chungnanhai Park, near the Forbidden City.

The Communist chairman also greeted Betty Ford, the Fords' 18-year-old daughter Susan, Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger, Undersecretary of State Joseph J. Sisco, George Bush, chief of the U.S. liaison office in Peking; Lt. Gen. Brent Scowcroft, the President's national security adviser; Philip Habib, assistant secretary of state for East Asian and Pacific affairs; Winston Lord, director of the State Department policy planning staff; and Richard Solomon, senior staff member of the National Security Council.

Mao shook hands all around and the group posed for a photograph. Then Mrs. Ford, Susan, Sisco, Habib and Solomon left while the others began discussions.

The Mao session forced postponement of a planned afternoon meeting between Kissinger and Chinese Foreign Minister Chiao Kuan-hua. It was rescheduled for 11:30 p.m. after the Ford party had attended a ballet performance.

Mao will be 82 on Dec. 26 and reportedly has speech difficulties, but he has seen a succession of state visitors in recent months. Kissinger, who also had a long interview with him in October, said his mind was clear and his grasp of foreign affairs remarkable.

The phraseology of the statement issued by the Chinese government suggested that the discussions were more than usually cordial. No details were given either by the White House staff or the Chinese beyond the written statement.

Susan Ford was on a trip outside the capital to the Great Wall and the Ming Tombs when she got a telephone message to return to Peking immediately for the Mao meeting. She had to skip the visit to the tombs, but she had already trekked up the steep grades of the serpentine wall, stopping occasionally to be photographed and take pictures herself.

Susan, who wore a full-length muskrat fur coat against the freezing temperatures, described the 5th century B.C. fortification as "gorgeous, amazing and prettier than the pictures."

"It's more than I ever expected," she said. "I feel like I'm in a fantasy. It's a whole other world."

Representing the Chinese side at the Mao-Ford meeting were First Vice Premier Teng Hsiao-ping, Vice Premier Li Hsien-nien, Foreign Minister Chiao, Vice Foreign Minister Wang Hai-jung, Huang Chen, chief of the Chinese liaison office in Washington, and two deputy department directors, Tang Wen-sheng and Chang Han-chih.

A participant in the meeting said Mao escorted the Ford party to the door after the talks were finished. The President said later he thought this was an unusual gesture by Mao, but Peking-based correspondents said it was Mao's normal practice.

Ford, who began his five-day visit to China on Monday, met for two hours Tuesday morning with Teng Hsiao-ping, and the White House reported "a constructive exchange of views on a wide range of international issues."

FBI Klan Role Debated

WASHINGTON (AP) — A top FBI official Tuesday called the campaign against the Ku Klux Klan the bureau's "finest hour." But a one-time informant said agents rarely acted to head off Klan attacks against blacks and civil rights workers.

The informant, Gary Thomas Rowe Jr., who wore a hood to mask his face, told the Senate Intelligence Committee that FBI officials condoned his participation in acts of violence while he was a Klan member from 1960 to 1965. They also ordered him to gain information and sow dissension within the Klan by sleeping with the wives of as many Klan members as possible, he said.

James B. Adams, the FBI's deputy associate director for investigation, testified Rowe never was told to involve himself in violence or sexual activities.

However, Sen. Walter D. Huddleston, D-Ky., said Rowe's control agent has in effect corroborated his story by telling the committee Rowe "couldn't be an angel and be a good informant."

Sen. Walter Mondale, D-Minn., told Adams the record now is clear that while the FBI is the world's best law enforcement agency, it is a consistent bungler in the field of political activities.

It interfered with civil liberties and finally heaped shame upon itself, Mondale said.

Rowe said he warned the FBI three weeks in advance about plans by the Klan to attack Freedom Riders in Birmingham, Ala.

He said the attack took place as planned as the Klan moved in with baseball bats, clubs, chains and pistols after having been promised free rein for 15 minutes by members of the Birmingham police force.

Rowe said that when he asked the FBI why nothing had been done to prevent the attack, he was told, "Who in the hell were we going to report it to? The police department was involved."

Rowe said the Klan got extensive help from the police department and county sheriff's department in Birmingham and was allowed unlimited access to the police department's intelligence files on civil rights orders.

He said Klan members often rode in police cars to keep track of civil rights activities.

Rowe, a burly man whose thickset features were only partially concealed by the rudely fashioned white cloth mask, described another incident in which a judge in Birmingham returned to the Klan weapons which had been confiscated by Alabama State Highway police.

The incident occurred in 1963 as Klan members were traveling to the University of Alabama in Tuscaloosa to support Alabama Gov. George C. Wallace, who had proclaimed his intention of standing in the schoolroom door to prevent the university's integration.

Rowe, who now lives in California under an assumed identity, did not identify the judge. He said the judge slapped him on the shoulder, called him a "good American" and told him to take the weapons and "put them to good use."

Rowe said his FBI contacts were astonished when he displayed the weapons cache in the trunk of his car.

Rowe said the FBI told him to take any action he could to disrupt and discredit the Klan, including spying on the sex lives of Klan members in order to "pass the word around and to cause dissension in their homes."

"I was told to sleep with as many wives as I could . . . to break up marriages," Rowe said. He did not say in his testimony whether he actually had sexual relations with wives of Klan members.

The charge that he was even instructed to do so was denied under oath by Adams.

Adams said that at the height of the FBI's campaign against the Klan about 6% of the Klan were FBI informants. The Klan thought up to 50% of its members were FBI informants, he added. Because the Klan was insecure, he said, it became violent.

Adams acknowledged the FBI made some mistakes but said he does not believe a balanced picture of its achievements has emerged because "of the necessity to zero in on abuses."

"I think our accomplishment with the Klan was the FBI's finest hour."

Committee members noted that the FBI's campaign against the Rev. Martin Luther King Jr. began in 1962 after King refused to discuss with the FBI his charge that the bureau's activities in the South were "aiding segregationists."

Citing Rowe's testimony and information gathered by the committee staff, Sen. Gary Hart, D-Colo., said it now appears Dr. King was right. "And that the bureau was either deceiving itself or not telling the truth."

All Attempts To Rescue Hwy. 2 Hound In Vain

By PATTY BEUTLER
Star Staff Writer

There's a hound in south Lincoln who calls Hwy. 2 home.

He's staked out his spot somewhere around 33rd St. and the state road and has been there for the last six months.

It's not that no one cares; it's just that the animal won't let anyone get close enough to him to offer some comfort and the chance of a new home.

The Humane Society, according to director Bernard Patton, is well-aware of the animal's existence. They get a call a week about the medium-size, black-haired hound on the loose; he's fondly been tagged the "Hwy. 2 Dog."

But all attempts to catch the dog have been in vain. "The more we chase it, the wilder it seems to get. We're only hurting our efforts," concluded Patton.

When humans approach the hound, he takes off. Patton says his men have never even been within 100 feet of the animal. In fact, they don't even know if it's a male or female.

To avoid capture, the dog darts into one of several culverts along the road. In the spring, he romped among the tall weeds and hid in ripening milo fields.

Temporarily giving up the chase, Patton says his crew leaves food near the culvert for the animal so at least he won't starve.

But the animal seems to be faring well enough, sustained by scraps of food he regularly begs or steals from a near-by runza drive-in.

Patton surmises that some "unscrupulous soul" dumped the animal out on the highway sometime last spring. Scared of the heavy traffic — and perhaps even shot at — the dog became people-shy.

"A dog — when he don't want to get caught — you just don't catch it," Patton said.

He said he wouldn't use a tranquilizer gun to bring the dog in. The pacifying dart, he believes, is "the most vicious and cruel weapon" and one he wouldn't use on dogs until "they use them on humans."

In the meantime, the dog, like a coyote, has learned to survive in the out-of-doors. He avoids traffic. Patton says, by crossing the highway via an underground culvert. Patton's still hoping that sometime this winter the animal will take shelter in a small culvert and the Humane Society crew will be able to corner him inside.

The animal appears neither mean or menacing and his plight has not gone unnoticed.

Rick Brown, of 4402 S. 54th and his brother Ron, have tried to catch the dog on their own several times, but to avail. Instead, they scattered a half a bale of hay for the animal to bed down on and left some scraps of food.

As winter blusters in, the hound of Hwy. 2 may soon discover that dog's best friend just might be man.

Public Power Study Promised If Needed

By DON WALTON
Star Staff Writer

Two senators Tuesday assured rural electric officials that the Legislature will undertake a thorough study of public power in Nebraska if its current rate survey indicates a need for it.

The $30,000 survey of Nebraska Public Power District and Omaha Public Power District rates began this week.

"I hope it will show efficient and economic operations" by the two major power districts, Sen. Richard Lewis of Holbrook said.

If not, he said, he believes the Legislature "will demand a thorough study" of the entire public power system in the state, and enact whatever "corrective" legislation is needed.

'Only Preliminary'

Sen. Jack Mills of Big Springs said he believes the current survey is "only a preliminary study" with more to come.

A third senator, Ralph Kelly of Grand Island, said he is not yet sure additional study will be needed. But that will depend on the results of the rate review, he noted.

The trio spoke to delegates to the Nebraska Rural Electric Association's 40th annual convention.

"If there is no Phase II study (going beyond the rate survey), a lot of us raised a lot of hell about nothing," NREA General Manager Al Ballard told the senators.

NPPD Customers

The rural electric systems are customers of NPPD.

Lewis said the proposed rate increases by NPPD are "a primary concern" in the survey now being undertaken by O'Brien and Gere Engineers, Inc., of Syracuse, N.Y.

"We want to determine what justification, if any, there is for the proposed rate increase."

Lewis and Mills met with two project engineers from the consulting firm earlier Tuesday to outline the scope of the survey. Senators hope to have a report by mid-January.

The consultants told them that Nebraska is now the only state in the union without an electric utility regulatory body, Lewis said.

Alone In Nation

Nebraska is the nation's only wholly public power state. A state agency, the Nebraska Power Review Board, oversees generation and transmission construction projects, but has no authority over rates.

Public power has never been thoroughly reviewed or scrutinized since its inception in Nebraska, Lewis said.

NPPD and OPPD have grown into "political and financial giants," he said.

As the rate study evolves, Lewis said, the public will be informed as to its findings, whether they be favorable or unfavorable to the districts, or both.

Mills said the public should be assured that "this is not a witchhunt," but rather a search for facts.

Hopefully, it will "open up avenues of understanding" for senators and for the public, Kelly said.

County Board Eyes More Personnel Staff

By NANCY HICKS
Star Staff Writer

Since its inception the Lancaster County personnel system has drawn more fire than praise.

And after a year and half in operation the flak has diminished only slightly.

Faced with a probable legislative attack on the state law which set up the county's system, County Board members Tuesday discussed beefing up the personnel staff in order to get the work done more quickly.

The tentative discussions included farming out more work to the city or hiring more staff for the County Personnel Department.

In addition, the board discussed the probability that Wayne Hart, who is both administrative assistant to the board and personnel director, would throw away the personnel hat and devote full time to his board duties.

Amendments Prepared

A better staffed, more responsive personnel system could help ward off support for amendments to the personnel law drafted by the county's elected office heads.

The amendments, similar to the elected officials' proposals two years ago when the state law went through the Legislature, would change control of the entire county system.

They would take final authority away from the county commissioners and place it in the hands of a five-member board. Two members would be elected from the elected officials, two from the employes and the fifth would be an outside person selected by the original four.

This body would determine final personnel policy and hire the personnel director and staff, now a function of the board.

More Leeway

The amendments would also allow department heads more leeway in excluding certain jobs from the personnel system.

The amendments would not disband the system.

In fact elected officials, department heads and employes agree that a personnel system itself is a good idea, a protection for employes.

And few employes are complaining about the pay increases they have received under the new system.

But the complaints are many and some have been reiterated in a recent report by a Civil Service Commission team.

The complaints fall into three major areas — the working of the system itself, the control of the system by the commissioners and a conflict with the County Personnel Department.

3 Major Complaints

The major flaws of the system seem to be the long time lag (often up to three or four weeks) between the request for a new employe and receiving a list of candidates, the monumental paperwork involved and the poor quality of recruits

Part of the time-lag and recruitment problems are attributed to the city personnel system by many department heads. The county contracts with the city for much of the initial interviewing and screening of possible applicants.

"It just hasn't worked for the city to administer this," said Jerry Gibson, Lancaster Manor director. He feels, like others, that the county should administer the entire system and not farm out any work.

Other problems include the need for better job descriptions within offices, a clear handbook for employes and a sometimes strained relationship with the personnel office.

Dominance Disliked

The elected officials don't like the complete commissioner dominance of the system and their employes too feel the pressure of courthouse politics.

The dual administrative assistant and personnel director duties of Hart are seen as a conflict by both employes and their chiefs.

"No one feels there is an impartial listener," said Nancy Howland, secretary to the county clerk. "They need to be separate functions — administrator and personnel."

But employes in departments headed by appointed officials do not have this departmenthead versus the commissioners feeling, a check with employes showed.

Many of the department heads and some employes also see an inflexibility in the personnel system.

Indonesian Rebels Hold Train

BEILEN, The Netherlands (AP) — Five Indonesian island rebels seized a train with 50 persons aboard in northern Holland on Tuesday, killed the engineer and another man and were "shooting at anything that moves" outside, officials said.

They said the gang, armed with machine pistols and a hunting rifle, attached dynamite to the outside of the train and demanded a bus and a plane to take them to an undisclosed destination.

The gunmen were described as extremists seeking independence for their native South Molucca Islands from Indonesia. Police said they were holding the passengers at gunpoint and had made an ultimatum, but the deadline was not disclosed.

The dead were said to be the train engineer and an unidentified man who tried to escape. Earlier reports said a body was dropped from the train and was lying by the tracks. There were unconfirmed reports that a third person aboard the train was dead.

The hijackers' demands, written in Dutch, were delivered to police by one of two women who were released with a child at the outset of the takeover. A police spokesman declined to give any details except that the gunmen had asked transportation to Amsterdam's Schiphol airport 90 miles away and a plane to fly them out of the country.

All Attempts To Rescue Hwy. 2 Hound In Vain

Public Power Study Promised If Needed

In addition, the board discussed the probability that Wayne Hart, who is both administrative assistant to the board and personnel director, would throw away the personnel hat and devote full time to his board duties.

Amendments Prepared

A better staffed, more responsive personnel system could help ward off support for amendments to the personnel law drafted by the county's elected office heads.

The amendments, similar to the elected officials' proposals two years ago when the state law went through the Legislature, would change control of the entire county system.

They would take final authority away from the county commissioners and place it in the hands of a five-member board. Two members would be elected from the elected officials, two from the employes and the fifth would be an outside person selected by the original four.

This body would determine final personnel policy and hire the personnel director and staff, now a function of the board.

More Leeway

The amendments would also allow department heads more leeway in excluding certain jobs from the personnel system.

The amendments would not disband the system.

In fact elected officials, department heads and employes agree that a personnel system itself is a good idea, a protection for employes.

And few employes are complaining about the pay increases they have received under the new system.

But the complaints are many and some have been reiterated in a recent report by a Civil Service Commission team.

The complaints fall into three major areas — the working of the system itself, the control of the system by the commissioners and a conflict with the County Personnel Department.

3 Major Complaints

The major flaws of the system seem to be the long time lag (often up to three or four weeks) between the request for a new employe and receiving a list of candidates, the monumental paperwork involved and the poor quality of recruits.

Part of the time-lag and recruitment problems are attributed to the city personnel system by many department heads. The county contracts with the city for much of the initial interviewing and screening of possible applicants.

"It just hasn't worked for the city to administer this," said Jerry Gibson, Lancaster Manor director. He feels, like others, that the county should administer the entire system and not farm out any work.

Other problems include the need for better job descriptions within offices, a clear handbook for employes and a sometimes strained relationship with the personnel office.

Dominance Disliked

The elected officials don't like the complete commissioner dominance of the system and their employes too feel the pressure of courthouse politics.

The dual administrative assistant and personnel director duties of Hart are seen as a conflict by both employes and their chiefs.

"No one feels there is an impartial listener," said Nancy Howland, secretary to the county clerk. "They need to be separate functions — administrator and personnel."

But employes in departments headed by appointed officials do not have this departmenthead versus the commissioners feeling, a check with employes showed.

Many of the department heads and some employes also see an inflexibility in the personnel system.

Indonesian Rebels Hold Train

BEILEN, The Netherlands (AP) — Five Indonesian island rebels seized a train with 50 persons aboard in northern Holland on Tuesday, killed the engineer and another man and were "shooting at anything that moves" outside, officials said.

They said the gang, armed with machine pistols and a hunting rifle, attached dynamite to the outside of the train and demanded a bus and a plane to take them to an undisclosed destination.

The gunmen were described as extremists seeking independence for their native South Molucca Islands from Indonesia. Police said they were holding the passengers at gunpoint and had made an ultimatum, but the deadline was not disclosed.

The dead were said to be the train engineer and an unidentified man who tried to escape. Earlier reports said a body was dropped from the train and was lying by the tracks. There were unconfirmed reports that a third person aboard the train was dead.

The hijackers' demands, written in Dutch, were delivered to police by one of two women who were released with a child at the outset of the takeover. A police spokesman declined to give any details except that the gunmen had asked transportation to Amsterdam's Schiphol airport 90 miles away and a plane to fly them out of the country.

Israeli Bombs Hit Palestinians

By The Associated Press

Israeli jets dodged heat-seeking missiles and swarmed over Lebanon Tuesday, bombing Palestinian refugee camps and guerrilla bases.

There were conflicting casualty reports Lebanese police said the raids left 91 dead and 150 wounded but the guerrillas listed 59 killed and 140 wounded.

The guerrilla command called the attacks "the biggest in the history of Israeli assaults against Palestinians in Lebanon" and ordered "immediate reprisals."

Lebanese Prime Minister Rashid Karami went on Beirut radio and called for world public opinion "to deter the aggressor and purify society from arrogance and acts of violation of the rights of peoples."

He said "aggression has always been part of Israel's nature" and his cabinet will "take the proper position" at its regular Wednesday meeting.

A guerrilla communique said nearly half the victims were women and children and that more bodies were buried under rubble in the camps in northern and southern Lebanon.

Both the Israeli and guerrilla commands said the Palestinians retaliated by rocketing several Israeli settlements.

The Israelis said rockets fell in four border settlements, slightly injuring two men. A guerrilla communique reported that commandos fired rockets "at military installations in several Israeli settlements, scoring direct hits and inflicting heavy damage and casualties."

Israeli air raids in May 1974 had been the heaviest against Palestinian bases. They killed 48 persons and wounded 180 in the Nabatiya refugee camp several days after guerrillas killed 25 Israelis and wounded 74 in an attack on the town of Maalot.

Although the Israeli command gave no reason for Tuesday's raids, they followed an upsurge in guerrilla attacks on Israeli border settlements.

The Israeli communique said the targets were terrorist bases, including the headquarters of the Syrian-backed Saiqa guerrilla group.

Witnesses reported bombs and rockets blasted residential areas, a school and guerrilla military installations.

In Jerusalem, Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin's Labor government defeated a no-confidence motion made because of U.S. support for a U.N. Security Council resolution to include Palestinians in future peace efforts. The right-wing Likud bloc filed the motion, charging that Rabin's policy of trusting American diplomacy had failed. Parliament voted the move down 57-31

Rabin said Washington played into Soviet hands by backing the U.N. resolution that invites the Palestine Liberation Organization (PLO) to a January debate on the Mideast, but he added:

"I do not think the United States deviated from its policy" of refusing to recognize the PLO.

Rabin said Israel has "an explicit commitment" from Washington that it will not recognize the PLO "and Israel has the right to state its demands to the United States on such important matters."

Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko, at a Moscow dinner honoring the Kuwaiti foreign minister, rejected a U.S. proposal to convene an unofficial meeting of the recessed Geneva peace conference. Russia recently requested that the formal conference be reconvened, with the PLO participating.

Israel has declared that it would not attend any peace conference where the PLO is represented and the U.S. suggestion for an unofficial meeting with only the original participants would exclude the PLO.

Gromyko said, "An official conference or unofficial meeting does not remove the question of obligatory participation of representatives of the Palestine Liberation Organization."

In Washington, meanwhile, sources said a U.S.-Israeli rift has developed over a purported promise "in principle" by Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger to veto any Palestinian participation in Middle East talks before the Security Council

Kissinger is understood to have made the promise Friday to Simcha Dinitz, Israeli ambassador to the United States, with a qualification that any veto would have to be approved by the White House

Radio Israel reported a government committee had approved a plan to build four more settlements on the occupied Golan Heights in response to the pro-Syrian resolution. Israel already has 18 communities on the heights near the cease-fire line with Syria.

At the United Nations in New York, Israel said it was ready to negotiate for peace at any time but "only on the basis of recognition of Israel's sovereign rights." Ambassador Chaim Herzog added:

"We will not negotiate our own suicide."

Herzog claimed the PLO seeks to do away with Israel. He said if the Arabs are serious about peace negotiations, "let them stop this horrible stream of hate and invective that we hear day in and day out in this assembly and let them begin to behave like mature nations."

Exports May Rise

Tel Aviv (AP) — Israeli commerce officials believe exports to the United States will increase by at least 10% in 1976.

It seems the ship is plying its course in an ocean of cloud. But the ocean-going African Sun is shrouded in a cloud cover called "radiation fog" as she enters the Duluth, Minn., harbor from Lake Superior. The "fog" is caused by cold air over warmer water. The National Weather Service estimated the water temperature at 41 degrees with the air temperature at nearly zero.

Stilt Walker Totters To Win Toikey Trophy

New York (UPI) — Beth Kaplan of Brooklyn weaved her way past two demonstrations, three traffic lights and one astounded off-track betting parlor Tuesday to win the city's first and last annual stilt race across 42nd St.

"I won da toikey, I won da toikey," exclaimed Ms. Kaplan as she crossed the finish line a stilt ahead of six competitors.

Actually, her made-in-Korea turkey trophy looked more like an anemic pheasant, but who knows from pheasants on 42nd St.

Organizers of the stilt race, which was held to publicize the opening of the Town Mall shopping center at 42nd St. and Park Ave., said the presentation of the pheasant trophy was symbolic of nothing whatsoever.

The second-place finisher said Ms. Kaplan had cheated and vowed to lodge a complaint with the rules committee. The disgruntled loser gave his name as Joe Namath but, when pressed by hardboiled reporters, he admitted to "lying a lot."

Joe wore a hat like Errol Flynn used to wear in World War I dogfight movies "to cut down on wind resistance," he said. "My half-hour of hard training has gone for nought" because of Ms. Kaplan's chicanery.

A man in a red ski parka, who was badly in need of a shave, temporarily stole some of the attention from the grand opening with his soft shoe dance to the "Tea For Two" cha-cha that was played by a Dixieland band hired for the event.

The man gave his name as Ed Gibb, 46, and said he was a truckdriver from Kearney, N.J. Then he asked for a cigarette.

Managers of the mall said it was "the first all-weather, enclosed shopping complex to be built in the Big Apple."

And with 35 shops selling everything from horoscopes to monogrammed T-shirts, it looked just like a real suburban shopping mall. It even had Musak.

Moynihan Says Russia Colonizing

WASHINGTON (AP) — United Nations Ambassador Daniel P. Moynihan said Tuesday that Soviet military moves in Angola show that the Russians intend to colonize Africa.

The ambassador also accused the Soviets of playing a major part in the recent passage by the U.N. Assembly of a resolution declaring Zionism, a movement for a national Jewish homeland, to be a form of racism.

The plain-spoken Moynihan said he believes the Soviets backed the Zionism resolution to mask their own policies to Russian Jews.

He said that in Africa the Soviets have brought Cuban troops into Angola and have built military facilities on the northeast coast.

"It is fair to assume they mean to colonize Africa . . ," Moynihan said in a speech on detente at the fourth "Pacem In Terris" meeting. The meeting is sponsored by the Fund for Peace and the Center for the Study of Democratic Institutions.

An East African diplomat who asked not to be identified said Moynihan acts like an "untrained bull who has to fight all the time."

Algerian Ambassador Abdellatiff Rahal said he wonders why the U.S. envoy "has to put everything in such a brutal way."

U.S. sources said Moynihan had cleared at least the general outline of his speech with the State Department.

Moynihan said that in the post-Vietnam era, the United States finds it difficult to react to Soviet moves around the world, while the Russians have no reluctance to exploit unrest in such countries as Angola.

"It is fairly clear that ideological conflict has been stepped up on their side," he said, "or at very least expanded to new areas."

For example, in Angola, Moynihan said, "the Soviets in effect have landed Cuban troops . . . on the southwest coast of Africa, even as they are consolidating military facilities on the northeast coast of that continent."

Only complaints from the United States and opposition from Communist China have blocked the Soviets from doing more in Angola and the rest of Africa, Moynihan said.

The ambassador said he was uncertain how many Russians are actually in Angola but said there was at least a brigade of Cuban soldiers.

The civil war began when various tribal groups struggled for control as Portugese rule was coming to an end last month. The Soviets have backed the Popular Movement for the Liberation of Angola.

Moynihan said that just as the last vestige of European colonialism seems about to end in Africa, "another bunch of blue-eyed people show up with battleships, guns and land their troops."

In the United Nations, Moynihan said, a Soviet bloc country, the Ukraine, was among the supporters of the anti-Zionism resolution, "which directly served an announced Soviet cause."

Moynihan asked, "This was seen as an Arab initiative, but was it?"

As long ago as 1971, Moynihan said, Pravda published an accusation against Jews, likening Zionism to the racism of Adolf Hitler in Germany before World War II.

He cited a Russian television documentary in which former Israeli Prime Minister David Ben Gurion's face was superimposed on a picture of Hitler.

Within two days of the United Nations resolution, Moynihan said, a Tass correspondent described Zionism as "racism pure and simple . . . "

"This was all one campaign," Moynihan said, "serving the Soviet need to deal with what is one day going to be its central political problem — or may already be — that of ethnic conflict, and also serving its general aims in the Middle East."

Wurf Accuses Officials Of Liking Public Strikes

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (AP) — The head of a huge union of government employes accused some city executives during a mayor's meeting Tuesday of actually favoring public employe strikes as a way to make the officials look good.

At a news conference called during the National League of Cities convention here, Jerry Wurf, president of the American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employes, said his union, the nation's second largest union of government employes with 700,000 members, doesn't like strikes and would prefer compulsory arbitration instead.

"But every organization of public employers is opposed to compulsory arbitration," he said.

"A lot of public officials love strikes." he said " They look like heroes, have a great way to save money, and get an excuse not to deliver services."

Referring to San Francisco, he said, "I think the police and fire strike there was unnecessary, but where was the head of their board of supervisors, Diane Feinstein, when the state legislature was considering compulsory arbitration for public safety workers?"

Mrs. Feinstein replied in an interview later that she and the rest of San Francisco's supervisors opposed compulsory arbitration, "because it involves a loss of our legislative right to set salaries and tax levels." She noted that San Francisco voters last month rejected 4-1 a policy statement on the ballot favoring compulsory arbitration.

Wurf directed even more scorn toward Mayor Charles Wheeler of Kansas City, which went through a fireman's strike earlier this year. At one point, Wurf said, "every public official who has a strike starts running for vice president."

Wheeler announced his candidacy for the Democratic vice-presidential nomination shortly after the firemen's strike. He has secured preliminary approval by a committee at the league convention for a proposal that "city officials explore the possibility of entering into formal or informal agreements for mutual assistance with other communities for the provision of essential services during public employe strikes."

Wheeler's proposal was approved by another league committee Tuesday but must still be voted on by the nearly 3,000 convention delegates at their final meeting Thursday.

Wurf expressed outrage at "this strange mayor of Kansas City who sees himself as a new Calvin Coolidge and is trying to set up a strike force of scabs to travel around the country." As governor of Massachusetts in 1919, Coolidge gained national attention by calling in the state militia to replace striking Boston police.

Lisbon Area Siege Lifted

Lisbon — President Francisco da Costa Gomes of Portugal lifted the state of siege in the Lisbon military region after the smashing of an attempted leftist coup. Information made public showed last week's paratroop revolt was part of a bigger plan to overthrow the government, organized chiefly by pro-Communist officers of the army's propaganda branch, according to intelligence sources. Among the reasons it failed, according to sources close to the government, was the last-minute decision of the Communist Party to stand aside.

Diet May Cause Cancer

New York — Cancer experts are finding more evidence that ingredients in daily diet may be the direct or indirect cause of half the cancers among women and 30% of those among men. A newly published report suggests that nutritional factors including high intake of fats and alcohol, deficiencies in Vitamins A and C, and certain additives and contaminants, both natural and man-made, are related to the development of cancer of the colon, stomach, esophagus, breast, liver and uterus. This has spurred a new research program by the National Cancer Institute on links between diet and cancer, a long-neglected aspect of the study of the cause of cancer.

D.C. Vote Plan Advances

WASHINGTON (AP) — A proposed constitutional amendment that would give District of Columbia voters the right to elect senators and congressmen was approved Tuesday by the House Judiciary Committee.

Registered voters in the nation's capital city now do not have any voting representation in Congress.

The District of Columbia representation amendment was introduced by the district's non-voting delegate Walter E. Fauntroy and was passed 20 to 13.

The amendment would allow district voters to elect two senators and as many representatives in Congress as it would be entitled to if it were a state. Under those terms Washington would be entitled to two congressmen.

A constitutional amendment requires two-thirds approval of both the House and Senate. It also must be ratified by three-fourths of the state legislatures within seven years from passage by Congress.

Judiciary Chairman Peter W. Rodino Jr., D-N.J., said he has discussed the proposed amendment with House Speaker Carl Albert and has Albert's assurance that full consideration would be expedited early next year.

U.S. Mail Ban Applies To Sawed-Off Shotguns

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court ruled Tuesday that it is against federal law to send a sawed-off shotgun through the mail.

In a 7-1 decision, the court rejected an argument that such a weapon is not a "firearm capable of being concealed on the person."

The court also turned aside, this time unanimously, a contention that the ban on weapons "capable of being concealed on the person" is unconstitutionally vague.

The U.S. circuit court in San Francisco had reversed the conviction on grounds that the law did not spell out clearly enough what weapons could not be mailed.

In the Supreme Court, Mrs. Powell repeated this argument and also maintained that even if the law were upheld the prohibition should be limited to pistols and revolvers.

Speaking through Justice William H. Rehnquist, the court said the law was intended to "avoid having the Post Office serve as an instrumentality for the violation of local laws which prohibited the purchase and possession of weapons."

"It would seem that sawed-off shotguns would be even more likely to be prohibited by local laws than would pistols and revolvers," Rehnquist wrote.

Turning to the constitutional issue, the court said the law "intelligibly forbids a definite course of conduct: the mailing of concealable firearms."

Justice Potter Stewart agreed with this part of the decision but said the history of the legislation "contains persuasive indications that it was not intended to apply to firearms larger than the largest pistols or revolvers."

Heston Dies On Screen But Not At Box Office

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — "I've had more deaths in movies than early Bogart. Maybe that's one reason people come to see my pictures."

Charlton Heston was musing on the set of his 48th film, a western for 20th Century-Fox called "The Last Hard Man." He is a thoughtful man, given to detailed analyses tinged with irony. It may be true that he has died in more major films than any other star, but not at the box office.

The Heston record is unparalleled. His press aide has proffered the thesis that Heston's films have attracted a billion dollars through the world's theaters. The actor himself neither affirms nor denies, but he can rattle off the rentals on his major films:

"Earthquake," $125 million; "The 10 Commandments," $100 million; "Ben-Hur," $80 million; "Airport 1975," $75 million; "El Cid," $36 million; "Planet of the Apes," $27 million; "The Greatest Show on Earth," $25 million; "The Three Musketeers," $10 million; "The Four Musketeers," $10 million.

Percentage Of Profits

The figures come from first-hand knowledge. He receives periodic reports on the films he has made in recent years, since he enjoys a percentage of the profits of all of them.

"The Last Hard Man" is Heston's first western since the estimable "Will Penny" in 1968. "I think it's time for me to do another western," he observed. "I try to get a good mixture of the kinds of films I do, and also balance my time so I can do stage work, like the 'Macbeth' I did earlier this year."

Heston needn't wait for film companies to offer him epics. He and producer Walter Seltzer have been partners in seven films, usually the offbeat kind that Heston would not be offered by the major studios — "Number One," "The Omega Man," "Skyjacked," "Soylent Green."

Seltzer also believes that the time is ripe for a return to westerns: "They've been neglected for a while, and there are no westerns on prime time television now. Foreign audiences still love westerns, and they can draw big money from American TV. For instance, the $3 million paid out for 'Rooster Cogburn' — a deal happily made before the reviews came out."

Directing "The Last Hard Man" is Andrew McLaglen, a western specialist who has worked with John Wayne ("McClintock," "Chisum" "Cahill"), James Stewart ("The Rare Breed") and Kirk Douglas ("The Way West"). How can McLaglen breathe new life into the western form?

"It's not easy," admits the outsized son of the late Victor McLaglen. "About all you can do is bring some new twists to the old formulas and change the period. This one is laid in 1910, when the horse was beginning to be challenged by the motor car."

McLaglen was directing a scene one warm November day at Old Tucson Studios, a conglomeration of movie sets that has seen a parade of western makers pass through for 35 years. Tourists lined the corral to watch a saddle-weary Charlton Heston arrive at a trading post with his posse, including Michael Parks and Chris Mitchum.

Heston is described as "a contained but iron-nerved lawman on the Arizona frontier, pulled out of retirement by the escape from prison of an implacable enemy." Sound familiar? Perhaps. But come hell or high noon, Messrs. Heston, Seltzer, McLaglen, James Coburn (the implacable enemy), et al, hope to make "The Last Hard Man" something different.

After the morning's work, Heston and company retired to Old Tucson's cantina, which is decorated with posters of the scores of westerns that have been filmed on the premises. Over a chunk of roast beef, Charlton Heston, 51, reflected on his career.

"Fortunately for my survival, producers can't make an international picture without an American star," he remarked. Credibility also plays a role, he added.

"'Airport 1975' was a simple job, requiring two weeks' work. My contribution was both physical and chemical: the audience had to be prepared to believe that I could fly a 747. That's all. There was a lot of carping about Dean Martin's believability as an airline pilot in the first 'Airport.'"

Crime And The Common Cold

The inquiries are coming so thick and fast that there is good reason today to wonder just who isn't being investigated.

In the main, these investigations are healthy things. For too long people were in the dark about the activities of agencies which used their constitutional or statutory authority for political and self-perpetuating ends and politicians who used supposed mandates from the electorate to abuse power. The illegal acts many committed are now being exposed. The knowledge of what went on in government for years is shocking to many innocents. With the knowledge of past activities the public now expects that the super-secret agencies will devote their resources and talents to the purposes for which they were created and that they will leave politics, foreign or domestic, to the politicians.

The FBI and the CIA are not the only targets of question-happy congressional investigators. Joining the agents in the witness chair have been oil company presidents, federal tax collectors, bank presidents (the activities of bank holding companies are now a big issue) and so on.

It has almost come to the point that if you haven't been investigated, you apparently haven't amounted to much.

Again, however, we believe these investigations are healthy. The problem seems to be that they are not being carried far enough, or, more precisely, in all the right directions.

Sen. Robert Griffin, the Michigan Republican, says he has run up against a political brick wall in his efforts to get the Senate to investigate organized crime infiltration of business and labor. Griffin says that so far only five senators have offered to cosponsor a resolution under which a special committee would specifically look into the affairs of the Teamsters Union and the disappearance of former Teamsters leader James Hoffa.

Well, now you're talking about the big leagues. The FBI, CIA, IRS, Shell, Mobil and just about everybody else are pushovers when it comes to digging into their activities. The hoods who have invaded politically powerful big labor and business are something else again, it appears.

We've never done well against organized crime.

Americans have during this century defeated the combined might of the Axis powers, conquered space, invented a most revolutionary machine, the computer, created economic miracles the world over and are waging a relentless, and probably winning, war against heart disease and cancer.

But we can't lick the mafia or the common cold.

People can live with the common cold.

And, apparently, politicians can live with the criminal influence in business and the labor movement.

Enter 'Big Gold'

Omaha's Big Green lottery has come up with another gimmick in the attempt to keep it going. Now there is "Big Gold," which will operate concurrently with Big Green, and awards prizes up to $50,000 if players manage to collect lottery tickets representing each of the Big Eight football teams and are subsequently lucky in a special drawing.

Big Gold offers big prizes — and not only in cash. According to wire reports, winners of the new Omaha lottery game may also win season tickets to Nebraska football games.

The feelings of this newspaper concerning the lottery approach to "civic betterment" and the indications from those in Omaha who run Big Green that they will seek to export the downtown bailout scheme elsewhere in the state have been stated before.

There is a new, if trifling, dimension now, however.

And even if it is within legal and policy bounds, other questions persist: where do the season tickets come from? And what if other communities take advantage of the state lottery law to establish a game and want to use NU tickets to perk up their sales?

The last we knew, there were still quite a few folks on the season ticket waiting list.

Law One-Sided

Lincoln, Neb.

The Archie Bunker show the other evening pretty well symbolized the comparative position of law-breaker and the average citizen. Archie was brought into court on a technicality for protecting himself from a mugger who had gone free.

We're too lenient with criminals in this country. The law goes out of its way to protect "their" rights. How about the rights of the big majority, the rest of us who try to live right, with no thoughts of harm toward our fellow men?

A Most Modest Man

Lincoln, Neb.

Democratic candidate Morris K. Udall is a very modest man. Not once does he mention that he is the author of the Federal Land Use Bill.

He also believes the federal government should move fast toward national health insurance and a federal take-over of the welfare system.

The land, the health, the welfare. What else is there? Oh, yes — there is one more thing. We would be living in the Federal States of America.

The Way Ernie Bets

Lincoln, Neb.

Ernie Chambers seems to be perpetually unhappy. Now it's about Big Red. I think I have the answer, at least in one category.

Since Ernie doesn't like Big Red, he can get back at 'em by betting against 'em, and make a pile of money at the same time.

Certainly he knows the Omaha bookies. Most of us do, even though we are not state senators. And think what that money Ernie wins betting against the Cornhuskers will do for him: provide a great bank account to finance his next campaign for governor.

Mortgage your barbershop and your house and lot and put the pile on Arizona State, no matter what the points. Go get 'em, Ernie!

A Welcome For Mr. Zorinsky

Blair, Neb.

I must categorically disagree with the position as taken by the Lancaster County chairperson of the Democratic Party and the others who are openly supporting her, in the matter of the letter addressed to Omaha's Mayor Zorinsky; I would hope that a majority of Nebraska Democrats will agree with me.

The good lady from Lincoln is enunciating party political snobbery of the worst kind and I would hope that senatorial candidate Hess Dyas would publicly disavow the action in question.

I have been around a lot longer attempting to fight the good fight in the Nebraska Democratic Party, longer than most of the Democratic chairmen who signed the Zorinsky letter.

The kind of person who takes such a position is often the same kind who reserve the right and privilege NOT to vote for or support George Wallace were he to become the Democrat selected to be our choice for president.

I welcome Mr. Zorinsky into our party. I intend to vote for him, come primary time, if I decide that he will have the best chance of defeating the Republican candidate for Senate. He has proven to be a good middle-of-the-road, dedicated public servant, and he has said he is now a Democrat. This is good enough for me.

A Time To Pause And Wonder

CHICAGO — The man didn't even ask it as a question. It was as if he was just thinking out loud.

While he glanced through his newspaper he said: "I wonder if the FBI had King killed. Or if they just covered up for the people who hired Ray to do it."

I heard a lot of talk like that during the late 1960's. But usually from young white radicals or black militants.

This time, though, it came from a middle-aged man with middle-of-the-road political beliefs, a short haircut, a mortgaged house, mid-sized car, 9-to-5 job and a couple of kids in college.

If somebody else had suggested anything like an FBI plot to him six or seven years ago, he would have said: "You are paranoid."

But now this very straight person was wondering if an American Nobel Peace Prize recipient had been bumped off by the nation's most respected police agency. And he almost took it for granted that if they didn't do it, they covered up some kind of conspiracy by others who had it done.

A few years ago, my answer would have been something like: "Don't be ridiculous." But now all I could say was, "I don't know."

Plots that used to be found only in paperback fiction are now turning into somber reports out of Capitol Hill, so what's unbelievable?

How about Sam Giancana, one of Al Capone's professional heirs, plotting international murders with the CIA? The average citizen, if called in for a tax audit, is treated like an embezzler. But the CIA did personal favors for Sam, the Psychopath.

Or White House aides trying to think of ways they could get Jack Anderson doped up in public, or maybe lured into bed with some guy named Bruce.

So who is to say that somebody is nuts for wondering whether J. Edgar Hoover would stoop as low as to have Martin Luther King knocked off?

It is now clear that Hoover, the sainted cop, was even more unbalanced, vicious and dangerous than his few detractors used to claim.

In the past, we were given small glimpses of the real Hoover personality by disenchanted ex-FBI agents who wrote an occasional book about their experiences.

They described Hoover's bloated ego, racism, narrow moral standards and petty hatreds.

But these personality flaws were usually dismissed as eccentricity. After all, he got John Dillinger, didn't he?

There was also the talk about Hoover's use of embarrassing files to blackmail political figures into letting him retain his powerful job.

But blackmail is hard to document. It would be a brave senator who would call a press conference to accuse Hoover of having candid shots of him frolicking in the Sneakaway Motel.

Now we find that the occasional glimpses of the real Hoover weren't real, after all. He was even worse.

You've got to be a real hater to suggest to a man — as the FBI did to King — that he kill himself or face public disgrace.

And you've got to be a real creep to do it through an anonymous poison-pen letter. The writers of such letters rank right up there on the sick-scale with the anonymous telephone-breather.

Don't bother to tell me that the writing of such letters is a long way from an actual act of violence. You just try signing your name to a letter that tells a political figure to kill himself or face the consequences. The FBI will have you in front of a federal judge in the time it takes to say: "Ha, ha, I was kidding." They believe people who make such threats are potentially dangerous. Who am I to argue with them?

And when a person who is warped enough to do such things also has vast police powers, just how potentially dangerous is he?

Think about that the next time the movie "Z" is on television. And keep reminding yourself, as you watch it, that it is not a Washington documentary. It is hard to tell the difference.

RALPH DE TOLEDANO

Politics, An Unfathomable Game

WASHINGTON — The brusque firing of Defense Secretary James Schlesinger by President Ford — a result of Secretary of State Henry Kissinger's Byzantine efforts — has served one good purpose.

For a brief period, it has lifted the curtain on what has been going on at the White House, the Pentagon, and the State Department. The view has been a frightening one.

Official Washington and the media now know — though what efforts they will make to alert the country is another matter — that the battles between Secretaries Kissinger and Schlesinger were not over the size of the defense budget but over the survival of the United States.

At issue was Schlesinger's insistence on laying before the President evidence that the Soviet Union is systematically violating the SALT agreements. It was Schlesinger's position that the Kremlin be forcefully charged with these violations along with a demand that they cease.

That those violations were of major importance goes to the heart of the matter. The Soviets have secretly built several hundred ICBM silos, all of them detected by our satellites. The Soviets are also systematically cheating on other provisions of the SALT agreements.

Among other things, they have built up an anti-ballistic missile system after having agreed not to do so if the United States would desist.

I say that it was Kissinger's contention that the facts of massive Soviet cheating and nuclear build-up should not be presented to the President, the Congress, or the people. He further argued that we should not challenge the Kremlin on these gross violations because it would make further negotiations difficult and because the Soviet leadership did not know about them. (Do I hear laughter?)

It was Schlesinger's contention that to ignore Soviet cheating made further negotiations with them meaningless and dangerous to American security. To remain silent would also be dishonest to the Congress and to Americans who had been assured by Kissinger at the time of SALT I that we were taking no risks since we could detect any violations and would denounce them immediately and energetically.

That the Soviets have violated every treaty and agreement to which they have put their name is, of course, unimportant to Kissinger. The only thing that matters to him is detente, even if the Kremlin uses it as a screen behind which to build a first-strike nuclear capability which will leave the United States at its mercy.

JAMES SCHLESINGER
. . . wanted SALT agreement violations aired . . .

It was this debate between the secretary of state and the secretary of defense which created the "growing tension" about which President Ford has belatedly complained, and which deprived him of a "comfortable feeling."

It would seem to me that Mr. Ford should have resolved the conflict within the Cabinet by firing Kissinger out of hand for attempting to deceive him and for putting his passion for detente above the safety of the nation. Instead, he fired Secretary Schlesinger!

Under other circumstances, Congress would be up in arms and demanding a full investigation. Congress, however, does not like Schlesinger's "outspokenness." And though it harbors little love for Kissinger, the Democratic leadership shares his head-in-the-sand approach to the Soviets. Like the three little monkeys, It is determined to see no evil, hear no evil and speak no evil of our Communist enemy.

Mr. Ford will have his "comfort." The Soviets will not be told that the United States cannot tolerate cheating in this life-and-death matter. In due course, we will wake up to find a nuclear pistol at our heads. Such is politics in today's Washington.

The Nixon Plot To Get The Demos

WASHINGTON — In the early 1970's, district attorneys appointed by President Nixon began investigating Democratic governors across the country.

The governors are now convinced that Nixon used the federal law enforcement machinery to knock the Democrats out of power in as many states as possible.

Suddenly, Democratic chief executives in several states found themselves under searching federal scrutiny. Among them were Kentucky's Wendell Ford, Louisiana's Edwin Edwards, Maryland's Marvin Mandel, Oklahoma's David Hall and Pennsylvania's Milton Shapp.

Hall was convicted, although the FBI transcripts used in his trial had been altered. A former Democratic governor, Illinois' Otto Kerner, was also convicted. And only last week, Mandel was indicted.

In contrast, only one Republican governor, West Virginia's Arch Moore, got into trouble with the Justice Department. Tax agents had found that, as a congressman, he had lived like a millionaire during the 1962-67 period. He bought a home in the fashionable Potomac hunt country of Maryland where he kept horses and threw lavish parties. Yet he reported only $45,000 in taxable income during the entire five years.

The Internal Revenue Service recommended that Moore be prosecuted for his alleged failure to pay $168,000 in taxes. But the Justice Department, which was so eager to prosecute Democrats, let Moore off the hook.

Now Moore is facing new charges of accepting illegal campaign contributions. He slipped around to see the friendly Republicans at the Justice Department last October. Once again, he has managed to escape indictment, although a Justice Department spokesman insists the case against him hasn't been closed.

. . . the only Republican to run into trouble . . .

Several Democratic governors got together, meanwhile, at their 1973 governors' conference to discuss the Nixon plot against them. Shapp complained Richard Thornberg, then the U.S. attorney in Philadelphia, not only had started an investigation of him but had leaked grand jury findings to Republicans in the Pennsylvania legislature.

Thornberg subsequently was appointed assistant attorney general in charge of the criminal division, with authority over all the investigations.

In November, Mandel fired off a confidential, 19-page letter to Thornberg, charging that he had been the victim of a political witch hunt.

He charged, for example, that the late FBI chief J. Edgar Hoover had delivered a file full of reports about his sex life to then Atty. Gen. John Mitchell.

Mandel also charged that "in 1970 and 1971, I was the subject of an investigation by the intelligence division of the Internal Revenue Service. I am also informed that, in order to avoid notifying me of this investigation, and to permit it to proceed clandestinely, the file was not opened in my name, but, instead in the former name of my present wife, Jeanne Dorsey."

Footnote: Thornberg told our associate Jack Cloherty that he had been cleared by a Justice Department investigation of leaking grand jury information against Shapp. Thornberg also insisted he had received no pressure from Washington to start the Shapp investigation.

The White House grounds have been rigged up with elaborate electronic equipment to thwart any would-be assassins. Secreted in the landscape are pressure sensors, sound sensors, infra-red cameras and other technological marvels, which were tested in the Vietnam war zones. Similar gadgets have been scattered around the grounds of ex-President Richard Nixon's San Clemente, Calif., haven . . .

For the average taxpayer, a long-distance call to a friend or relative is an occasional luxury. But for members of Congress, newly blessed with a pay hike and loaded with fringe benefits, long-distance calls are free. Congressional offices not only are allotted free calls during office hours but also get completely free, coast-to-coast service after hours. It's supposed to be used strictly for official business. But our own spot checks with trusted sources show that most of the after-hour calls are personal . . .

We recently reported charges, made by an FBI informant named Earl Robert Merritt, Jr. that he had committed thefts on behalf of the FBI. We were unable to get a comment from the FBI at the time. Now the FBI has responded and we are happy to publish it. "These allegations," declares the FBI, "are fabricated and completely false . . . Merritt was specifically advised on several occasions that he was not to engage in any illegal activities in his efforts to obtain information . . The FBI categorically denies that the activities of the agents in contact with Merritt were at any time improper" . . .

Air Force investigators have recommended that Sgt. Richard W. Hicks be discharged because he is a homosexual. His picture, showing him dancing with a homosexual, appeared in Newsweek magazine. Crime And The Common Cold

The inquiries are coming so thick and fast that there is good reason today to wonder just who isn't being investigated.

In the main, these investigations are healthy things. For too long people were in the dark about the activities of agencies which used their constitutional or statutory authority for political and self-perpetuating ends and politicians who used supposed mandates from the electorate to abuse power. The illegal acts many committed are now being exposed. The knowledge of what went on in government for years is shocking to many innocents. With the knowledge of past activities the public now expects that the super-secret agencies will devote their resources and talents to the purposes for which they were created and that they will leave politics, foreign or domestic, to the politicians.

The FBI and the CIA are not the only targets of question-happy congressional investigators. Joining the agents in the witness chair have been oil company presidents, federal tax collectors, bank presidents (the activities of bank holding companies are now a big issue) and so on.

It has almost come to the point that if you haven't been investigated, you apparently haven't amounted to much.

Again, however, we believe these investigations are healthy. The problem seems to be that they are not being carried far enough, or, more precisely, in all the right directions.

Sen. Robert Griffin, the Michigan Republican, says he has run up against a political brick wall in his efforts to get the Senate to investigate organized crime infiltration of business and labor. Griffin says that so far only five senators have offered to cosponsor a resolution under which a special committee would specifically look into the affairs of the Teamsters Union and the disappearance of former Teamsters leader James Hoffa.

Well, now you're talking about the big leagues. The FBI, CIA, IRS, Shell, Mobil and just about everybody else are pushovers when it comes to digging into their activities. The hoods who have invaded politically powerful big labor and business are something else again, it appears.

We've never done well against organized crime.

Americans have during this century defeated the combined might of the Axis powers, conquered space, invented a most revolutionary machine, the computer, created economic miracles the world over and are waging a relentless, and probably winning, war against heart disease and cancer.

But we can't lick the mafia or the common cold.

People can live with the common cold.

And, apparently, politicians can live with the criminal influence in business and the labor movement.

Enter 'Big Gold'

Omaha's Big Green lottery has come up with another gimmick in the attempt to keep it going. Now there is "Big Gold," which will operate concurrently with Big Green, and awards prizes up to $50,000 if players manage to collect lottery tickets representing each of the Big Eight football teams and are subsequently lucky in a special drawing.

Big Gold offers big prizes — and not only in cash. According to wire reports, winners of the new Omaha lottery game may also win season tickets to Nebraska football games.

The feelings of this newspaper concerning the lottery approach to "civic betterment" and the indications from those in Omaha who run Big Green that they will seek to export the downtown bailout scheme elsewhere in the state have been stated before.

There is a new, if trifling, dimension now, however.

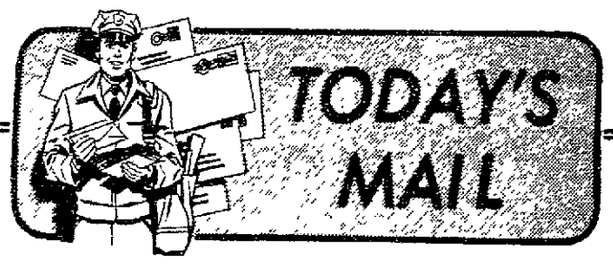
And even if it is within legal and policy bounds, other questions persist: where do the season tickets come from? And what if other communities take advantage of the state lottery law to establish a game and want to use NU tickets to perk up their sales?

The last we knew, there were still quite a few folks on the season ticket waiting list.



Law One-Sided

Lincoln, Neb.

The Archie Bunker show the other evening pretty well symbolized the comparative position of law-breaker and the average citizen. Archie was brought into court on a technicality for protecting himself from a mugger who had gone free.

We're too lenient with criminals in this country. The law goes out of its way to protect "their" rights. How about the rights of the big majority, the rest of us who try to live right, with no thoughts of harm toward our fellow men?

A Most Modest Man

Lincoln, Neb.

Democratic candidate Morris K. Udall is a very modest man. Not once does he mention that he is the author of the Federal Land Use Bill.

He also believes the federal government should move fast toward national health insurance and a federal take-over of the welfare system.

The land, the health, the welfare. What else is there? Oh, yes — there is one more thing. We would be living in the Federal States of America.

The Way Ernie Bets

Lincoln, Neb.

Ernie Chambers seems to be perpetually unhappy. Now it's about Big Red. I think I have the answer, at least in one category.

Since Ernie doesn't like Big Red, he can get back at 'em by betting against 'em, and make a pile of money at the same time.

Certainly he knows the Omaha bookies. Most of us do, even though we are not state senators. And think what that money Ernie wins betting against the Cornhuskers will do for him: provide a great bank account to finance his next campaign for governor.

Mortgage your barbershop and your house and lot and put the pile on Arizona State, no matter what the points. Go get 'em, Ernie!

A Welcome For Mr. Zorinsky

Blair, Neb.

I must categorically disagree with the position as taken by the Lancaster County chairperson of the Democratic Party and the others who are openly supporting her, in the matter of the letter addressed to Omaha's Mayor Zorinsky; I would hope that a majority of Nebraska Democrats will agree with me.

The good lady from Lincoln is enunciating party political snobbery of the worst kind and I would hope that senatorial candidate Hess Dyas would publicly disavow the action in question.

I have been around a lot longer attempting to fight the good fight in the Nebraska Democratic Party, longer than most of the Democratic chairmen who signed the Zorinsky letter.

The kind of person who takes such a position is often the same kind who reserve the right and privilege NOT to vote for or support George Wallace were he to become the Democrat selected to be our choice for president.

I welcome Mr. Zorinsky into our party. I intend to vote for him, come primary time, if I decide that he will have the best chance of defeating the Republican candidate for Senate. He has proven to be a good middle-of-the-road, dedicated public servant, and he has said he is now a Democrat. This is good enough for me.

A Time To Pause And Wonder

CHICAGO — The man didn't even ask it as a question. It was as if he was just thinking out loud.

While he glanced through his newspaper he said: "I wonder if the FBI had King killed. Or if they just covered up for the people who hired Ray to do it."

I heard a lot of talk like that during the late 1960's. But usually from young white radicals or black militants.

This time, though, it came from a middle-aged man with middle-of-the-road political beliefs, a short haircut, a mortgaged house, mid-sized car, 9-to-5 job and a couple of kids in college.

If somebody else had suggested anything like an FBI plot to him six or seven years ago, he would have said: "You are paranoid."

But now this very straight person was wondering if an American Nobel Peace Prize recipient had been bumped off by the nation's most respected police agency. And he almost took it for granted that if they didn't do it, they covered up some kind of conspiracy by others who had it done.

A few years ago, my answer would have been something like: "Don't be ridiculous." But now all I could say was, "I don't know."

Plots that used to be found only in paperback fiction are now turning into somber reports out of Capitol Hill, so what's unbelievable?

How about Sam Giancana, one of Al Capone's professional heirs, plotting international murders with the CIA? The average citizen, if called in for a tax audit, is treated like an embezzler. But the CIA did personal favors for Sam, the Psychopath.

Or White House aides trying to think of ways they could get Jack Anderson doped up in public, or maybe lured into bed with some guy named Bruce.

So who is to say that somebody is nuts for wondering whether J. Edgar Hoover would stoop as low as to have Martin Luther King knocked off?

It is now clear that Hoover, the sainted cop, was even more unbalanced, vicious and dangerous than his few detractors used to claim.

In the past, we were given small glimpses of the real Hoover personality by disenchanted ex-FBI agents who wrote an occasional book about their experiences.

They described Hoover's bloated ego, racism, narrow moral standards and petty hatreds.

But these personality flaws were usually dismissed as eccentricity. After all, he got John Dillinger, didn't he?

There was also the talk about Hoover's use of embarrassing files to blackmail political figures into letting him retain his powerful job.

But blackmail is hard to document. It would be a brave senator who would call a press conference to accuse Hoover of having candid shots of him frolicking in the Sneakaway Motel.

Now we find that the occasional glimpses of the real Hoover weren't real, after all. He was even worse.

You've got to be a real hater to suggest to a man — as the FBI did to King — that he kill himself or face public disgrace.

And you've got to be a real creep to do it through an anonymous poison-pen letter. The writers of such letters rank right up there on the sick-scale with the anonymous telephone-breather.

Don't bother to tell me that the writing of such letters is a long way from an actual act of violence. You just try signing your name to a letter that tells a political figure to kill himself or face the consequences. The FBI will have you in front of a federal judge in the time it takes to say: "Ha, ha, I was kidding." They believe people who make such threats are potentially dangerous. Who am I to argue with them?

And when a person who is warped enough to do such things also has vast police powers, just how potentially dangerous is he?

Think about that the next time the movie "Z" is on television. And keep reminding yourself, as you watch it, that it is not a Washington documentary. It is hard to tell the difference.

RALPH DE TOLEDANO

Politics, An Unfathomable Game

WASHINGTON — The brusque firing of Defense Secretary James Schlesinger by President Ford — a result of Secretary of State Henry Kissinger's Byzantine efforts — has served one good purpose.

For a brief period, it has lifted the curtain on what has been going on at the White House, the Pentagon, and the State Department. The view has been a frightening one.

Official Washington and the media now know — though what efforts they will make to alert the country is another matter — that the battles between Secretaries Kissinger and Schlesinger were not over the size of the defense budget but over the survival of the United States.

At issue was Schlesinger's insistence on laying before the President evidence that the Soviet Union is systematically violating the SALT agreements. It was Schlesinger's position that the Kremlin be forcefully charged with these violations along with a demand that they cease.

That those violations were of major importance goes to the heart of the matter. The Soviets have secretly built several hundred ICBM silos, all of them detected by our satellites. The Soviets are also systematically cheating on other provisions of the SALT agreements.

Among other things, they have built up an anti-ballistic missile system after having agreed not to do so if the United States would desist.

I say that it was Kissinger's contention that the facts of massive Soviet cheating and nuclear build-up should not be presented to the President, the Congress, or the people. He further argued that we should not challenge the Kremlin on these gross violations because it would make further negotiations difficult and because the Soviet leadership did not know about them. (Do I hear laughter?)

It was Schlesinger's contention that to ignore Soviet cheating made further negotiations with them meaningless and dangerous to American security. To remain silent would also be dishonest to the Congress and to Americans who had been assured by Kissinger at the time of SALT I that we were taking no risks since we could detect any violations and would denounce them immediately and energetically.

That the Soviets have violated every treaty and agreement to which they have put their name is, of course, unimportant to Kissinger. The only thing that matters to him is detente, even if the Kremlin uses it as a screen behind which to build a first-strike nuclear capability which will leave the United States at its mercy.

JAMES SCHLESINGER
. . . wanted SALT agreement violations aired . . .

It was this debate between the secretary of state and the secretary of defense which created the "growing tension" about which President Ford has belatedly complained, and which deprived him of a "comfortable feeling."

It would seem to me that Mr. Ford should have resolved the conflict within the Cabinet by firing Kissinger out of hand for attempting to deceive him and for putting his passion for detente above the safety of the nation. Instead, he fired Secretary Schlesinger!

Under other circumstances, Congress would be up in arms and demanding a full investigation. Congress, however, does not like Schlesinger's "outspokenness." And though it harbors little love for Kissinger, the Democratic leadership shares his head-in-the-sand approach to the Soviets. Like the three little monkeys, it is determined to see no evil, hear no evil and speak no evil of our Communist enemy.

Mr. Ford will have his "comfort." The Soviets will not be told that the United States cannot tolerate cheating in this life-and-death matter. In due course, we will wake up to find a nuclear pistol at our heads. Such is politics in today's Washington.

The Nixon Plot To Get The Demos

WASHINGTON — In the early 1970's, district attorneys appointed by President Nixon began investigating Democratic governors across the country.

The governors are now convinced that Nixon used the federal law enforcement machinery to knock the Democrats out of power in as many states as possible.

Suddenly, Democratic chief executives in several states found themselves under searching federal scrutiny. Among them were Kentucky's Wendell Ford, Louisiana's Edwin Edwards, Maryland's Marvin Mandel, Oklahoma's David Hall and Pennsylvania's Milton Shapp.

Hall was convicted, although the FBI transcripts used in his trial had been altered. A former Democratic governor, Illinois' Otto Kerner, was also convicted. And only last week, Mandel was indicted.

In contrast, only one Republican governor, West Virginia's Arch Moore, got into trouble with the Justice Department. Tax agents had found that, as a congressman, he had lived like a millionaire during the 1962-67 period. He bought a home in the fashionable Potomac hunt country of Maryland where he kept horses and threw lavish parties. Yet he reported only $45,000 in taxable income during the entire five years.

The Internal Revenue Service recommended that Moore be prosecuted for his alleged failure to pay $168,000 in taxes. But the Justice Department, which was so eager to prosecute Democrats, let Moore off the hook.

Now Moore is facing new charges of accepting illegal campaign contributions. He slipped around to see the friendly Republicans at the Justice Department last October. Once again, he has managed to escape indictment, although a Justice Department spokesman insists the case against him hasn't been closed.

. . . the only Republican to run into trouble . . .

Several Democratic governors got together, meanwhile, at their 1973 governors' conference to discuss the Nixon plot against them. Shapp complained Richard Thornberg, then the U.S. attorney in Philadelphia, not only had started an investigation of him but had leaked grand jury findings to Republicans in the Pennsylvania legislature.

Thornberg subsequently was appointed assistant attorney general in charge of the criminal division, with authority over all the investigations.

In November, Mandel fired off a confidential, 19-page letter to Thornberg, charging that he had been the victim of a political witch hunt.

He charged, for example, that the late FBI chief J. Edgar Hoover had delivered a file full of reports about his sex life to then Atty. Gen. John Mitchell.

Mandel also charged that "in 1970 and 1971, I was the subject of an investigation by the intelligence division of the Internal Revenue Service. I am also informed that, in order to avoid notifying me of this investigation, and to permit it to proceed clandestinely, the file was not opened in my name, but, instead in the former name of my present wife, Jeanne Dorsey."

Footnote: Thornberg told our associate Jack Cloherty that he had been cleared by a Justice Department investigation of leaking grand jury information against Shapp. Thornberg also insisted he had received no pressure from Washington to start the Shapp investigation.

For the average taxpayer, a long-distance call to a friend or relative is an occasional luxury. But for members of Congress, newly blessed with a pay hike and loaded with fringe benefits, long-distance calls are free. Congressional offices not only are allotted free calls during office hours but also get completely free, coast-to-coast service after hours. It's supposed to be used strictly for official business. But our own spot checks with trusted sources show that most of the after-hour calls are personal . . .

We recently reported charges, made by an FBI informant named Earl Robert Merritt, Jr. that he had committed thefts on behalf of the FBI. We were unable to get a comment from the FBI at the time. Now the FBI has responded and we are happy to publish it. "These allegations," declares the FBI, "are fabricated and completely false . . . Merritt was specifically advised on several occasions that he was not to engage in any illegal activities in his efforts to obtain information. The FBI categorically denies that the activities of the agents in contact with Merritt were at any time improper" . . .

Soviets Said Making 'Mockery' Of Arms Pacts

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's former top Navy officer said Tuesday there have been gross Soviet violations of nuclear arms agreements and that Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger has been less than candid in detailing them for President Ford.

As a result, former chief of naval operations Adm. Elmo R. Zumwalt said, neither Congress nor the public is aware of the "grotesque mockery" the Soviets have made of the agreements.

In testimony before the House Select Committee on Intelligence, Zumwalt said that "the President has not gone into the material in sufficient depth" to master all phases of the arms issue on his own.

And, Zumwalt said, "the secretary of state has not been candid with him in the gross nature of the cheating."

One panel member said Zumwalt seemed to be charging a conspiracy, but the admiral said he would not use that word. "The President has to go into more depth to understand," Zumwalt said.

At another point, Zumwalt said "the President of the United States is not aware of the extent of the information being withheld from him."

Asked how he knew this Zumwalt said it was mostly from his own analysis of President Ford's statements on arms agreements.

Zumwalt said he was told in June 1974 by former Defense Secretary James R. Schlesinger that Kissinger had instructed Schlesinger not to report evidence of violations directly to then President Richard M. Nixon.

The admiral said recent juggling of Cabinet and national security assignments by Ford had not diminished Kissinger's power.

Kissinger remains chief of the panel which monitors the arms agreements and this amounts to "the Yankees playing the Dodgers with a Yankee umpire," Zumwalt asserted.

Zumwalt said Kissinger has a personal and political interest in seeing that agreements which he helped to negotiate not be questioned.

Reps. Les Aspin, D-Wis., and James P. Johnson, R-Colo., continually pressed Zumwalt for details of what he claimed were the violations by the Soviets.

Rep. Dale Milford, D-Tex., said Zumwalt's criticism Tuesday and in preceding months seemed to coincide with his plans to run for the U.S. Senate from Virginia.

Zumwalt replied that he had told the committee he did not want to testify.

Zumwalt said the Soviets had violated the actual arms agreement through testing and deploying radar which could be used to detect ballistic missile attacks.

In addition, he said, the Soviets were interfering with U.S. means of monitoring Soviet compliance with the accords. One method would be by radar.

Zumwalt said he would be more specific on three points in a closed session of the committee.

Zumwalt added that the Soviets had violated the 1972 arms agreement in five other areas, judging by language with which the accord was explained to Congress by the Nixon administration.

Man 'Plays That Tune' For 36 Hours On Organ

(c) Chicago Sun-Times

Chicago — Organist Al Butler may have set a world's record even though he failed to set the record he was shooting for.

Butler, 44, organist at a suburban roller rink, tried over the weekend to set a record for marathon organ playing.

The present record, according to the Guinness Book of Records, is 53 hours 2 minutes set by an Englishman in 1974.

But Butler had to give up after 36 hours of almost continuous playing in a music store when his left leg — used on the pedals — began to swell and his wife, Linda, became concerned for his health.

He took six 5-minute breaks in the first 12 hours and then 5 minutes every hour.

"Al plays by ear and he never repeated any tune during the 36 hours," said music shop owner Roy Nettgen.

"We figure he played at least 700 different tunes in a row, and that may be a record in itself."

Spanish Speed Up Sahara Withdrawal

©The New York Times

Madrid — Spain is reported to be accelerating its military withdrawal from the Sahara in an effort to avoid involvement in possible fighting between Moroccan troops and Algerian-backed forces.

The government announced Nov. 14 that it had agreed to abandon the Western Saharan area by the end of February in a deal with Morocco and Mauretania that would leave them with full administrative control. This would include the power to oversee some form of self-determination of the local population in accordance with principles upheld by the United Nations.

Reports in Madrid and in El Aaiun, capital of the Spanish Sahara, spoke of withdrawal of almost all Spanish forces by the end of this month together with administrative personnel. Moroccan forces have already taken over the town of Smara, considered a holy place to Moslems, and to be gradually establishing their hold over El Aaiun.

But Algeria, bitterly opposed to Moroccan expansion southward, has been threatening military action if the tripartite agreement went through. The Algerian anger against Spain has now taken toe former of threats of economic sanctions. Monday in Barcelona, an Algerian representative of the government-run oil and gas industry, Mamoud Nefhta, warned that Algeria might cut off natural gas supplies to Spain if withdrawal of Spanish forces from the Sahara left the local population exposed to "massacres" by Moroccan troops.

Algeria is Spain's biggest supplier and best customer in Africa. A third of Spain's sales to Africa and a third of its purchases are accounted for by Algeria. Virtually all of Spain's natural gas is from Algerian fields.

Business interests in Spain are sensitive to he dangers of an economic boycott by Algeria because of the Sahara problem. What is often referred to as the "Moroccan lobby," however, has won out for the moment.

In El Aauin, Spanish authorities appeared so little sure of the reactions of the population to the Moroccan takeover that the native quarters have been closed off by barbed wire and the police are checking entries and exits. Some of the male population is reported to have already left the town to join the forces of Polisario, the Algerian-backed liberation movement which is carrying out wide harassing action against the Moroccans in the northern part of the territory.

In Algiers, officials in interviews with Spanish correspondents are talking openly of a war if the wishes of the Saharan population, which is assumed by Algeria to be in favor of independence, are not respected.

Romulo Criticizes American Attitude

©The New York Times

Manila — Foreign Secretary Carlos P. Romulo of the Philippines, who is spearheading an effort to review the United Nations charter, said here Tuesday that Americans must realize "they can no longer run it (the world body) as they used to," nor can the United Nations run the United States.

Romulo issued a lengthy statement entitled "The U.N. As It Is Today" upon his arrival from New York where he attended General Assembly sessions as chief of the Philippine delegation. He also lobbied and won a consensus agreement, despite initial objections by the United States, for a continuation of the charter review by a committee.

"For a long time, the American people had a paternal, even proprietary attitude toward what they considered their baby. They believed sincerely that the U.N. should reflect their own views of freedom, democracy and the world order because those views were the right ones," said the veteran Filipino diplomat, who once served as president of the General Assembly.

"All that has changed," Romulo continued. "The emergence of numerous new nations, most of them poor, discontented and frustrated, and their realization of the plight to which they believed they had been brought by the old colonial regimes, has led to the creation of a new majority, this time hostile to the United States and its Western allies."

The foreign secretary said that what antagonizes Americans is "the way their own ideas of what is right, just and decent are criticized in the General Assembly debates." He added that it was good for Americans to be criticized as it will help them "to realize that other people have other ideals, believe in other socio-economic systems."

What exists in the U.N. now, he added, is "a confrontation between a majority that has the votes, and a minority that has the real power and wealth." He said a genuine consensus was needed.

Teens Would Call Taxi For Drunken Friends

Detroit (UPI) — A survey of the top teen-age drivers in America released Tuesday shows most would not report drinking and driving schoolmates to police or their parents.

Over half of the 51 teens surveyed admit they have been in cars with a driver who had consumed a considerable amount of alcohol, usually beer.

But most said they might choose the easy way out, taking a taxi or driving themselves, rather than the harsher alternatives of calling the driver's parents, taking the car keys away or physically restraining a drunk driver.

One teen said he hoped the problem would resolve itself by the drinking teen passing out before he could get behind the wheel of a car.

The teen drivers were surveyed by the Departmentof Transportation as they were taking part in the recent finale of "Operation Driver Excellence," co-sponsored by the Dodge Division of Chrysler Corp. and the American Veterans of World War II, Korea and Vietnam (AMVETS).

They ranged in age from 15 to 18 and all were winners of state competition before entering the national finals.

A majority of them said between 50 and 75% of their classmates drink and most said this occurred at least once a week. Fifteen said drunk driving was a major cause of fatal traffic accidents with another 15 claiming a major factor was lack of attention.

Most agreed that parents disapprove of teen drinking, but several said some parents don't care one way or the other.

"They disapprove of it, but do it themselves," one said. Another said, "They say, 'Oh well, at least it's not dope.'"

Faced with a situation where a friend is obviously too drunk to drive, the teens' top choices of action were to plan ahead so the driver won't drink too much, call a taxi, drive home yourself and call the person's parents.

This would include the power to oversee some form of self-determination of the local population in accordance with principles upheld by the United Nations.

Reports in Madrid and in El Aaiun, capital of the Spanish Sahara, spoke of withdrawal of almost all Spanish forces by the end of this month together with administrative personnel. Moroccan forces have already taken over the town of Smara, considered a holy place to Moslems, and to be gradually establishing their hold over El Aaiun.

But Algeria, bitterly opposed to Moroccan expansion southward, has been threatening military action if the tripartite agreement went through. The Algerian anger against Spain has now taken toe former of threats of economic sanctions. Monday in Barcelona, an Algerian representative of the government-run oil and gas industry, Mamoud Nefhta, warned that Algeria might cut off natural gas supplies to Spain if withdrawal of Spanish forces from the Sahara left the local population exposed to "massacres" by Moroccan troops.

Algeria is Spain's biggest supplier and best customer in Africa. A third of Spain's sales to Africa and a third of its purchases are accounted for by Algeria. Virtually all of Spain's natural gas is from Algerian fields.

Business interests in Spain are sensitive to he dangers of an economic boycott by Algeria because of the Sahara problem. What is often referred to as the "Moroccan lobby," however, has won out for the moment.

In El Aaiun, Spanish authorities appeared so little sure of the reactions of the population to the Moroccan takeover that the native quarters have been closed off by barbed wire and the police are checking entries and exits. Some of the male population is reported to have already left the town to join the forces of Polisario, the Algerian-backed liberation movement which is carrying out wide harassing action against the Moroccans in the northern part of the territory.

In Algiers, officials in interviews with Spanish correspondents are talking openly of a war if the wishes of the Saharan population, which is assumed by Algeria to be in favor of independence, are not respected.

Romulo Criticizes American Attitude

©The New York Times

Manila — Foreign Secretary Carlos P. Romulo of the Philippines, who is spearheading an effort to review the United Nations charter, said here Tuesday that Americans must realize "they can no longer run it (the world body) as they used to," nor can the United Nations run the United States.

Romulo issued a lengthy statement entitled "The U.N. As It Is Today" upon his arrival from New York where he attended General Assembly sessions as chief of the Philippine delegation. He also lobbied and won a consensus agreement, despite initial objections by the United States, for a continuation of the charter review by a committee.

"For a long time, the American people had a paternal, even proprietary attitude toward what they considered their baby. They believed sincerely that the U.N. should reflect their own views of freedom, democracy and the world order because those views were the right ones," said the veteran Filipino diplomat, who once served as president of the General Assembly.

"All that has changed," Romulo continued. "The emergence of numerous new nations, most of them poor, discontented and frustrated, and their realization of the plight to which they believed they had been brought by the old colonial regimes, has led to the creation of a new majority, this time hostile to the United States and its Western allies."

The foreign secretary said that what antagonizes Americans is "the way their own ideas of what is right, just and decent are criticized in the General Assembly debates." He added that it was good for Americans to be criticized as it will help them "to realize that other people have other ideals, believe in other socio-economic systems."

What exists in the U.N. now, he added, is "a confrontation between a majority that has the votes, and a minority that has the real power and wealth." He said a genuine consensus was needed.

Teens Would Call Taxi For Drunken Friends

Detroit (UPI) — A survey of the top teen-age drivers in America released Tuesday shows most would not report drinking and driving schoolmates to police or their parents.

Over half of the 51 teens surveyed admit they have been in cars with a driver who had consumed a considerable amount of alcohol, usually beer.

But most said they might choose the easy way out, taking a taxi or driving themselves, rather than the harsher alternatives of calling the driver's parents, taking the car keys away or physically restraining a drunk driver.

One teen said he hoped the problem would resolve itself by the drinking teen passing out before he could get behind the wheel of a car.

The teen drivers were surveyed by the Departmentof Transportation as they were taking part in the recent finale of "Operation Driver Excellence," co-sponsored by the Dodge Division of Chrysler Corp. and the American Veterans of World War II, Korea and Vietnam (AMVETS).

They ranged in age from 15 to 18 and all were winners of state competition before entering the national finals.

A majority of them said between 50 and 75% of their classmates drink and most said this occurred at least once a week. Fifteen said drunk driving was a major cause of fatal traffic accidents with another 15 claiming a major factor was lack of attention.

Most agreed that parents disapprove of teen drinking, but several said some parents don't care one way or the other.

They disapprove of it, but do it themselves," one said. Another said, "They say, 'Oh well, at least it's not dope.'"

Faced with a situation where a friend is obviously too drunk to drive, the teens' top choices of action were to plan ahead so the driver won't drink too much, call a taxi, drive home yourself and call the person's parents.

Euromart To Have Passport

ROME (AP) — Western European leaders ended their two-day summit meeting Tuesday night with accord on a joint Common Market passport and direct elections for a Europarliament in 1978.

They also agreed on a face-saving compromise after Britain dropped its demand to have its own voice separate from the Common Market in a major energy conference.

Informants said the compromise agreement came after Britain clashed with its eight trading partners in the last day of the summit.

The highly placed sources said the plan would allow Britain an individual voice in certain sessions of the energy conference in Psaris but that Britain would have to toe the Common Market line at other times in the meeting.

Hard bargaining on the issue was interspersed by clashes between British Prime Minister Harold Wlson and West German Chancellor Helmut Schmidt, speaking for the eight, delegation sources said.

Pressing Britain's demand for its own seat at the energy conference between the West and the Third World scheduled for Dec. 16, Wilson said North Sea oil could make Britain a member of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries within the next five years.

Schmidt said only a joint stand can make the Common Market an equal partner in the talks. Schmidt reportedly said, "You still have two or three difficult years ahead of you. If you make the community fail, Germany will certainly survive more easily than Great Britain."

Agreement on the passport and parliamentary elections were viewed as significant steps toward the 17-year-old goal of building a united Europe on a continent ravaged by centuries of war.

The nine countries of the Common Market — Britain, France, Germany, Italy, Ireland, Denmark, Luxembourg, the Netherlands and Belgium — will begin issuing the joint passport to their 250 million citizens in 1978, phasing out national travel documents.

The passport will be colored Bordeaux red, although the language or languages it will be printed in must still be worked out.

Despite agreement among the nine, there may be some barriers to use of the joint passport elsewhere. The Common Market will have to negotiate agreements with nonmember countries to insure that they would treat all bearers uniformly regardless of their nationality. This could create problems with the Soviet-bloc, which does not recognize the Common Market.

Americans traveling within the Common Market area would have only to present their passports at the first country of entry, then could freely cross the borders of the nine nations.

Popular elections, aimed at giving citizens of the Common Market a voice in community policy, will be held in May or June 1978, although Britain and Denmark have the option of continuing to appoint representatives to the assembly in Strasbourg, France, if they are unable to meet the election target date for technical reasons.

The present parliament, with 198 members chosen by the national parliaments, has only limited powers, but with direct elections it would assume powers in budget matters and policy and law making.

WWII Ace John Meyer Dies After Jog

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Retired Air Force Gen. John Charles Meyer, a leading World War II ace in Europe and later commander of the Strategic Air Command, died Tuesday of an apparent heart attack after an early morning jog. He was 56.

Meyer's wife, Mary, said she found him collapsed inside their Marina Del Rey home after his regular morning jogging session. He was pronounced dead on arrival at nearby Marina Mercy Hospital.

Meyer retired from the Air Force Aug. 1, 1974, after completing his last tour of duty as head of SAC.

Meyer was credited with shooting down more than 37 planes during the air war over Europe, and with downing two Russian-built Mig fighters during the Korean War.

What do doctors do with the things they cut out of you, like your tonsils, at the hospital?

—Curious 8-Year-Old, Lincoln

ACTION LINE: In response to one of ACTION LINE'S most unusual inquiries ever, Hobbin Wolfe, Lincoln General Hospital public relations director, said nonusable "parts" or tissue are cremated after being taken from a patient. The cremation of large amounts of tissue requires a disposal permit that must be signed by the patient, parent or other responsible party.

We are often disturbed late at night by the sound of a helicopter over our neighborhood. Is this the Lincoln police helicopter?

—Two Southeast Families, Lincoln

ACTION LINE: Inspector Dean Leitner of the Lincoln Police Dept's. traffic division says he thinks its unlikely you're being disturbed by the police helicopter. Leitner says the copter neither flies low enough nor is large enough to disturb Lincolnites under most circumstances. The only time the copter flies low is when its spotlights are needed at a serious night-time auto accident or when a suspect is being sought in an area following a robbery or other serious crime. What you might be hearing are National Guard helicopters that are larger and noisier than the police copter and often fly over southeast Lincoln, Leitner speculates. Incidentally, the police copter is in the air about four hours a day, either late at night or in the early morning.

Recently I found a commemorative medallion with a picture of President McKinley on one side and a picture of a building labeled "Canal Court" on the other. Around the edge it reads "Omaha International Exposition, 1898." Can you tell me anything about its history? Does it have any value?

—Clifford Phillipi, Bruning

ACTION LINE: The medallion was minted to commemorate the visit of President William McKinley to the Omaha International Exposition and Peace Jubilee of 1898. William Williams of the Centennial Coins, Stamps and Antiques, 1320 Q St., said the medallions were struck of a white pot metal or were of copper sandwich construction. They are fairly common in this area and have a value of $3-$4, according to coin books.

I have multiple sclerosis and can't get out to buy groceries. Is there any way I could have them delivered?

ACTION LINE: You would be eligible for the Madonna Homemaker Service, according to director Donna Burkhardt. Through this volunteer service, a Madonna staff member will do your shopping for you and deliver the groceries to your home. You should contact Mrs. Burkhardt at 5407 South St. about an interview at your home regarding the services you need.

ACTION TIP: Care of your trees, bare of leaves and standing in the snow, often is taken for granted during the winter. The U.S. Forest Service offers some tips about the hazards trees face at this time of year: Be careful to keep snowblowers or plows away from trees — trunks, roots and branches can be easily cut or damaged. If you use salt or other chemicals to remove snow from your driveway or sidewalk, keep it away from trees. Salt is particularly toxic to trees and can be absorbed through leaves and roots. If a winter storm damages your trees, be careful how you remove dead or dying branches. Cut the stub off even with the trunk so the tree can form a callus over the wound. Want to know more? Send 70¢ for a copy of the new government pamphlet "Your Tree's Trouble May Be You" to Consumer Information Center, Pueblo, Colo. 81009.

Noise Can Be Lethal In Populous Japan

TOKYO (AP) — In densely populated Japan, noise can be lethal, literally.

As more and more Japanese crowd into cities and into apartment buildings with thin walls and little insulation, noise has become an increasingly serious problem for everyday living.

In fact, Japanese police report a series of killings which they say was trigged by noise.

The Metropolitan Police Board says it handled 13,728 noise complaints in 1974. In the first 10 months of 1975, it said it had received 11,529 noise complaints. Figures for the entire country were not available.

In contrast, the Department of Air Resources in New York City said it received 3,379 noise complaints last year and 2,945 noise complaints in the first 10 months of 1975.

The complaints in both cities range from loud radios, stereo sets and dogs barkings to construction clamor.

According to the United Nations, Tokyo's population in 1971 was 8,830,000, while New York's was 7,894,862.

A murder involving noise made the headlines and became a major issue recently when a middle-aged mother strangled her neighbor's four-year old daughter.

Police said the woman told them she did it because the girl "made too much noise that disturbed her two teen age sons who had to study for hours every day to prepare for school examinations."

The child's slaying occurred one month after a 47-year-old worker was sentenced to death in a noise case in which three died. The man was convicted of having stabbed his neighbor's wife and her two daughters to death because "they played the piano too loudy."

Last year a housewife threw her neighbor's dog to the ground from the eighth floor of an apartment complex near Tokyo after being angered by its barking. Then, the outraged dog owner stabbed the housewife to death in retaliation.

A number of mothers of newly born babies were reported to have suffered nervous breakdowns because of neighbors' complaints that the babies cried loudly every night. Police officials reported some mothers have killed their babies after such complaints.

Common noise complaints include children who shout and jump on thin floorings, running water, flushing toilets, dogs, parties, construction work and arguments between husbands and wives, officials reported.

They said it is generally felt such noises are unavoidable because many Japanese live in small apartments crammed roof-to-roof in over-populated urban areas. The most common size is an apartment of of about 500 square feet with two rooms. Walls, ceilings and floors often are of the thinnest possible construction.

These apartments obviously are much noisier in summer when many residents leave their windows open and stay up late at night, often with their television or stereo sets on.

"Even in ferro-concrete apartments like ours, noises travel easily, especially vertically to the upper floors and down stairs," said a spokesman for the semi-governmental Japan Housing Corporation which administers 500,000 apartments for city dwellers.

"We receive a lot of complaints, although we don't keep exact figures. And in millions of other privately built apartments, noise must be more of a problem because their sound-proofing is very poor," the spokesman added.

"My neighbor is very nervous. She drives kids away from the hallway and often complains to me that, for example, my washing machine is too noisy or something," said one housewife. "I became especially careful after I read about these murder cases."

Another resident of a 1,600-family complex near Tokyo said he always wears headphones when he listens to his new stereo so that he does not trouble his neighbors.

3-Year-Old Boy Shoots Little Sister

Mr. and Mrs. Columbus Jones of Champaign, Ill., said they returned from shopping and found their daughter, Stacy, dead with the gun lying on the floorboard.

The boy, Columbus Jones Jr., was still in the car, police said.

A coroner's jury ruled the shooting accidental and police said Saturday night that although they were still investigating the incident, no charges had been filed.

The child's slaying occurred one month after a 47-year-old worker was sentenced to death in a noise case in which three died. The man was convicted of having stabbed his neighbor's wife and her two daughters to death because "they played the piano too loudy."

Last year a housewife threw her neighbor's dog to the ground from the eighth floor of an apartment complex near Tokyo after being angered by its barking. Then, the outraged dog owner stabbed the housewife to death in retaliation.

A number of mothers of newly born babies were reported to have suffered nervous breakdowns because of neighbors' complaints that the babies cried loudly every night. Police officials reported some mothers have killed their babies after such complaints.

Common noise complaints include children who shout and jump on thin floorings, running water, flushing toilets, dogs, parties, construction work and arguments between husbands and wives, officials reported.

They said it is generally felt such noises are unavoidable because many Japanese live in small apartments crammed roof-to-roof in over-populated urban areas. The most common size is an apartment of of about 500 square feet with two rooms. Walls, ceilings and floors often are of the thinnest possible construction.

These apartments obviously are much noisier in summer when many residents leave their windows open and stay up late at night, often with their television or stereo sets on.

"Even in ferro-concrete apartments like ours, noises travel easily, especially vertically to the upper floors and down stairs," said a spokesman for the semi-governmental Japan Housing Corporation which administers 500,000 apartments for city dwellers.

"We receive a lot of complaints, although we don't keep exact figures. And in millions of other privately built apartments, noise must be more of a problem because their sound-proofing is very poor," the spokesman added.

"My neighbor is very nervous. She drives kids away from the hallway and often complains to me that, for example, my washing machine is too noisy or something," said one housewife. "I became especially careful after I read about these murder cases."

Another resident of a 1,600-family complex near Tokyo said he always wears headphones when he listens to his new stereo so that he does not trouble his neighbors.

3-Year-Old Boy Shoots Little Sister

Mr. and Mrs. Columbus Jones of Champaign, Ill., said they returned from shopping and found their daughter, Stacy, dead with the gun lying on the floorboard.

The boy, Columbus Jones Jr., was still in the car, police said.

A coroner's jury ruled the shooting accidental and police said Saturday night that although they were still investigating the incident, no charges had been filed.

To Your Good Health:

Rest, Heat Used For Tennis Elbow

By George C. Thosteson, M.D.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Please write something about tennis elbow. How do you happen to get it? Is there a cure for it? How bad can it get? I am 50 years old. Will I be able to do any hard work? — Mrs. A. P.

Many tennis elbow patients have never played tennis. But if you are a player and if your problem is related to that, then it can correctly be called "tennis elbow."

In tennis players it results from a twisting movement of the arm, particularly the forearm, in stroking the ball. Beginners should be careful, especially in serving the ball. Tennis elbow is a stress phenomenon and is in fact more common in persons using their arms in other occupations than it is among tennis players.

It can be a bursitis in the elbow joint, a disturbance of the tiny bursa sacs that facilitate joint movements. Or it can result from a tearing of a tendon where it connects a muscle to a bone.

Rest, application of heat, sometimes injection of hydrocortisone, are the usual methods of treatment. Of course, if untreated or further irritated, the condition can become disabling. With proper treatment and rest you should regain full use of your arm again.

I suspect that with the recent surge in popularity of tennis we may be seeing more tennis elbow than formerly.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: My husband takes vitamin pills. Could he possibly be allergic to them? — Mrs. T.B.

The allergy reaction would more likely be to the binding material in the vitamin pills or to the coating than to the vitamins themselves.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I would like to understand nocturnal diarrhea. I have had it following ulcer surgery two years ago. — J. B.

I would have to know much more about your problem to be very specific. The type of surgery you had could be involved. After some such operations, what is called the "dumping syndrome" occurs, especially if a sizable portion of stomach has been removed. Dumping syndrome refers to the sudden passage of food into the upper bowel.

Does your problem occur continually or only occasionally? If only occasionally, keep track of the food eaten for dinner before the diarrhea occurs. The use of alcoholic beverages can be a factor, too.

A study of the intestinal tract (by X-ray and proctoscope) would be in order. In some cases, a lack of proper amounts of hydrochloric acid in the stomach can cause diarrhea, and you might be checked for this.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I am a 48-year-old woman who has had recent medical problems — yellow jaundice, a gall bladder operation, and an operation for removal of a stone in the common bile duct.

Since this I have been bothered with a ringing in the ears. It is constant. I have visited specialists and have taken various medications. Can you suggest something?

—Mrs. E. H.

There are so many potential causes of ear noises that it would be difficult for me to narrow them down to a specific one. You apparently have been treated successfully for your other ailments and are presently in good shape otherwise. Which prompts me to suggest that you may find the cause in any of several drugs you may have been taking. You don't list any specific medications, but aspirin, streptomycin and a few of the rarer drugs can cause such symptoms. Also, if you have been taking quinine drugs, this could be a factor, as could excessive caffeine in coffee or tea, even tobacco or alcohol or aspirin.

The reason most cases of tinnitis (the technical name for ear noises) become apparent in the 40s and 50s is that most of us develop ills at about this age that require prescribing of medications. It can be an early symptom of otosclerosis — a hearing problem.

Have your doctors included a specialist in ear disorders? Changes as otosclerosis are frequent causes of ringing at your age.

HEALTH TIP

FROM THE NEBRASKA MEDICAL ASSOCIATION

Multiple sclerosis is one of the most common diseases of the nervous system, according to the Nebraska Medical Association. It affects between two and three hundred thousand people in the United States, primarily young people.

Multiple sclerosis has no one symptom. Indicators include loss of muscular coordination or strength, difficulty in maintaining balance, paralysis, tremblings, numbness, tingling, visual disturbances or abnormal eye movement, speech difficulties or impaired bowel or bladder control.

In two-thirds of the cases, symptoms appear between the ages of 20 and 40. Symptoms come and go in the beginning, occasionally disappearing completely.

Multiple sclerosis differs markedly from patient to patient. Some victims are completely paralyzed and incapacitated. Others are able to carry on normal or near-normal activitiy.

The cause of the disease is not yet known. However, multiple sclerosis seems to be most common in cold, damp climates, though moving to a warmer climate will not cure it.

The Nebraska Medical Association reports that once nerve fibers themselves are replaced by scar tissue, impulses can no longer be carried along so they do not function.

Democratic Governors Review 9 Candidates

Washington (UPI) — All of the 10 announced candidates for the Democrats' presidential nomination except George Wallace made their pitch before the party's governors Tuesday.

The governors found most of the other nine presidential candidates in agreement that more jobs will cure recession and inflation but split on energy legislation.

Wallace lunched with the dozen of the 36 Democratic governors who showed up for the day-long candidate forum, but sent word at the hour of his scheduled late-afternoon appearance that he was tied up with Alabama state business.

They heard and questioned five candidates in the morning and four others — former Gov. Terry Sanford of North Carolina, Gov. Milton Shapp of Pennaylvania, Sargent Shriver, and former Sen. Fred Harris of Oklahoma — in the afternoon.

For the most part, the candidates and the governors appeared to be in basic agreement on domestic issues but the state chief executives found themselves challenged by one of their former colleagues on a pet project — the federal revenue sharing program.

Former Gov. Jimmy Carter of Georgia said he favored its continuation but with provisions giving local governments higher priority for the funds. He also called for an end to restrictions on use of revenue sharing funds for education, health and antipoverty programs, claiming too much in the past had been spent for "golf courses, dance halls and jail houses.'

Both Govs. Philip Noel of Rhode Island, chairman of the conference, and Patrick Lucey of Wisconsin took exception to Carter, arguing that abuses had been exaggerated and that local governments were usually responsible for spending of the kind singled out by the Georgian.

Carter's view differed with most of the other candidates who supported as-is continuation of revenue sharing, although Sen. Henry Jackson, D-Wash., and Rep. Morris Udall, D-Ariz., suggested the need for better civil rights enforcement provisions.

Sen. Birch Bayh, D-Ind., told the governors he would sign the compromise energy bill now being readied for congressional approval, but Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Tex., said he would veto it if he were president. Both senators attacked the pre-election gasoline price rollback provisions of the bill, but disagreed on whether it was the best that could be achieved.

Jackson was kinder to the bill, saying the rollback deals with "the current economic situation — it will help control inflation." Udall lumped energy with economic recovery as two problems the administration had offered solutions that were "simple, neat and wrong." He said "conservation and coal" were the keys to solving the energy shortage.

Sanford said that the "best thing" that could be done to solve the energy crisis was an intensified research program to develop solar and other forms of energy similar to the Manhattan Project which developed the atom bomb. He agreed a major reduction in unemployment would balance the federal budget through increased tax revenues.

Shapp told his fellow governors that inflation was caused by low productivity and the "monetary manipulations" of the Federal Reserve Board. He said since the board "had more power to upset or implement a program than any other agency in government" it should therefore be brought under the direct control of the president.

Shriver, the 1972 vice presidential candidate, said that while he favored a full employment program, the nation must be at the same time concerned about the inflation that would result when unemployment dropped.

All of the candidates were asked by Gov. J. James Exon of Nebraska, who argued that the Democrats should come out for less spending, what they would do to control federal deficits. But while all the candidates agreed wasteful spending had to be stopped, only Bentsen talked of across-the-board federal budget cuts and Carter of top-to-bottom reorganization and "zero base budgeting" in Washington.

The governors did not plan to endorse any candidate after hearing them, but the appearance was expected to have some impact on the eventual decisions of individual governors during the pre-nomination period.

Collision Kills Nebraska Pair In New Mexico

Tucumcari, N.M. (UPI) — A tractor-trailer rig Monday smashed into the rear of a car that pulled into the lane of traffic ahead of it, killing both occupants of the car, state police said.

Police said the Malchow vehicle pulled over to the right shoulder of U.S. 54, 13 miles east of Tucumcari, to allow traffic to pass.

The driver apparently didn't see the truck, driven by Irvin Lower, 50, of Albuquerque, and pulled back into the highway in the truck's path, officers said.

Allen Sworn In As Tennessee Representative

The seating brought the House back to its full strength of 435 members, with 290 Democrats and 145 Republicans.

Allen, 63, was elected Nov. 26 to fill the vacancy created by the resignation of Rep. Richard Fulton, D-Tenn., who quit Aug. 14 to become mayor of Nashville.

R. James Pearson, director of motor vehicles, said Tuesday the state's highway safety program purchased 12 new radar units.

"We intend to put forth every effort to enforce the 55-mile-an-hour speed limit and reduce the high accident rate in Nebraska," Pearson said in a prepared statement.

He said one unit would be given to authorities in Keith, Lincoln, Dawson, Buffalo, Hall and Hamilton Counties. Those counties are participating in a special rural traffic safety program.

Person said the other radar devices would go to the state patrol.

Sen. Clark To Seek Re-Election To Uphold Fiscal Conservatism

State Sen. Robert Clark of Sidney, an eight-year veteran of the Legislature, will seek reelection to his 47th District seat in the Unicameral.

He said his decision to seek a third term is based on his interest "in seeing fiscal conservatism remain strong in the Unicameral."

"The recent special session of the Legislature was indicative of the problems state government is facing," Clark said. "I felt that all agencies of state government could withstand a 3% reduction in budget, and that departments could also adjust to the monthly payout schedule to all political subdividions, cities, counties and school districts as outlined in LB3.

"Obviously the power of the various agencies of state government was convincing to a majority of the Legislature and the result was the increase in our state income taxes," Clark said.

"We constantly hear of elected representatives seeking to reduce expenditures but that simply isn't happening," Clark said.

Stenberg Bans All Contributions Exceeding $100

Lincoln legislative candidate Don Stenberg Tuesday said he will accept no campaign contributions in excess of $100 from any individual.

No contributions will be accepted from corporate entities, the 27th District candidate said.

And the names of all contributors will be publicly disclosed along with the amount.

"I hope other candidates for elective office will voluntarily limit the size of the contributions they will accept."

Former Lincoln Man Escapes Hall County Deputy At Dentist's

Grand Island (UPI) — A Lincoln man being held on possession of marijuana and stolen property escaped Monday from a Grand Island dentist's office, Hall County Sheriff C. F. Headley said Tuesday.

Headley said John Vargas, 25, whose last known address was Lincoln, was taken to the dentist's office by a deputy. While the deputy was sitting in the waiting room, the sheriff said, Vargas asked a nurse where the washroom was located.

She told him down the hall and to the right. Headley said Vargas went down the hall and to the left and out the back door.

Vargas was arrested Nov. 30 and was being held in the county jail in lieu of $1,500 bond. Headley said the FBI was called for assistance because the sheriff's office had "a difficult time" identifying Vargas and was uncertain if Vargas was his correct name.

Headley said Vargas was born in Los Angeles, Calif.

GOP 'Fat Cats' Waited An Hour

Most didn't seem to mind it.

Members of the Nebraska Republican Boosters Club pay $100 annually for membership. Tuesday night's invitation only gathering for Reagan was a "freebie" of sorts in that it didn't cost anything more than the original membership fee.

"I can't believe he kept the fat cats waiting for 60 minutes," said a top-ranking state GOP executive committee member who said he wanted to remain anonymous. "This just doesn't happen."

James Paxson, Booster Club president, told the some 250 party faithful Reagan would be in the motel room reception area within 12 minutes and to "have another drink."

Liquor Flows

Hard liquor was the fare of the night and it flowed freely, compared with the staple of cold draft beer at traditional Democratic gatherings in the Omaha area.

The traditional Republicans lost no time in grasping the mood Reagan set when he walked into the room. One middle-aged woman kissed him, several men and women alike asked him for autographs.

Mrs. William Baird, of Omaha, knew Reagan when he was known as "Dutch", a radio broadcaster in Des Moines. Mrs. Baird was a Kappa Kappa Gamma sorority member at Drake University and one of her sorority sisters dated Reagan.

"He says he remembers me," Mrs. Baird said. "But I don't see how he can. It's been more years than I care to remember. Bless his heart — he's a politican."

J.W. Lauter, a Beatrice businessman and a registered independent, said, "I came as a Reagan supporter. I've been a fan of Reagan's for years. His views are closer to mine than any other candidate. Whether he can get it done is something else. I'd like to see him try."

Paxson, on the other hand, is a member of Ford's election committee in Nebraska. He donated the property in Omaha where the President's birthplace once stood for a national monument. He says the donation was worth "three-quarters of a million dollars."

"I wanted it to remain anonymous," Paxson said of his donation. "I'm here tonight because I'm president of the Booster Club. We'd do the same thing for any other Republican candidate — well, almost any other Republican candidate."

Douglas, Marsh

State Atty. Gen. Paul Douglas and State Treasurer Frank Marsh, both potential GOP gubernatorial candidates, were present. Douglas said he came because, "I think its important to hear all the candidates and know where they stand on the issues."

Marsh said he came because "Douglas had some free tickets."

Anne Batchelder, state GOP chairman and a hard-core conservative, said she wasn't really frustrated she had to remain neutral in the GOP presidential primary.

"I think having two candidates is healthy for the party," Mrs. Batchelder of Omaha said. "I believe we'll be more unified after the convention is over than we are now. May the best man win."

Reagan's theme was the same as it had been even before he was a presidential candidate and was on what he called the "mashed potatoe circuit."

The GOP presidential candidate and former California governor called for less government intervention, a national defense program second to none, a demolition of "irksome government paperwork and costly bureaucratic nonsense" and a welfare program which could pay its own way.

Community Work

He told the GOP boosters welfare programs should offer those receiving benefits the "opportunity to work in community projects in exchange for welfare benefits."

A woman in the audience sighed, "Amen."

Later, in his keynote speech before the annual meeting of the Nebraska Tax Research Council Inc., Reagan said the cause for free enterprise is "very real," adding the free enterprise system "has never been in greater danger than it is today."

In the past, Reagan said, "If you built a better mousetrap the world would beat a path to your door. Nowadays, if you have a better mousetrap, the government will build a better mouse.

"We live in the only world where it takes more brains to figure out income taxes than it does to earn the income," Reagan said. "We need a tax system to raise the money government needs and not what government wants."

Reagan said he sometimes believed "Adam and Eve were Russians. They had no roof over their heads but they had an apple between them and thought it was paradise."

"They sometimes say that politics is the second oldest profession," Reagan said. "I sometimes think it resembles the first."

Reagan's speech was interrupted by applause five times and he received a standing ovation at the end when he said government should be convinced to "stay the hell out of the way and let" free enterprise prevail.

Ford Supporter

One of the last to shake Reagan's hand following his speech was Richard Herman, former Nebraska GOP national committeeman and a select member of Ford's national election committee.

Herman of Omaha said he has "always had respect" for Reagan as one of the "outstanding Republicans in our country."

Herman, however, compared Reagan's candidacy to the Nebraska football team's season. The Huskers were 10-0 going into the Oklahoma game where they were defeated, losing an Orange Bowl berth and ending up in a tie with the Sooners for the Big Eight championship.

"By November the gloriousness of the Reagan campaign will have worn off," Herman said. "President Ford will be the winner in November."

In introducing Reagan to the tax council members, Ben R. Morris, Northwestern Bell Telephone Co. vice president and chief executive officer, recalled Reagan's scene in "Knute Rockne, All American," a 1940 movie, when the famed football coach, who was dying, told his team to "win one for the gipper."

Reagan's message to Nebraska Republicans Tuesday night was an instant replay.

Exon Urges Joint Solar Lab Request

By The Associated Press

Gov. J. J. Exon says that unless two groups now bidding to become the location of a federal solar energy laboratory don't get together, the state's chances of landing the laboratory will be slim.

In a letter to Lt. Gov. Gerald Whelan, Omaha Mayor Edward Zorinsky and University of Nebraska President D. B. Varner, Exon urged that the two groups vying for the laboratory make a joint application.

Exon noted that competition for the new lab is "very keen," and said Nebraska's chances for getting the multi-million dollar facility "are not enhanced by having two applications" on file.

The differences over where the facility should be located, if the state gets the lab, began last week, when Zorinsky announced plans to seek the laboratory's location in the metropolitan area.

The state had already launched an effort to get the lab located at Meed.

After Zorinsky's announcement, Whelan called the Omaha-Council Bluffs effort "unfortunate, ill-conceived and not best for Nebraska."

In his letter, the governor suggested that the state list all reasonable sites as alternatives, and to let the solar research institute know that Nebraska is united in its effort to get the facility.

Zorinsky said he talked with Exon and Whelan last week, and that neither expressed an objection to the metro application.

The mayor said Whelan and Exon called him Monday, saying they wanted to work with the city in landing the institute for the state. Zorinsky said he agreed with the two top state executives, and that a meeting was suggested, but no date was set.

Omaha Planning Director Alden Aust, chairman of a committee named to prepare the metro application, said, "If the Mead site has all the attributes which the governor's committee thinks it has, then it would be considered along with the other sites in the area."

However, Aust added, the criteria set by the federal selection committee "indicate that the nature and character of a metropolitan area are more important than a piece of ground."

Whelan called the Omaha bid a "Chamber of Commerce" proposal, but Keith Carter, executive vice president of the Greater Omaha Chamber of Commerce, said the chamber had nothing to do with the Omaha application.

Carter said the chamber provided some information to the committee working on the state's application, and that some its members aided the state group.

Carter said he favors "a unified effort" aimed at getting the institute in Nebraska, and that he considers Mead to be a part of the metropolitan area.

First District Rep. Charles Thone of Lincoln has denounced the Omaha bid, while 2nd District Rep. John Y. McCollister of Omaha said he feels the state would have a better chance of getting the new laboratory if the two applications are merged.

'Peaceful' Omaha Integration Called For

Omaha (AP) — The Omaha School District is faced with the prospect of court-ordered busing to achieve racial balance next fall and the Chamber of Commerce has called for "cool heads" and a "peaceful" response to the order.

The Chamber said in a position statement that it "appeals for considered judgments, wise leadership, and a sensible plan of action on the issue of school desegregation in our city."

The chamber said it believes "Omaha is a community which respects the law and which upholds lawful processes in resolving issues of controversy and conflict.

"Our purpose is to make clear what we believe to be the moral obligation which rests upon the entire Omaha community . . . to work peacefully, cooperatively and diligently for a program of educational excellence . . ."

The chamber said busing appears necessary and called upon "all segments of our community" to "work cooperatively for its acceptance."

"After 20 years of various efforts around the nation on school desegregation," the chamber said, "we believe that the lessons are clear. In those communities where cool heads have prevailed and where a commitment to quality educational opportunity for all children has been demonstrated, the transition has been better achieved and the community has continued to progress.

"We want Omaha to be just such a community; a community where the law is respected, where citizens work together for orderly, peaceful change, and where quality educational opportunities can continue to be assured for all of our children."

The chamber's position statement was adopted by the board of directors in a move that Executive Vice President Keith Carter said was intended "to point out Omaha's historical strengths in respect of the law and concern for the individual."

Democratic Governors Review 9 Candidates

Washington (UPI) — All of the 10 announced candidates for the Democrats' presidential nomination except George Wallace made their pitch before the party's governors Tuesday.

The governors found most of the other nine presidential candidates in agreement that more jobs will cure recession and inflation but split on energy legislation.

Wallace lunched with the dozen of the 36 Democratic governors who showed up for the day-long candidate forum, but sent word at the hour of his scheduled late-afternoon appearance that he was tied up with Alabama state business.

They heard and questioned five candidates in the morning and four others — former Gov. Terry Sanford of North Carolina, Gov Milton Shapp of Pennaylvania, Sargent Shriver, and former Sen Fred Harris of Oklahoma — in the afternoon

For the most part, the candidates and the governors appeared to be in basic agreement on domestic issues but the state chief executives found themselves challenged by one of their former colleagues on a pet project — the federal revenue sharing program

Former Gov Jimmy Carter of Georgia said he favored its continuation but with provisions giving local governments higher priority for the funds. He also called for an end to restrictions on use of revenue sharing funds for education, health and antipoverty programs, claiming too much in the past had been spent for "golf courses, dance halls and jail houses.'

Both Govs. Philip Noel of Rhode Island, chairman of the conference, and Patrick Lucey of Wisconsin took exception to Carter, arguing that abuses had been exaggerated and that local governments were usually responsible for spending of the kind singled out by the Georgian.

Carter's view differed with most of the other candidates who supported as-is continuation of revenue sharing, although Sen Henry Jackson, D-Wash., and Rep. Morris Udall, D-Ariz., suggested the need for better civil rights enforcement provisions.

Sen Birch Bayh, D-Ind., told the governors he would sign the compromise energy bill now being readied for congressional approval, but Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Tex , said he would veto it if he were president. Both senators attacked the pre-election gasoline price rollback provisions of the bill, but disagreed on whether it was the best that could be achieved.

Jackson was kinder to the bill, saying the rollback deals with "the current economic situation — it will help control inflation." Udall lumped energy with economic recovery as two problems the administration had offered solutions that were "simple, neat and wrong." He said "conservation and coal" were the keys to solving the energy shortage

Sanford said that the "best thing" that could be done to solve the energy crisis was an intensified research program to develop solar and other forms of energy similar to the Manhattan Project which developed the atom bomb He agreed a major reduction in unemployment would balance the federal budget through increased tax revenues

Shapp told his fellow governors that inflation was caused by low productivity and the "monetary manipulations" of the Federal Reserve Board. He said since the board "had more power to upset or implement a program than any other agency in government" it should therefore be brought under the direct control of the president.

Shriver, the 1972 vice presidential candidate, said that while he favored a full employment program, the nation must be at the same time concerned about the inflation that would result when unemployment dropped

All of the candidates were asked by Gov. J James Exon of Nebraska, who argued that the Democrats should come out for less spending, what they would do to control federal deficits. But while all the candidates agreed wasteful spending had to be stopped, only Bentsen talked of across-the-board federal budget cuts and Carter of top-to-bottom reorganization and "zero base budgeting" in Washington.

The governors did not plan to endorse any candidate after hearing them, but the appearance was expected to have some impact on the eventual decisions of individual governors during the pre-nomination period.

Collision Kills Nebraska Pair In New Mexico

Tucumcari, N.M. (UPI) — A tractor-trailer rig Monday smashed into the rear of a car that pulled into the lane of traffic ahead of it, killing both occupants of the car, state police said.

Police said the Malchow vehicle pulled over to the right shoulder of U.S. 54, 13 miles east of Tucumcari, to allow traffic to pass.

The driver apparently didn't see the truck, driven by Irvin Lower, 50, of Albuquerque, and pulled back into the highway in the truck's path, officers said.

Allen Sworn In As Tennessee Representative

The seating brought the House back to its full strength of 435 members, with 290 Democrats and 145 Republicans.

Allen, 63, was elected Nov. 26 to fill the vacancy created by the resignation of Rep. Richard Fulton, D-Tenn., who quit Aug. 14 to become mayor of Nashville.

Sen. Clark To Seek Re-Election To Uphold Fiscal Conservatism

State Sen Robert Clark of Sidney, an eight-year veteran of the Legislature, will seek reelection to his 47th District seat in the Unicameral

Clark is vice chairman of the Appropriations Committee

He said his decision to seek a third term is based on his interest "in seeing fiscal conservatism remain strong in the Unicameral "

"The recent special session of the Legislature was indicative of the problems state government is facing," Clark said. "I felt that all agencies of state government could withstand a 3% reduction in budget, and that departments could also adjust to the monthly payout schedule to all political subdividions, cities, counties and school districts as outlined in LB3

"Obviously the power of the various agencies of state government was convincing to a majority of the Legislature and the result was the increase in our state income taxes," Clark said.

"We constantly hear of elected representatives seeking to reduce expenditures but that simply isn't happening," Clark said

Stenberg Bans All Contributions Exceeding $100

Lincoln legislative candidate Don Stenberg Tuesday said he will accept no campaign contributions in excess of $100 from any individual

No contributions will be accepted from corporate entities, the 27th District candidate said.

And the names of all contributors will be publicly disclosed along with the amount.

'I hope other candidates for elective office will voluntarily limit the size of the contributions they will accept."

Former Lincoln Man Escapes Hall County Deputy At Dentist's

Grand Island (UPI) — A Lincoln man being held on possession of marijuana and stolen property escaped Monday from a Grand Island dentist's office, Hall County Sheriff C. F. Headley said Tuesday.

Headley said John Vargas, 25, whose last known address was Lincoln, was taken to the dentist's office by a deputy. While the deputy was sitting in the waiting room, the sheriff said, Vargas asked a nurse where the washroom was located.

She told him down the hall and to the right. Headley said Vargas went down the hall and to the left and out the back door.

Vargas was arrested Nov. 30 and was being held in the county jail in lieu of $1,500 bond. Headley said the FBI was called for assistance because the sheriff's office had "a difficult time" identifying Vargas and was uncertain if Vargas was his correct name

Headley said Vargas was born in Los Angeles, Calif.

12 Radar Units To Help Police Catch Speeders

R. James Pearson, director of motor vehicles, said Tuesday the state's highway safety program purchased 12 new radar units.

"We intend to put forth every effort to enforce the 55-mile-an-hour speed limit and reduce the high accident rate in Nebraska," Pearson said in a prepared statement.

He said one unit would be given to authorities in Keith, Lincoln, Dawson, Buffalo, Hall and Hamilton Counties Those counties are participating in a special rural traffic safety program.

Person said the other radar devices would go to the state patrol.

Maxwell Minipost Serves As Soap Box For Editor

What newspaper runs editorials that take up three-fourths of its total space?

What newspaper earns $3 an edition for its editor-publisher — plus the anger of a number of public officials?

You've never read the Maxwell Minipost?

Most people haven't unless they live in this town of about 300 residents and have picked one up at a store where the papers are given away.

The minuscule missive is published by Jerod Story, who taught one year at the University of Mississippi and nine years at Northern State College in Aberdeen, S.D.

"I'm a quarrelsome person naturally . . .I like to argue," said Story as he sat at an ancient rolltop desk, looking like a cantankerous country editor of yore with his eyeshade, sleeve garters and long, flowing hair.

Story jousts editorially with what he calls growing governmental control over peoples' lives, including a zoning plan and a crash course designed to license foreign doctors to practice in the state.

"Some people don't like it (my editorial positions). One woman said about me, 'That man is so intelligent he's stupid,' " Story said. The woman has since apologized.

The Minipost is painstakingly set by hand at the rate of about two lines in five minutes. Story then prints the newspaper on a hand-operated press, requiring at least one day's work.

He also sells and sets the ads.

Story doesn't print the paper with the idea of making a profit. He's a member of the American Amateur Printers Assn., a group of about 300 persons who want only to put their thoughts into print.

The next edition of the Minipost may come out within a few days or a month. It will appear whenever its independent ad salesman-publisher-editor-printer gets around to it. And whenever another editorial target shows itself.

Everybody Gets In Act

Omaha (AP) — A District 66 school bus carrying 34 students to Oakdale school collided with an Omaha Public Works Department truck Tuesday morning.

Officials said 17 of the children on the bus were injured, none of them seriously.

A fire truck, dispatched to the collision scene as a precautionary measure, hit a patch of icy pavement, and spun, then slid backward into a parked car. The impact sent the car, occupied by Mrs. Judy Retelsdorf and her son, into a parked police cruiser, causing minor damage.

Mrs. Retelsdorf was hospitalized for observation, while her son, Mike, 11, was treated for minor injuries and released.

Superintendents Hear Open Meeting Caution

By The Associated Press

Members of the Nebraska County Superintendents Association have been given a briefing on some practices that might put them in violation of the state's open meetings law.

"There have been some abuses of closed session" by school boards, according to Merlin Menagh, a consultant to the Department of Education.

Menagh told the county officials to read and digest the open meetings law and be aware of penalties for its violation.

One district, a superintendent said, has a policy of excluding all school age children from its meetings. "I would think it would be illegal to keep out anyone," Menagh said.

Menagh stressed that votes must be taken in public and executive sessions must be for stipulated reasons as outlined in the law.

Superintendents discussed legal requirements that the boards meet at least once a month with an announced agenda.

One board, a superintendent said, "meets" by telephone, particularly during the summer.

"Then you would be in conflict with the open meetings law," he was told, "unless you're on a party line."

The humorous reply did not daunt one superintendent, who said of the telephone meetings "we've been doing it for 20 years."

Superintendents Choose Tuton President-Elect

Stanley Tuton, Keya Paha County superintendent of schools, has been named president-elect of the Nebraska County Superintendents Association, succeeding Wilsie Cross, Arthur County superintendent.

Cross, county superintendent for 19 years and veteran Sandhills rancher-philosopher, will become president Jan. 1.

Other officers chosen for 1976 are:

Frieda Josten, Antelope County school superintendent since 1957 and a teacher for 35 years, is the outgoing association president.

Friend Man, 25, Said Apparently Out Of Danger

Friend (UPI) — John Chase, 25, who was found unconscious Sunday in an apartment where two other men were asphyxiated, Tuesday was reported out of apparent danger at Warren Memorial Hospital.

Authorities said Chase, who was found on the stairway of the apartment, said he had been sleeping in the basement and was overcome while trying to escape.

The two victims were James Range, 22, who lived in the apartment with Chase, and Ron Melton, 23, Exeter, who was visiting and spending the night Saturday.

Preliminary autopsy reports indicated the two died of a combination of carbon monoxide poisoning and lack of oxygen. Saline County Sheriff Ed Prokop said carbon monoxide escaping from a rusted-out duct apparently built up when the furnace thermostat stuck.

The bodies were found by Range's father Sunday afternoon.

Group Requests Public Hearings On Discharges

Omaha (AP) — An Omaha-based environmental group has called for public hearings on possibly hazardous discharges into the Missouri River by the Omaha Public Power District's (OPPD) Fort Calhoun No. 2 nuclear power plant.

The Quality Environment Council said enough questions about thermal and radiation discharges have arisen at other U.S. nuclear plants to merit hearings on OPPD's proposed discharge.

The State Dept. recently announced it is considering OPPD's application to make discharges after the plant is built.

The discharge of waste water from the nuclear plant would be about 20 miles upstream from Omaha's major drinking water inlet, putting burdens on OPPD and the Metropolitan Utilities District, Omaha's water supplier, to insure that water is not contaminated, said Dr. Jim Wood, council chairman.

Body Of Orchard Man Found Near His Home

Orchard (AP) — The body of a rural Orchard man, missing since last Saturday in the foul weather which hit the state, was found Monday night in a cornfield about three-quarters of a mile from his home southwest of here.

The victim, Herbert H. Eckmann, 45, was last seen in Orchard late last Saturday afternoon.

Investigators said Eckmann's car stalled in a snowdrift, and Eckmann apparently tried to walk home.

Authorities said Eckmann's two children, who were riding a school bus Monday, saw their father's abandoned car, and told their mother.

More than 25 searchers, aided by 10 snowmobiles, then took to the fields looking for Eckmann.

His body was found about 10 p.m. Monday, approximately 250 yards from his auto.

Antelope County officials attributed Eckmann's death to exposure.

Eckmann becomes Nebraska's sixth storm-related victim since cold weather and snow hit the state two weeks ago, according to an Associated Press count.

GOP 'Fat Cats' Waited An Hour

Most didn't seem to mind it.

Members of the Nebraska Republican Boosters Club pay $100 annually for membership. Tuesday night's invitation only gathering for Reagan was a "freebie" of sorts in that it didn't cost anything more than the original membership fee.

"I can't believe he kept the fat cats waiting for 60 minutes," said a top-ranking state GOP executive committee member who said he wanted to remain anonymous. "This just doesn't happen."

James Paxson, Booster Club president, told the some 250 party faithful Reagan would be in the motel room reception area within 12 minutes and to "have another drink."

Liquor Flows

Hard liquor was the fare of the night and it flowed freely, compared with the staple of cold draft beer at traditional Democratic gatherings in the Omaha area.

The traditional Republicans lost no time in grasping the mood Reagan set when he walked into the room. One middle-aged woman kissed him, several men and women alike asked him for autographs.

Mrs. William Baird, of Omaha, knew Reagan when he was known as "Dutch", a radio broadcaster in Des Moines. Mrs. Baird was a Kappa Kappa Gamma sorority member at Drake University and one of her sorority sisters dated Reagan.

"He says he remembers me," Mrs. Baird said. "But I don't see how he can. It's been more years than I care to remember. Bless his heart — he's a politican."

J.W. Lauter, a Beatrice businessman and a registered independent, said, "I came as a Reagan supporter. I've been a fan of Reagan's for years. His views are closer to mine than any other candidate. Whether he can get it done is something else. I'd like to see him try."

Paxson, on the other hand, is a member of Ford's election committee in Nebraska. He donated the property in Omaha where the President's birthplace once stood for a national monument. He says the donation was worth "three-quarters of a million dollars."

"I wanted it to remain anonymous," Paxson said of his donation. "I'm here tonight because I'm president of the Booster Club. We'd do the same thing for any other Republican candidate — well, almost any other Republican candidate."

Douglas, Marsh

State Atty. Gen. Paul Douglas and State Treasurer Frank Marsh, both potential GOP gubernatorial candidates, were present. Douglas said he came because, "I think its important to hear all the candidates and know where they stand on the issues."

Marsh said he came because "Douglas had some free tickets."

Anne Batchelder, state GOP chairman and a hard-core conservative, said she wasn't really frustrated she had to remain neutral in the GOP presidential primary.

"I think having two candidates is healthy for the party," Mrs. Batchelder of Omaha said. "I believe we'll be more unified after the convention is over than we are now. May the best man win."

Reagan's theme was the same as it had been even before he was a presidential candidate and was on what he called the "mashed potatoe circuit."

The GOP presidential candidate and former California governor called for less government intervention, a national defense program second to none, a demolition of "irksome government paperwork and costly bureaucratic nonsense" and a welfare program which could pay its own way.

Community Work

He told the GOP boosters welfare programs should offer those receiving benefits the "opportunity to work in community projects in exchange for welfare benefits."

A woman in the audience sighed, "Amen."

Later, in his keynote speech before the annual meeting of the Nebraska Tax Research Council Inc., Reagan said the cause for free enterprise is "very real," adding the free enterprise system "has never been in greater danger than it is today."

In the past, Reagan said, "If you built a better mousetrap the world would beat a path to your door. Nowadays, if you have a better mousetrap, the government will build a better mouse.

"We live in the only world where it takes more brains to figure out income taxes than it does to earn the income," Reagan said. "We need a tax system to raise the money government needs and not what government wants."

Reagan said he sometimes believed "Adam and Eve were Russians. They had no roof over their heads but they had an apple between them and thought it was paradise."

"They sometimes say that politics is the second oldest profession," Reagan said. "I sometimes think it resembles the first."

Reagan's speech was interrupted by applause five times and he received a standing ovation at the end when he said government should be convinced to "stay the hell out of the way and let" free enterprise prevail.

Ford Supporter

One of the last to shake Reagan's hand following his speech was Richard Herman, former Nebraska GOP national committeeman and a select member of Ford's national election committee.

Herman of Omaha said he has "always had respect" for Reagan as one of the "outstanding Republicans in our country."

Herman, however, compared Reagan's candidacy to the Nebraska football team's season. The Huskers were 10-0 going into the Oklahoma game where they were defeated, losing an Orange Bowl berth and ending up in a tie with the Sooners for the Big Eight championship.

"By November the gloriousness of the Reagan campaign will have worn off," Herman said. "President Ford will be the winner in November."

In introducing Reagan to the tax council members, Ben R. Morris, Northwestern Bell Telephone Co. vice president and chief executive officer, recalled Reagan's scene in "Knute Rockne, All American," a 1940 movie, when the famed football coach, who was dying, told his team to "win one for the gipper."

Reagan's message to Nebraska Republicans Tuesday night was an instant replay.

Exon Urges Joint Solar Lab Request

By The Associated Press

Gov. J. J. Exon says that unless two groups now bidding to become the location of a federal solar energy laboratory don't get together, the state's chances of landing the laboratory will be slim.

In a letter to Lt. Gov. Gerald Whelan, Omaha Mayor Edward Zorinsky and University of Nebraska President D. B. Varner, Exon urged that the two groups vying for the laboratory make a joint application.

Exon noted that competition for the new lab is "very keen," and said Nebraska's chances for getting the multi-million dollar facility "are not enhanced by having two applications" on file.

The differences over where the facility should be located, if the state gets the lab, began last week, when Zorinsky announced plans to seek the laboratory's location in the metropolitan area.

The state had already launched an effort to get the lab located at Meed.

After Zorinsky's announcement, Whelan called the Omaha-Council Bluffs effort "unfortunate, ill-conceived and not best for Nebraska."

In his letter, the governor suggested that the state list all reasonable sites as alternatives, and to let the solar research institute know that Nebraska is united in its effort to get the facility.

Zorinsky said he talked with Exon and Whelan last week, and that neither expressed an objection to the metro application.

The mayor said Whelan and Exon called him Monday, saying they wanted to work with the city in landing the institute for the state. Zorinsky said he agreed with the two top state executives, and that a meeting was suggested, but no date was set.

Omaha Planning Director Alden Aust, chairman of a committee named to prepare the metro application, said, "If the Mead site has all the attributes which the governor's committee thinks it has, then it would be considered along with the other sites in the area."

However, Aust added, the criteria set by the federal selection committee "indicate that the nature and character of a metropolitan area are more important than a piece of ground."

Whelan called the Omaha bid a "Chamber of Commerce" proposal, but Keith Carter, executive vice president of the Greater Omaha Chamber of Commerce, said the chamber had nothing to do with the Omaha application.

Carter said the chamber provided some information to the committee working on the state's application, and that some its members aided the state group.

Carter said he favors "a unified effort" aimed at getting the institute in Nebraska, and that he considers Mead to be a part of the metropolitan area.

First District Rep. Charles Thone of Lincoln has denounced the Omaha bid, while 2nd District Rep. John Y. McCollister of Omaha said he feels the state would have a better chance of getting the new laboratory if the two applications are merged.

'Peaceful' Omaha Integration Called For

Omaha (AP) — The Omaha School District is faced with the prospect of court-ordered busing to achieve racial balance next fall and the Chamber of Commerce has called for "cool heads" and a "peaceful" response to the order.

The Chamber said in a position statement that it "appeals for considered judgments, wise leadership, and a sensible plan of action on the issue of school desegregation in our city."

The chamber said it believes "Omaha is a community which respects the law and which upholds lawful processes in resolving issues of controversy and conflict.

"Our purpose is to make clear what we believe to be the moral obligation which rests upon the entire Omaha community . . . to work peacefully, cooperatively and diligently for a program of educational excellence . . ."

The chamber said busing appears necessary and called upon "all segments of our community" to "work cooperatively for its acceptance."

"After 20 years of various efforts around the nation on school desegregation," the chamber said, "we believe that the lessons are clear. In those communities where cool heads have prevailed and where a commitment to quality educational opportunity for all children has been demonstrated, the transition has been better achieved and the community has continued to progress.

"We want Omaha to be just such a community; a community where the law is respected, where citizens work together for orderly, peaceful change, and where quality educational opportunities can continue to be assured for all of our children."

The chamber's position statement was adopted by the board of directors in a move that Executive Vice President Keith Carter said was intended "to point out Omaha's historical strengths in respect of the law and concern for the individual."

Feminist Ideals Also Anarchist

By CYNTHIA JOHNSON
Star Staff Writer

Anarchists "at best . . . have been insensitive" to the concerns of women, according to Dr. Sarah Hoagland, assistant professor of philosophy at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln.

Yet feminism and anarchism have certain things in common, she said Tuesday.

Speaking during the Student Y-sponsored Women Speak '75, Dr. Hoagland said, "It is not my purpose to say there is an anarchist faction" in the feminist movement. Nor is it correct to say that if there were an anarchist movement, all feminists would join it.

Rejection Of Idols

But the anarchist's rejection of idols, models and authority; emphasis on self-reliance; and search for means other than violence to effect change are mirrored in the feminist outlook, Dr. Hoagland said.

For the anarchist, "the primary evil is coercion" of the individual by society, the state, or any other form of authority.

Feminists also have rejected the idea of subserviance to authority, Dr. Hoagland said.

"We are tired of others doing our thinking for us," she said, adding that feminists who favor abortion are now demanding the right to control their own bodies.

Feminists do not want to be coereced, nor do they want to coerce anyone else, she said.

And she noted that the feminist opposition to hierarchical structures is evidenced by the decentralized make-up of feminist organizations such as the National Organization for Women (NOW).

"It's very hard to define feminism, and I see that as a good sign," a tendency away from centralized authority.

Feminists also resemble anarchists in their rejection of certain idols or models, Dr. Hoagland said. They are challenging the traditional concepts of woman as housewife and temptress.

Nor does the "false idol of competition" have relevance for most feminists, she siad. "I've seen very few feminists who are competing against their sisters."

Turning to the concept of selfreliance, Dr. Hoaglund said, for feminists "the ability to stand on our own two feet is of primary importance."

Tendency To Protect

The tendency to "protect" women is a disservice in two ways. Protection "becomes a way of keeping women in their place," and it prevents them from learning to face reality, Dr. Hoagland said.

Women are vulnerable to rape because they have not been taught to be selfreliant, she continued.

Feminism also resembles anarchism in its rejection of change by violence, Dr. Hoagland said.

"Violence, I think, gets us nowhere," and it "seems to not function in most feminist thought.

"We're not after confrontation."

'They Just Go Shopping'—Spence

By ERIC KRAMER
The Associated Press

John Spence says his house has been burglarized eight times in the last two months and he has lost more than $100 in cash, two stereo sets, three winter coats, more than a pound of marijuana and all but one pair of underwear.

"One thing I found absolutely uncomprehensible is what you can get away with," he said. "People walk into my house and just go shopping."

Spence reported only three burglaries to police because he said he was afraid to tell them about the marijuana.

Spence said police officers came to his house, a half block from Lincoln's main street, and said, "Yeah, you've been ripped off."

He said he demanded they do something. The officers called another policeman who was experienced in fingerprinting. Spence said the other officer came to his house, looked around and said it was useless to look for fingerprints unless a suspect was in custody.

Inspector Roger LaPage of the Lincoln Police Department said officers investigating burglaries look for fingerprints "if articles appear to have been touched where prints can be obtained." Of the burglaries, LaPage said, "If he's had five others, he ought to tell us about it."

On a tip from a service station attendant across the street, police arrested a juvenile coming out of Spence's house. "I thought my problems were solved," Spence said.

But the juvenile escaped from the county detention center and Spence's home was hit again. Spence said his son learned that the juvenile lived alternately at the homes of two girl friends. But he said he could not get the police to raid both houses at once.

However, the juvenile was spotted walking down the street, arrested and locked in the City-County Jail.

"He was under lock and key and again I thought my troubles were over," Spence said.

But Spence's son called him at work and said, "We've been ripped off again."

After learning that a private security guard cost $8.50 an hour, Spence said, "I'm just waiting."

Viet Doctors To Test For State Licenses

Omaha (AP) — Thirty Vietnamese physicians who have come to Nebraska will take examinations within the next two months, a step toward a license to practice in the state.

Dr. Jack Watkins, coordinator of the Vietnamese education program at the University of Nebraska Medical Center, said 20 of the doctors have registered to take the national examination required of all graduates of foreign schools.

This examination must be passed before the physicians can take Nebraska's licensing examination.

The national examination, administered at various places around the country, also will be given at the medical center. It is scheduled for Jan. 21.

Dr. Watkins said the formal review course for the Vietnamese physicians will be completed Dec. 18.

Paroled Youth Is Charged In Omaha Robbery

Omaha (AP) — A second youth who was involved in a 1972 department store breakin involving the death of a security guard has been charged with robbery.

Larry Dwayne Ebberson, 17, of Omaha, who was on parole from the Kearney Youth Development Center, was arrested last weekend with another youth, police said.

Deputy County Atty. Edward Warin said Ebberson is charged with robbing Naomi Faye Hughs of Omaha Nov. 23.

Ebberson and two other youths were committed to the Kearney center in March, 1973 following the 1972 Brandeis break-in, in which security guard Leonard Parkinson, 79, was shot to death.

Lower Platte Units To Meet

The board of directors of the Lower Platte South Natural Resources District will meet Dec. 15 in David City for a joint meeting with the board of directors of the Lower Platte North Natural Resources District.

State law requires the boards of two districts within each river basin to meet jointly at least twice each year to review and coordinate efforts for the maximum benefit of the basin.

The Lower Platte South District board also will meet Dec. 17 in Lincoln.

NPPD Station Now Operating At 88% Capacity

Columbus (AP) — The Nebraska Public Power District says its recently repaired Cooper Nuclear Station at Brownville now is generating about 685,000 kilowatts of electricity. That's about 88% of the unit's 778,000-kilowatt capacity.

NPPD said no vibrations or erratic readings have been detected since a partial fix performed in October to eliminate an incore vibration problem in the reactor.

The plant was started up again on Nov. 2 after being shut down since Sept. 27 to fix the vibration problem. The plant is expected to operate at the limited power level until next spring when it will be shut down for refueling and completion of the fix. NPPD said the plant should be able to operate at full capacity after that.

Vision Care Sought

St. Louis (UPI) — Most Americans over 65 would like the federal government's Medicare program to assume the cost of taking care of their vision. More than 78% responding to a 40-state survey said they pay for vision care out of their own pockets. The study made by the American Optometric Association and its auxiliary said 48% blamed lack of money for their failure to seek eye care the last time they felt it was needed.

Bell Wants Federal Hands Off Grain

Omaha (AP) — The government should stay out of the grain export business as much as possible, says the head of international affairs for the U.S. Agriculture Department.

Richard E. Bell, assistant secretary of agriculture for internal affairs and commodity programs, said that "except for setting board parameters of policy," the federal government should allow private business and farmers to make decisions on grain exports.

Defending President Ford's grain export program with the Soviet Union, Bell said, "exports have enabled decision-making in American agriculture to be put back into the hands of American farmers."

Bell said an expanded grain market has given farmers incentive to respond fully to market growth.

"We no longer have the acreage restrictions which for so many years served to restrict grain production along historic lines," he said.

Bell was in Omaha to speak at a meeting of the Country Elevator Council of the National Grain and Feed Association.

Direct Flights Asked Of Egypt

Cairo (UPI) — Sweden has asked Egypt to look into the possibility of flying Northern Europeans directly to Upper Nile tourist centers "because they are deprived of warmth all day long."

Al Gomhouria newspaper said the report had been submitted to Egyptian tourist firms for study, even though Scandinavians account for little more than 1% of tourists here.

"The report requested that approval be granted by Egyptian aviation authorities for the landing of planes carrying tourists from countries in the north directly in Luxor and Aswan and not in Cairo."

Steer Expected To Live After 8 Days Under Drift

Amherst (AP) — Farmer Dean Bish of rural Amherst says one of his Angus steers is expected to live after surviving eight days under a snow drift.

Bish said the steer now weighs about 1,000 pounds, down about 300 from what it was when it last was seen Nov. 19. It was found buried in snow eight days later.

Two pheasant hunters, Rick Ostrander of Kearney and Wayne Fisher of Riverdale, said they saw steam coming from a drift and notified Bish, who dug the steer out of four feet of snow.

Bish said the steer has a bad cold and is under medication in a shelter.

Wise To Make 'Audrey Rose'

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Robert Wise, who produced and directed two Oscar winners, "The Sound of Music" and "West Side Story," will next film "Audrey Rose" for United Artists.

E. J. McBride of Blue Hill was reappointed to the commission.

Maxwell Minipost Serves As Soap Box For Editor

What newspaper runs editorials that take up three-fourths of its total space?

What newspaper earns $3 an edition for its editor-publisher — plus the anger of a number of public officials?

You've never read the Maxwell Minipost?

Most people haven't unless they live in this town of about 300 residents and have picked one up at a store where the papers are given away.

The minuscule missive is published by Jerod Story, who taught one year at the University of Mississippi and nine years at Northern State College in Aberdeen, S.D.

"I'm a quarrelsome person naturally . . . I like to argue," said Story as he sat at an ancient rolltop desk, looking like a cantankerous country editor of yore with his eyeshade, sleeve garters and long, flowing hair.

Story jousts editorially with what he calls growing governmental control over peoples' lives, including a zoning plan and a crash course designed to license foreign doctors to practice in the state.

"Some people don't like it (my editorial positions). One woman said about me, 'That man is so intelligent he's stupid,'" Story said. The woman has since apologized.

The Minipost is painstakingly set by hand at the rate of about two lines in five minutes. Story then prints the newspaper on a hand-operated press, requiring at least one day's work.

He also sells and sets the ads.

Story doesn't print the paper with the idea of making a profit. He's a member of the American Amateur Printers Assn., a group of about 300 persons who want only to put their thoughts into print.

The next edition of the Minipost may come out within a few days or a month. It will appear whenever its independent ad salesman-publisher-editor-printer gets around to it. And whenever another editorial target shows itself.

STORY . . . it's a one-man operation.

Everybody Gets In Act

Omaha (AP) — A District 66 school bus carrying 34 students to Oakdale school collided with an Omaha Public Works Department truck Tuesday morning.

Officials said 17 of the children on the bus were injured, none of them seriously.

A fire truck, dispatched to the collision scene as a precautionary measure, hit a patch of icy pavement, and spun, then slid backward into a parked car. The impact sent the car, occupied by Mrs. Judy Retelsdorf and her son, into a parked police cruiser, causing minor damage.

Mrs. Retelsdorf was hospitalized for observation, while her son, Mike, 11, was treated for minor injuries and released.

Superintendents Hear Open Meeting Caution

By The Associated Press

Members of the Nebraska County Superintendents Association have been given a briefing on some practices that might put them in violation of the state's open meetings law.

"There have been some abuses of closed session" by school boards, according to Merlin Menagh, a consultant to the Department of Education.

Menagh told the county officials to read and digest the open meetings law and be aware of penalties for its violation.

One district, a superintendent said, has a policy of excluding all school age children from its meetings. "I would think it would be illegal to keep out anyone," Menagh said.

Menagh stressed that votes must be taken in public and executive sessions must be for stipulated reasons as outlined in the law.

Superintendents discussed legal requirements that the boards meet at least once a month with an announced agenda.

One board, a superintendent said, "meets" by telephone, particularly during the summer.

"Then you would be in conflict with the open meetings law," he was told, "unless you're on a party line."

The humorous reply did not daunt one superintendent, who said of the telephone meetings "we've been doing it for 20 years."

Superintendents Choose Tuton President-Elect

Stanley Tuton, Keya Paha County superintendent of schools, has been named president-elect of the Nebraska County Superintendents Association, succeeding Wilsie Cross, Arthur County superintendent.

Cross, county superintendent for 19 years and veteran Sandhills rancher-philosopher, will become president Jan. 1.

Other officers chosen for 1976 are:

Frieda Josten, Antelope County school superintendent since 1957 and a teacher for 35 years, is the outgoing association president.

Friend Man, 25, Said Apparently Out Of Danger

Friend (UPI) — John Chase, 25, who was found unconscious Sunday in an apartment where two other men were asphyxiated, Tuesday was reported out of apparent danger at Warren Memorial Hospital.

Authorities said Chase, who was found on the stairway of the apartment, said he had been sleeping in the basement and was overcome while trying to escape.

The two victims were James Range, 22, who lived in the apartment with Chase, and Ron Melton, 23, Exeter, who was visiting and spending the night Saturday.

Preliminary autopsy reports indicated the two died of a combination of carbon monoxide poisoning and lack of oxygen. Saline County Sheriff Ed Prokop said carbon monoxide escaping from a rusted-out duct apparently built up when the furnace thermostat stuck.

The bodies were found by Range's father Sunday afternoon.

Group Requests Public Hearings On Discharges

Omaha (AP) — An Omaha-based environmental group has called for public hearings on possibly hazardous discharges into the Missouri River by the Omaha Public Power District's (OPPD) Fort Calhoun No. 2 nuclear power plant.

The Quality Environment Council said enough questions about thermal and radiation discharges have arisen at other U.S. nuclear plants to merit hearings on OPPD's proposed discharge.

The State Dept. recently announced it is considering OPPD's application to make discharges after the plant is built.

The discharge of waste water from the nuclear plant would be about 20 miles upstream from Omaha's major drinking water inlet, putting burdens on OPPD and the Metropolitan Utilities District, Omaha's water supplier, to insure that water is not contaminated, said Dr. Jim Wood, council chairman.

Body Of Orchard Man Found Near His Home

Orchard (AP) — The body of a rural Orchard man, missing since last Saturday in the foul weather which hit the state, was found Monday night in a cornfield about three-quarters of a mile from his home southwest of here.

The victim, Herbert H. Eckmann, 45, was last seen in Orchard late last Saturday afternoon.

Investigators said Eckmann's car stalled in a snowdrift, and Eckmann apparently tried to walk home.

Authorities said Eckmann's two children, who were riding a school bus Monday, saw their father's abandoned car, and told their mother.

More than 25 searchers, aided by 10 snowmobiles, then took to the fields looking for Eckmann.

His body was found about 10 p.m. Monday, approximately 250 yards from his auto.

Antelope County officials attributed Eckmann's death to exposure.

Eckmann becomes Nebraska's sixth storm-related victim since cold weather and snow hit the state two weeks ago, according to an Associated Press count.

Meeting Set Friday For Church Women

Church Women United will meet at Westminster Presbyterian Church at 10 a.m. Friday.

Luncheon reservations may be made at the church.

Figure Load

New York (UPI) — Christmas lights won't overload your house circuits and blow fuses if you figure your lighting load in advance. Most home circuits carry 1,800 watts each, but some newer ones can carry 2,400 watts each. To determine the total wattage for Christmas lights, multiply the wattage shown on each type of bulb by the number of bulbs per chain.

Angola War Worries South Africa

©The New York Times

By PETER HAWTHORNE

Johannesburg, South Africa — South African involvement in the civil war in neighboring Angola is being made increasingly clear in official and unofficial statements, and the situation has become a focus of national discussion.

Prime Minister John Vorster is saying that with the Soviet Union aiding one of the three liberation movements in Angola, the vast former Portuguese territory could become a major crisis for South Africa unless the Western powers were prepared to help defuse it quickly.

South Africa is furnishing military advisers and weapons to black anti-Communist forces in Angola, which are also getting American help. Defense sources have disclosed that a 150-man South African unit is based at Calueque, an Angolan hydroelectic project on the Cunene River, about 20 miles north of Angola's border with South-West Africa.

It has also been officially reported that South African forces are prepared to move as far as 200 miles into Angola in what is described as hot pursuit of marauders.

Persuade Western World

The official statements, as well as authoritative leaks, are clearly aimed at trying to persuade the Western world, particularly the United States, to force the Soviet Union to back down.

South African Defense Minister Piet W. Botha, emphasizing at a news conference this week that South Africa is dedicated to any action to keep communism out of Africa, asserted that it should be concerted Western action.

Last week Botha told correspondents that South Africa had spoken out for years against the Soviet build-up in the Indian Ocean area and against what he described as the Soviet springboard established in the former Portuguese colony of Mozambique, on Africa's southeastern coast. Now, he said, South Africa is warning against a Soviet attempt to control Angola, on the southwestern coast, and the Atlantic sea route.

'Flames Could Spread'

Summing up the widespread feelings of frustration here over the Angolan situation, an editorial in The Johannesburg Star, which is not known as a supporter of the Vorster government, said: "The West fiddles while Angola burns, and the flames could spread throughout southern Africa."

Musical request programs on national radio are aimed at "our boys somewhere in the front line." All Christmas leave has been canceled for troops scheduled for duty along the Angola-South-West Africa border, and some of the most experienced combat soldiers have been sent to the border area. Several thousand blacks have been moved from the area to create a restricted zone.

South African military correspondents — in the last year almost every newspaper has appointed specialists on defense — were called in Monday to view photographs and documents that purport to show Soviet amphibious armored cars in Novo Redondo, deep in Angolan territory, and captured training manuals used by the Cubans who are said to be there. The South Africans did not say how they came by the material.

Russian Support

Adm. H. H. Biermann, commander of South Africa's military services, told the correspondents that he had evidence that the forces of the Popular Movement for the Liberation of Angola, which announced the establishment of a government in the capital, Luanda, on Nov. 10, were enjoying "the direct support of Russia."

He said they were better equipped than the other groups, the National Front for the Liberation of Angola and the National Union for the Total Liberation of Angola. These anti-Communist forces will have difficulty containing the Soviet-backed troops if the West does not provide large-scale support, he added.

At least 13 South African military men were killed last month in the area. This contrasts with the 40 members of the defense forces and the police killed in antiguerrilla border action in South Africa and Rhodesia in eight years.

A year or so ago the Angola-South-West Africa border was one more place to which South African servicemen were assigned for their one-year conscription. Now "the border," as it is known, is regarded as a harsh assignment, but young white Africans are lining up to serve against what is defined as a Communist threat to take over areas from whites in southern Africa.

Senate Passes Anti-Price Fixing Bill

Washington (UPI) — The Senate passed and sent to the White House Tuesday legislation striking down state "fair trade" laws which allow manufacturers to fix the price of their goods on the retail level.

The bill, passed earlier by the House, repeals the exemption from anti-trust laws which permitted the state "fair trade" laws. The Senate passed the bill by voice vote.

President Ford, who backed the legislation, is expected to sign it. It was strongly backed by consumer groups.

In effect, the "fair trade" laws force competing retailers to charge identical prices for the same product, thereby preventing any price competition.

"Fair trade" laws are now in effect in 36 states. The principal products involved are stereo components, television sets, major appliances, mattresses, toiletries, kitchenware, watches, jewelry, glassware, wallpapers, bicycles, some types of clothing, liquor and prescription drugs.

Liquor would not be affected by repeal of the state "fair trade" laws because the 21st Amendment to the Constitution gives the states broad powers over the sale of alcoholic beverages.

Congress first granted state "fair trade" laws an exemption from anti-trust statutes in 1937 after the Supreme Court ruled them in violation. After Congress acted, some manufacturers attempted to set the retail prices not only of retailers who signed "fair trade" contracts but also retailers who did not.

The Supreme Court ruled this practice illegal but Congress again stepped in and in 1952 allowed states to pass "fair trade" laws with non-signer clauses as long as the manufacturer procured the signature of one retailer to a contract.

Withholding Could Be Wrong On Your Paychecks In 1976

Washington (UPI) — Tax withholding for millions of Americans could be in error for the first six weeks of 1976 because of congressional delay in acting on income tax legislation, the Internal Revenue Service said Tuesday.

But any errors could be corrected in pay periods beginning in about mid-February, an IRS spokesman said.

IRS Commissioner Donald Alexander said the situation could arise because employers may be "called upon to comply with impossible requirements" in computing payrolls from existing withholding forms.

For moderate income workers, the IRS said, errors probably would be in the range of about $3 to $5 per week, either above or below the proper withholding.

For example, using current tables, withholding could be $36.80 or $42.60 for a married worker with two children who earns $200 a week and is paid twice monthly. Or the withholding rate might be lower than $36.80.

When multiplied for all workers and professionals, an estimated $900 million in buying power could be removed from the economy in January alone, a spokesman said.

The higher tax rate combined with the Jan. 1 resumption of payroll tax withholding on workers who earned more than $14,100 this year could have a brief downward impact on the nation's recovery from its worst recession in 35 years.

The problem arises because the income tax reduction act of 1975 expires Dec. 31 and Congress has not decided whether to continue the tax cut, increase it, reduce it, or return to the higher taxing level of 1974.

The House is scheduled to begin debate on tax cut legislation Wednesday. Any bill clearing the House also must pass the Senate and be approved by President Ford before becoming law.

When and if a tax cut is enacted, an IRS spokesman said, it will take 45 days to print withholding tables and distribute them to employers.

Congress also could temporarily avert the problems for employers by passing a simple resolution to extend the 1975 tax reduction for a few months.

Alexander discussed the payroll problems at the annual tax conference of the American Institute of Certified Public Accountants.

For tax accountants and employers, he said, it's "a cliffhanger."

Frustrated Safety Chairman Resigns

WASHINGTON (AP) — Richard O. Simpson resigned Tuesday as chairman of the U.S. Consumer Product Safety Commission, expressing frustration with the White House's refusal to say whether he would be reappointed or not.

Simpson told President Ford in a letter that the delay in announcing reappointment or in selecting a successor had resulted in a "negative impact" by creating uncertainty in the five-member agency.

Simpson was appointed chairman when the commission was created in May 1973. He said he had tried unsuccessfully to determine since his appointment expired last Oct. 26 whether he was a viable candidate for reappointment or when a successor would be selected.

Simpson had been involved in disputes with both President Ford and former President Richard Nixon over what Simpson regarded as matters of integrity and principle.

He attempted unsuccessfully to block the White House from requiring political clearance of top officials appointed to the commission, on the grounds that the commission had been created as a politically independent regulatory agency. He said traditional political clearance would compromise that position.

Feminist Ideals Also Anarchist

By CYNTHIA JOHNSON
Star Staff Writer

Anarchists "at best . . . have been insensitive" to the concerns of women, according to Dr. Sarah Hoagland, assistant professor of philosophy at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln.

Yet feminism and anarchism have certain things in common, she said Tuesday.

Speaking during the Student Y-sponsored Women Speak '75, Dr. Hoagland said, "It is not my purpose to say there is an anarchist faction" in the feminist movement. Nor is it correct to say that if there were an anarchist movement, all feminists would join it.

Rejection Of Idols

But the anarchist's rejection of idols, models and authority; emphasis on self-reliance; and search for means other than violence to effect change are mirrored in the feminist outlook, Dr. Hoagland said.

For the anarchist, "the primary evil is coercion" of the individual by society, the state, or any other form of authority.

Feminists also have rejected the idea of subserviance to authority, Dr. Hoagland said.

"We are tired of others doing our thinking for us," she said, adding that feminists who favor abortion are now demanding the right to control their own bodies.

Feminists do not want to be coereced, nor do they want to coerce anyone else, she said.

And she noted that the feminist opposition to hierarchical structures is evidenced by the decentralized make-up of feminist organizations such as the National Organization for Women (NOW).

"It's very hard to define feminism, and I see that as a good sign," a tendency away from centralized authority.

Feminists also resemble anarchists in their rejection of certain idols or models, Dr. Hoagland said. They are challenging the traditional concepts of woman as housewife and temptress.

Nor does the "false idol of competition" have relevance for most feminists, she siad. "I've seen very few feminists who are competing against their sisters."

Turning to the concept of selfreliance, Dr. Hoaglund said, for feminists "the ability to stand on our own two feet is of primary importance."

Tendency To Protect

The tendency to "protect" women is a disservice in two ways. Protection "becomes a way of keeping women in their place," and it prevents them from learning to face reality, Dr. Hoagland said.

Women are vulnerable to rape because they have not been taught to be selfreliant, she continued.

Feminism also resembles anarchism in its rejection of change by violence, Dr. Hoagland said.

"Violence, I think, gets us nowhere," and it "seems to not function in most feminist thought.

"We're not after confrontation."

'They Just Go Shopping'—Spence

By ERIC KRAMER
The Associated Press

John Spence says his house has been burglarized eight times in the last two months and he has lost more than $100 in cash, two stereo sets, three winter coats, more than a pound of marijuana and all but one pair of underwear.

"One thing I found absolutely uncomprehensible is what you can get away with," he said. "People walk into my house and just go shopping."

Spence reported only three burglaries to police because he said he was afraid to tell them about the marijuana.

Spence said police officers came to his house, a half block from Lincoln's main street, and said, "Yeah, you've been ripped off."

He said he demanded they do something. The officers called another policeman who was experienced in fingerprinting. Spence said the other officer came to his house, looked around and said it was useless to look for fingerprints unless a suspect was in custody.

Inspector Roger LaPage of the Lincoln Police Department said officers investigating burglaries look for fingerprints "if articles appear to have been touched where prints can be obtained." Of the burglaries, LaPage said, "If he's had five others, he ought to tell us about it."

On a tip from a service station attendant across the street, police arrested a juvenile coming out of Spence's house. "I thought my problems were solved," Spence said.

But the juvenile escaped from the county detention center and Spence's home was hit again. Spence said his son learned that the juvenile lived alternately at the homes of two girl friends. But he said he could not get the police to raid both houses at once.

However, the juvenile was spotted walking down the street, arrested and locked in the City-County Jail.

"He was under lock and key and again I thought my troubles were over," Spence said.

But Spence's son called him at work and said, "We've been ripped off again."

After learning that a private security guard cost $8.50 an hour, Spence said, "I'm just waiting."

Viet Doctors To Test For State Licenses

Omaha (AP) — Thirty Vietnamese physicians who have come to Nebraska will take examinations within the next two months, a step toward a license to practice in the state.

Dr. Jack Watkins, coordinator of the Vietnamese education program at the University of Nebraska Medical Center, said 20 of the doctors have registered to take the national examination required of all graduates of foreign schools.

This examination must be passed before the physicians can take Nebraska's licensing examination.

The national examination, administered at various places around the country, also will be given at the medical center. It is scheduled for Jan. 21.

Dr. Watkins said the formal review course for the Vietnamese physicians will be completed Dec. 18.

Paroled Youth Is Charged In Omaha Robbery

Omaha (AP) — A second youth who was involved in a 1972 department store breakin involving the death of a security guard has been charged with robbery

Larry Dwayne Ebberson, 17, of Omaha, who was on parole from the Kearney Youth Development Center, was arrested last weekend with another youth, police said.

Deputy County Atty. Edward Warin said Ebberson is charged with robbing Naomi Faye Hughs of Omaha Nov. 23.

Ebberson and two other youths were committed to the Kearney center in March, 1973 following the 1972 Brandeis break-in, in which security guard Leonard Parkinson, 79, was shot to death.

Lower Platte Units To Meet

The board of directors of the Lower Platte South Natural Resources District will meet Dec 15 in David City for a joint meeting with the board of directors of the Lower Platte North Natural Resources District

State law requires the boards of two districts within each river basin to meet jointly at least twice each year to review and coordinate efforts for the maximum benefit of the basin.

The Lower Platte South District board also will meet Dec. 17 in Lincoln.

NPPD Station Now Operating At 88% Capacity

Columbus (AP) — The Nebraska Public Power District says its recently repaired Cooper Nuclear Station at Brownville now is generating about 685,000 kilowatts of electricity. That's about 88% of the unit's 778,000-kilowatt capacity.

NPPD said no vibrations or erratic readings have been detected since a partial fix performed in October to eliminate an incore vibration problem in the reactor.

The plant was started up again on Nov. 2 after being shut down since Sept. 27 to fix the vibration problem. The plant is expected to operate at the limited power level until next spring when it will be shut down for refueling and completion of the fix. NPPD said the plant should be able to operate at full capacity after that.

Bell Wants Federal Hands Off Grain

Omaha (AP) — The government should stay out of the grain export business as much as possible, says the head of international affairs for the U.S. Agriculture Department.

Richard E. Bell, assistant secretary of agriculture for internal affairs and commodity programs, said that "except for setting board parameters of policy," the federal government should allow private business and farmers to make decisions on grain exports.

Defending President Ford's grain export program with the Soviet Union, Bell said, "exports have enabled decision-making in American agriculture to be put back into the hands of American farmers."

Bell said an expanded grain market has given farmers incentive to respond fully to market growth.

"We no longer have the acreage restrictions which for so many years served to restrict grain production along historic lines," he said.

Bell was in Omaha to speak at a meeting of the Country Elevator Council of the National Grain and Feed Association.

Direct Flights Asked Of Egypt

Cairo (UPI) — Sweden has asked Egypt to look into the possibilty of flying Northern Europeans directly to Upper Nile tourist centers "because they are deprived of warmth all day long."

Al Gomhouria newspaper said the report had been submitted to Egyptian tourist firms for study, even though Scandinavians account for little more than 1% of tourists here

"The report requested that approval be granted by Egyptian aviation authorities for the landing of planes carrying tourists from countries in the north directly in Luxor and Aswan and not in Cairo."

Steer Expected To Live After 8 Days Under Drift

Amherst (AP) — Farmer Dean Bish of rural Amherst says one of his Angus steers is expected to live after surviving eight days under a snow drift

Bish said the steer now weighs about 1,000 pounds, down about 300 from what it was when it last was seen Nov. 19. It was found buried in snow eight days later.

Two pheasant hunters, Rick Ostrander of Kearney and Wayne Fisher of Riverdale, said they saw steam coming from a drift and notified Bish, who dug the steer out of four feet of snow.

Bish said the steer has a bad cold and is under medication in a shelter.

Wise To Make 'Audrey Rose'

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Robert Wise, who produced and directed two Oscar winners, "The Sound of Music" and "West Side Story," will next film "Audrey Rose" for United Artists.

Vision Care Sought

St. Louis (UPI) — Most Americans over 65 would like the federal government's Medicare program to assume the cost of taking care of their vision More than 78% responding to a 40-state survey said they pay for vision care out of their own pockets. The study made by the American Optometric Association and its auxiliary said 48% blamed lack of money for their failure to seek eye care the last time they felt it was needed.

Angola War Worries South Africa

©The New York Times

By PETER HAWTHORNE

Johannesburg, South Africa — South African involvement in the civil war in neighboring Angola is being made increasingly clear in official and unofficial statements, and the situation has become a focus of national discussion.

Prime Minister John Vorster is saying that with the Soviet Union aiding one of the three liberation movements in Angola, the vast former Portuguese territory could become a major crisis for South Africa unless the Western powers were prepared to help defuse it quickly.

South Africa is furnishing military advisers and weapons to black anti-Communist forces in Angola, which are also getting American help. Defense sources have disclosed that a 150-man South African unit is based at Calueque, an Angolan hydroelectric project on the Cunene River, about 20 miles north of Angola's border with South-West Africa.

It has also been officially reported that South African forces are prepared to move as far as 200 miles into Angola in what is described as hot pursuit of marauders.

Persuade Western World

The official statements, as well as authoritative leaks, are clearly aimed at trying to persuade the Western world, particularly the United States, to force the Soviet Union to back down.

South African Defense Minister Piet W. Botha, emphasizing at a news conference this week that South Africa is dedicated to any action to keep communism out of Africa, asserted that it should be concerted Western action.

Last week Botha told correspondents that South Africa had spoken out for years against the Soviet build-up in the Indian Ocean area and against what he described as the Soviet springboard established in the former Portuguese colony of Mozambique, on Africa's southeastern coast. Now, he said, South Africa is warning against a Soviet attempt to control Angola, on the southwestern coast, and the Atlantic sea route.

'Flames Could Spread'

Summing up the widespread feelings of frustration here over the Angolan situation, an editorial in The Johannesburg Star, which is not known as a supporter of the Vorster government, said: "The West fiddles while Angola burns, and the flames could spread throughout southern Africa."

Musical request programs on national radio are aimed at "our boys somewhere in the front line." All Christmas leave has been canceled for troops scheduled for duty along the Angola-South-West Africa border, and some of the most experienced combat soldiers have been sent to the border area. Several thousand blacks have been moved from the area to create a restricted zone.

South African military correspondents — in the last year almost every newspaper has appointed specialists on defense — were called in Monday to view photographs and documents that purport to show Soviet amphibious armored cars in Novo Redondo, deep in Angolan territory, and captured training manuals used by the Cubans who are said to be there. The South Africans did not say how they came by the material.

Russian Support

Adm. H. H. Biermann, commander of South Africa's military services, told the correspondents that he had evidence that the forces of the Popular Movement for the Liberation of Angola, which announced the establishment of a government in the capital, Luanda, on Nov. 10, were enjoying "the direct support of Russia."

He said they were better equipped than the other groups, the National Front for the Liberation of Angola and the National Union for the Total Liberation of Angola. These anti-Communist forces will have difficulty containing the Soviet-backed troops if the West does not provide large-scale support, he added.

At least 13 South African military men were killed last month in the area. This contrasts with the 40 members of the defense forces and the police killed in antiguerrilla border action in South Africa and Rhodesia in eight years.

A year or so ago the Angola-South-West Africa border was one more place to which South African servicemen were assigned for their one-year conscription. Now "the border," as it is known, is regarded as a harsh assignment, but young white Africans are lining up to serve against what is defined as a Communist threat to take over areas from whites in southern Africa.

Senate Passes Anti-Price Fixing Bill

Washington (UPI) — The Senate passed and sent to the White House Tuesday legislation striking down state "fair trade" laws which allow manufacturers to fix the price of their goods on the retail level.

The bill, passed earlier by the House, repeals the exemption from anti-trust laws which permitted the state "fair trade" laws. The Senate passed the bill by voice vote.

President Ford, who backed the legislation, is expected to sign it. It was strongly backed by consumer groups.

In effect, the "fair trade" laws force competing retailers to charge identical prices for the same product, thereby preventing any price competition.

"Fair trade" laws are now in effect in 36 states. The principal products involved are stereo components, television sets, major appliances, mattresses, toiletries, kitchenware, watches, jewelry, glassware, wallpapers, bicycles, some types of clothing, liquor and prescription drugs.

Liquor would not be affected by repeal of the state "fair trade" laws because the 21st Amendment to the Constitution gives the states broad powers over the sale of alcoholic beverages.

Congress first granted state "fair trade" laws an exemption from anti-trust statutes in 1937 after the Supreme Court ruled them in violation. After Congress acted, some manufacturers attempted to set the retail prices not only of retailers who signed "fair trade" contracts but also retailers who did not.

The Supreme Court ruled this practice illegal but Congress again stepped in and in 1952 allowed states to pass "fair trade" laws with non-signer clauses as long as the manufacturer procured the signature of one retailer to a contract.

Withholding Could Be Wrong On Your Paychecks In 1976

Washington (UPI) — Tax withholding for millions of Americans could be in error for the first six weeks of 1976 because of congressional delay in acting on income tax legislation, the Internal Revenue Service said Tuesday.

But any errors could be corrected in pay periods beginning in about mid-February, an IRS spokesman said.

IRS Commissioner Donald Alexander said the situation could arise because employers may be "called upon to comply with impossible requirements" in computing payrolls from existing withholding forms.

For moderate income workers, the IRS said, errors probably would be in the range of about $3 to $5 per week, either above or below the proper withholding.

For example, using current tables, withholding could be $36.80 or $42.60 for a married worker with two children who earns $200 a week and is paid twice monthly. Or the withholding rate might be lower than $36.80.

When multiplied for all workers and professionals, an estimated $900 million in buying power could be removed from the economy in January alone, a spokesman said.

The higher tax rate combined with the Jan. 1 resumption of payroll tax withholding on workers who earned more than $14,100 this year could have a brief downward impact on the nation's recovery from its worst recession in 35 years.

The problem arises because the income tax reduction act of 1975 expires Dec. 31 and Congress has not decided whether to continue the tax cut, increase it, reduce it, or return to the higher taxing level of 1974.

The House is scheduled to begin debate on tax cut legislation Wednesday. Any bill clearing the House also must pass the Senate and be approved by President Ford before becoming law.

When and if a tax cut is enacted, an IRS spokesman said, it will take 45 days to print withholding tables and distribute them to employers.

Congress also could temporarily avert the problems for employers by passing a simple resolution to extend the 1975 tax reduction for a few months.

Alexander discussed the payroll problems at the annual tax conference of the American Institute of Certified Public Accountants.

For tax accountants and employers, he said, it's "a cliffhanger."

Frustrated Safety Chairman Resigns

WASHINGTON (AP) — Richard O. Simpson resigned Tuesday as chairman of the U.S. Consumer Product Safety Commission, expressing frustration with the White House's refusal to say whether he would be reappointed or not.

Simpson told President Ford in a letter that the delay in announcing reappointment or in selecting a successor had resulted in a "negative impact" by creating uncertainty in the five-member agency.

Simpson was appointed chairman when the commission was created in May 1973. He said he had tried unsuccessfully to determine since his appointment expired last Oct. 26 whether he was a viable candidate for reappointment or when a successor would be selected.

Simpson had been involved in disputes with both President Ford and former President Richard Nixon over what Simpson regarded as matters of integrity and principle.

He attempted unsuccessfully to block the White House from requiring political clearance of top officials appointed to the commission, on the grounds that the commission had been created as a politically independent regulatory agency. He said traditional political clearance would compromise that position.

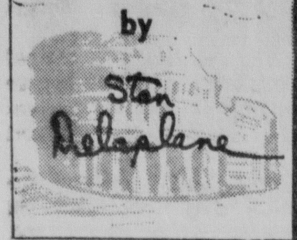
POSTCARD

by Stan Delaplane



San Francisco — Santa Claus was taking a couple of aspirin in the men's room when I walked in.

"Not that I expect they'll do any good," he said. "The way the wind whips down Market Street would give anyone the flu."

He straightened his beard, picked up his hand bell and walked out. Not often you get to talk to Santa Claus. Realize Santa needs Kleenex, even as you and I.

Aspirin sales rise sharply at Christmas. (Merry Christmas Mr. Bayer!) It's a headache time of year. Wassail and woe. Bills and Black Label. Tempers fray and skulls feel like basketballs.

There are ways to avoid this.

Second, don't be a woman. (There goes half of the survivors.)

Third, get some mileage on yourself. (Exit the under-30s crowd.)

Fourth, have as little education as possible. (Out go the college people. In come the dropouts.)

This was worked out by a group of doctors who reported: "More headaches occur with professional people than non-professional. Unmarried people more than married. Women more than men. Educated more than uneducated. The young more than the old."

The medics sent in the report. The next person walked in their office, they said: "Take a couple of aspirin and drink a lot of fluids."

That's what I think.

With my children, the end of the Santa Claus story has not reduced their demands as I had expected.

When they were small I could always say: "Well, now, a real locomotive. It would be too big for his sleigh. Maybe a toy one."

I said: "D'ye think I'm made of money? We're headed for the poorhouse, hear the news?"

(Who said the young get more headaches than the old?)

☆ ☆ ☆

On a happier note — from our own Bureau of Everlasting Happiness — we find that one of every three men on a farm is a bachelor.

They are better and smarter pets than dogs. This is vouched for by the American Museum of National History whose pig-loving people reported:

"A pig may not be very pretty — except to another pig. But if you clean up a pig it will keep itself clean. You can make a pig more attractive by giving it a bath and tying a ribbon on its tail."

☆ ☆ ☆

"Can we get a pig for Christmas?" said the children. I said: "Fetch me a couple of aspirin and a sip of gin to wash it down. I feel a headache coming on."

'Lassie' Show's Ex-Child Star To Be Tried

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Former child actor Thomas Noel Rettig, who starred in the Lassie television series in the 1950s and early 1960s, will be tried Jan. 6 on charges of conspiring to smuggle cocaine from Peru.

Rettig, 33, who pleaded innocent to the charges, was allowed by U.S. District Court Judge Manuel L. Real to remain free on bail pending trial.

Authorities said Rettig was arrested in April and accused of trying to smuggle cocaine from Peru in a bottle containing a popular Peruvian liqueur.

Police Think Robberies Linked

By GORDON WINTERS
Star Staff Writer

Police are operating under the belief that three and possibly four armed robberies in Lincoln within nine days are linked.

Inspector Roger LaPage said similarities in the descriptions of the robberies and the manner in which they committed the holdups support such a conclusion.

The three holdups police believe are linked are those that occurred nov. 27th at the H & L Beverage Store, 27th and Holdrege, Nov. 29 at the Deep Rock Gas Station, 27th and Y and the Monday night robbery of the Derby Gas Station, 17th and Washington.

The fourth that may be linked is the daylight robbery of Olson's Pantry at 1801 K on Nov. 24.

The first three robberies were committed by two young men. The number increased to three, however, in the latest robbery.

Revolvers were used in all four robberies, although a sawed-off shotgun was also used at H & L and a knife was used at Derby.

No one has been injured in the robberies, although the 65-year-old clerk at Olson's Pantry was grabbed around the neck from behind.

In that robbery attendant Danny Allen, 18, said he was behind the counter doing bookwork when someone pushed his face up and shoved a long-barreled revolver in his face.

"O.K. Give me all the money," Allen said the youth told him. another youth was holding a knife with a five or six inch blade at his side, Allen said.

He said the three ransacked the desk, cash register and told him to open the safe, from which about $400 was taken.

Just before running out the door and down the alley the vocal one of the three told him, "You squeal and I'm going to kill you."

The apparent leader of the trio, or at least the one who did the most talking, was described in police reports as being a black male about 16 years old, about 5 feet 9 inches tall, with a thin to medium build, wearing a dark blue stocking hat, a faded blue jean jacket, blue jeans, black leather jacket and a Halloween mask with a white flesh tone background.

The third was described by police as a young black male about 16 years, about 5 feet 7 inches tall, with a small build, wearing harness boots and a ski mask.

29% Of Rural School Teachers Lack B.S.

More than one out of every four rural Nebraska teachers does not have a bachelor's degree, a Nebraska State Education Association report indicates.

But the number of teachers with the minimum college degree has increased by 7% since last year, says the NSEA report distributed at the Nebraska County Superintendents Association meeting which concluded Tuesday.

The survey of salaries and conditions for Class I schools with one to six teachers indicated about 71% of all rural teachers now hold at least a bachelor's degree compared with 64% during the 1974-75 school year.

Nearly 74% of Nebraska's 1,241 school districts, more districts than any other state, are small Class I schools for kindergarten through eighth grade only.

There still is a lack of uniform salary schedules among the small schools, according to NSEA executive secretary Paul Belz.

Salary range is from $4,050 to $15,500. Average for the current year is $7,259 compared to $6,825 a year ago. Masters degree salary range is from $5,850 to $13,049, up about $1,000.

"Salaries paid rural teachers are still considerably lower than salaries paid teachers in other larger classes of districts," Belz said. That information is based on Nebraska Education Department reports.

The number of teaching jobs in rural Class I schools continued to decline, but not rapidly. There were 1,299 teachers surveyed this year, a drop of 44.

Nearly 9% of the teachers surveyed had less than a junior college education. Some in that group are paid as much as $9,149.

Jane Dien, associate professor of French at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln, will be honored by the French government Dec. 9 when she receives the Order of Academic Palms.

France has conferred the order since 1806 to honor writers, artists and educators. Prof. Dien has directed an educational exchange program involving NU students and students from the University of Bordeaux in France since 1965. She also directs a similar program for graduate students.

The order will be presented by Jean Beaulieu, French cultural attache in Chicago, at 1:30 p.m. in the Nebraska Union.

Ames, Iowa (UPI) — Design and construction authorization for most of a plan to build a new north-south freeway and bypass of the Davenport central business district was indefinitely deferred by the Iowa Transportation Commission.

Shotgun Pellets Hit Lincoln Man

The Lancaster County sheriff's office said Bruce Barnhouse, of 1819 S. 10th, was hunting with Terry Derby, 27, when a rabbit ran between the men. Derby fired a shotgun, hitting Barnhouse in his right arm.

Barnhouse was treated and released from Lincoln General Hospital.

Lawrence OKs School Bonds

Lincoln Star Special

Lawrence — A $315,000 school bond issue won approval at the polls here Tuesday by a vote of 197-170.

Funds will be used for expansion of the Lawrence public schools including a woodworking shop, music room, multi-purpose room, classroom, two locker rooms and a kitchen.

Lawrence is located in Nuckolls County in south central Nebraska.

Havelock Sets Annual Parade This Saturday

The annual Havelock Christmas parade, which marks the official arrival of Santa Claus to the Havelock Community, is scheduled for 2 p.m. Saturday.

The parade, sponsored by the Havelock Businessmen's Assn., will start at Havelock Ave. and Touzalin, proceed east along Havelock to 66th, turn north at 66th to Platte Ave., then continue west along Platte until Touzalin.

In addition to Santa, the parade will feature Mayor Helen Boosalis, City Council members, Fire Chief Dallas Johnson, several car clubs, horses and local high school bands.

SAC Colonel Now Brigadier

Cheyenne, Wyo. (AP) — A Strategic Air Command spokesman says Col. Christopher Adams, outgoing commander of the 90th Strategic Missile Wing at Warran Air Force Base here, is being promoted to the rank of brigadier general.

Adams is being transferred to SAC's 12th Air Division.

'Too Busy' Meyer May Cost County

County taxpayers may have to fork over an extra $10,000 to $20,000 because of the continuing courthouse feud.

County real estate needs to be reassessed for insurance purposes, and the commissioners have asked County Assessor Fritz Meyer's assistance.

But Meyer has been just "too busy" to meet with the board, Chairman Jan Gauger explained Tuesday.

In addition to the usual courthouse conflicts, Meyer recently said he will oppose Mrs. Gaugers re-election try next year and is currently involved in a tiff with Commissioner Robert Colin.

The two men, both charged with failure to pay sales tax, are offering different stories about the filling in of a false tax report on a car Colin purchased.

If the board is forced to hire outsiders to do the job, it will cost between $10,000 to $20,000, Mrs. Gauger said.

The board also set up a public hearing Dec. 16 to hear a request from Inland Shores Marinas, Inc., for a retail beer license at Branched Oak Lake.

In other action the board tentatively approved paying one foster parent a higher rate than is allowed other foster parents.

The man has had apparent success with problem teenage boys, according to Bill Janike, chief juvenile probation officer. Janike recommended the man be paid $250 above the $145 normally paid for each foster child.

Drowned Girl's Mother Settles With Lancaster

The mother of an 11-year-old girl who drowned during a Lancaster Office of Mental Retardation (LOMR) picnic this summer has reached an out-of-court settlement on her damage claim with the county.

Carol Hier, of 283 Belmont, agreed to a $3,000 settlement with the county's insurance company, said County Atty. Ron Lahners. Mrs. Hier originally sought a $250,000 settlement.

Mrs. Hier's daughter, Carrie Lynn Zweerink, drowned July 3, during a LOMR-sponsored outing at Pawnee Lake.

PLEASE HELP SAVE A TREE!

Old, discarded phone books can make a paper mountain of pollution. Or, recycled, they can save many trees. The Salvation Army and the Lincoln Telephone Company are again working together to collect and recycle used 1975 telephone directories in the Lincoln area. And you can help so easily. Just drop your old directories in any Salvation Army drop box or take them to any Red Shield Store by December 15, 1975. Locations are listed below.

It is estimated that each ton of recycled paper saves about 17 trees. Together, we can save a small forest.

Broadcasters Group Tries To Halt Public Radio Study

By DICK HOLMAN
Star Staff Writer

A contingent of Nebraska Broacasters Association officials attempted Tuesday to persuade the Nebraska Educational Television Commission to abandon its study of a proposed public radio network for the state.

But at the end, Stuart Enterprises President Richard Chapin of Lincoln told NETV Commission Chairman Philip Heckman of Crete: "I haven't changed your mind, and you haven't changed mine."

NBA President Joe Stavas, general manager of KTTT in Columbus, told the commission there's "minimal need" for public or educational radio in Nebraska. He said commercial stations "are more than adequately serving (listeners') needs."

Stavas said current economic conditions make building a network unfeasible, because it "will immediately warrant added tax expenditures not only today, but in the years to come."

Nebraska commercial broadcasters, Stavas declared, are "not worried one bit" that their revenues or audiences would be eroded by public radio. That statement, however, conflicts with Stavas' earlier remarks to The Lincoln Star that the new FM network would threaten commercial broadcasters' livelihood.

A consultant in October recommended taking immediate action to begin building nine public radio stations in conjunction with existing NETV sites and equipment. The commission accepted the report and voted to study the proposals for a year.

Heckman and Commissioner Steven Sample, University of Nebraska executive vice president, stressed that the report has not been adopted or approved, and the commission has made no commitment to establish, fund or govern public radio.

Sample said any eventual commission vote would be advisory, anyway, with the final decision up to the governor and Legislature.

Stavas said there's "no way" the commission can "sit in Lincoln" and ascertain the needs of each Nebraska community for public radio. Chapin challenged the commission's authority to study the matter.

Jack McBride, commission secretary and NETV Network general manager, said former Gov. Norbert Tiemann issued an executive order designating the commission as the agency to advise and respond to questions about public TV and radio.

"It is totally appropriate," Heckman said, for the commission "to investigate the subject of educational radio."

Chapin said the consultant's report is "based on where we fail." Heckman said, "We didn't write the report."

To generate sales and revenue, commercial radio must operate within certain market limits, Heckman said, but the "taste of the public has to be lifted by options," even if only a small segment is interested at first.

Stating he supports the commercial radio role, Heckman noted those stations "have not" met some needs and "cannot," although "I would much prefer it." The issue, he said, is the appropriateness of exploring alternatives and "that's what we're doing."

Lincolnite Ron Kurtenbach of Sunrise Communications said he sensed "incredible hypocrisy" from the discussion.

The "larger issue," Kurtenbach said, is: "How sincerely are we interested in opening up communication?" He said commercial broadcasters are "more interested in making money."

The FCC has not bound them to satisfy public entertainment needs, Kurtenbach said, and "commercial broadcasters have a very, very poor record" of openness, public service and access.

Heckman said, "Commercial broadcasting is not on trial."

Asst. Supt. Craig K. Fullerton of the Omaha Public Schools told the commission the consultant's report on KIOS-FM is erroneous. The district-operated public radio station offers comprehensive programs that can be received in Lincoln as well as Omaha, Dr. Fullerton said.

But he supported establishing broader public radio offerings of culture and education, and to serve blind and print handicapped persons.

Commissioner Edwin C. Nelson of Chadron, chairman of the subcommittee studying public radio, said the panel will pursue its statewide investigation, evaluate the consultant's study and available programs, probably visit the Wisconsin public radio network and survey attitudes there.

The remainder of the $25,000 federal grant awarded for the original study will be sought to pay for the subcommittee's work, to be completed next fall, Dr. Nelson said.

In other business, the commission:

—Agreed to pursue NBA-commission-technical school cooperation to establish classroom and on-the-job engineering training, to reverse the current lack of qualified applicants.

—Voted to seek a federal matching grant and a construction permit to increase Channel 26 power in Omaha and improve reception. That won No. 2 priority behind the pending federal application to fund a new color mobile unit, for which state funds have already been appropriated.

Trial Set Dec. 19 For Assessor

County Assessor Fritz Meyer will stand trial Dec. 19 at 9 a.m. on a charge of aiding and abetting in the filing of false tax information.

The trial date was set by Lancaster County Judge Jeffre Cheuvront Tuesday. Meyer had pleaded innocent to the misdemeanor charge in late November.

The charge stems from the filing of a sales tax form which listed incorrect information. The form itself was filed by County Commissioner Robert Colin, who was found guilty of filing a false sales tax report, a misdemeanor.

Colin was found guilty and was placed on a six-month probation, which includes 30 hours of voluntary public service.

Colin, who has already met with his probation officer, said he was put on an honor system for the volunteer work and can do any work which is not a normal part of his commissioner duties.

He said he hopes to fulfill part of his service by ringing the Salvation Army Bell and helping to deliver Christmas baskets.

Meyer is accused of helping Colin fill out the sales tax form on a new car Colin purchased this fall. On the form a second car was listed as a trade in. The car was actually sold privately by Colin.

Antibusing Amendment Cut From Money Bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senate-House conferees, reaching final agreement on a $36 billion money bill, dropped a major Senate amendment Tuesday aimed against busing to desegregate schools.

The amendment, sponsored by Sen. Joseph R. Biden, Jr., D-Del., was designed to prevent the Health, Education and Welfare Department from withholding education aid funds from school districts which decline to desegregate by assigning teachers or students on the basis of race.

This will be taken back to the House for a separate vote there.

The Byrd proposal seeks to bar HEW from requring that school districts bus students to schools other than the one nearest their homes to end racial segregation.

Sen. Edward W. Brooke, R-Mass., one of the conferees and a foe of the antibusing amendments, told a reporter that the House managers of the bill would offer an amendment to water down the Byrd language before the vote on it.

San Francisco — Santa Claus was taking a couple of aspirin in the men's room when I walked in.

"Not that I expect they'll do any good," he said. "The way the wind whips down Market Street would give anyone the flu."

He straightened his beard, picked up his hand bell and walked out. Not often you get to talk to Santa Claus. Realize Santa needs Kleenex, even as you and I.

Aspirin sales rise sharply at Christmas. (Merry Christmas Mr. Bayer!) It's a headache time of year. Wassail and woe. Bills and Black Label. Tempers fray and skulls feel like basketballs.

There are ways to avoid this.

First, be happily married. (This knocks off children, widows and widowers. And the thousands who get divorced each year. However, forward! Whoever's left.)

Second, don't be a woman. (There goes half of the survivors.)

Third, get some mileage on yourself. (Exit the under-30s crowd.)

Fourth, have as little education as possible. (Out go the college people. In come the dropouts.)

This was worked out by a group of doctors who reported: "More headaches occur with professional people than non-professional. Unmarried people more than married. Women more than men. Educated more than uneducated. The young more than the old."

The medics sent in the report. The next person walked in their office, they said: "Take a couple of aspirin and drink a lot of fluids."

That's what I think.

With my children, the end of the Santa Claus story has not reduced their demands as I had expected.

When they were small I could always say. "Well, now, a real locomotive. It would be too big for his sleigh. Maybe a toy one."

I said: "D'ye think I'm made of money? We're headed for the poorhouse, hear the news?"

(Who said the young get more headaches than the old?)

☆ ☆ ☆

On a happier note — from our own Bureau of Everlasting Happiness — we find that one of every three men on a farm is a bachelor.

They are better and smarter pets than dogs. This is vouched for by the American Museum of National History whose pig-loving people reported:

"A pig may not be very pretty — except to another pig. But if you clean up a pig it will keep itself clean. You can make a pig more attractive by giving it a bath and tying a ribbon on its tail."

☆ ☆ ☆

"Can we get a pig for Christmas?" said the children. I said: "Fetch me a couple of aspirin and a sip of gin to wash it down. I feel a headache coming on."

'Lassie' Show's Ex-Child Star To Be Tried

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Former child actor Thomas Noel Rettig, who starred in the Lassie television series in the 1950s and early 1960s, will be tried Jan. 6 on charges of conspiring to smuggle cocaine from Peru.

Rettig, 33, who pleaded innocent to the charges, was allowed by U.S. District Court Judge Manuel L. Real to remain free on bail pending trial.

Authorities said Rettig was arrested in April and accused of trying to smuggle cocaine from Peru in a bottle containing a popular Peruvian liqueur.

STAR PHOTOS

CALL COMES IN . . . Novak calmly reacts to emergency.

By J. L. SCHMIDT
Star Staff Writer

Two Lincoln firemen stay awake all night to monitor the pulse of the city.

And quite a pulse it is, as the city lives and breathes long after most people have gone to bed.

In a carpeted room on the second floor of the main fire department headquarters, the two listen to a bank of radios, monitor a variety of calls for help, watch TV until sign off and then "talk to each other a lot" as their 10-hour shift ticks away in front of them on a digital clock.

They are the eyes and the ears of the other 250 firemen who are either asleep or off duty. They are the "meanies" who ring the bells that wake up the whole place in the middle of the night if a fire call comes in.

Radio Voice Steady

"Engine 8, Zone 9, 1234 Anystreet, fire in basement; Engine 8, Zone 9, 1234 Anystreet, fire in basement."

That message is enough to get the men into Engine 8 and, probably, to the scene of the fire in just a couple of minutes. For the two men maintaining the lonely vigil it represents a break in an otherwise quiet span of time.

There's a log sheet to be filled out, a pink card to be dated and filed and a master tape to be checked to insure that the call is properly recorded. The motions come with an automatic ease, made smoother with experience.

Evenings Busy

The duty shift begins at 5 p.m. and ends at 7 a.m. The main flurry of activity, depending on the day of the week and the time of the year, is between 3 and 6 p.m., according to one of the eight men who alternate the dispatch shifts, Hobart Boswell.

"That's when people are usually getting home from work and somebody finds that their slow cooker has speeded up or they decide to burn a last minute birthday cake or something," he added.

Boswell is joined by Jim Cary, Glenn Kempf, Dave Kennedy, Dwayne Novak, Bob Penner, Jerry Terry, Wes Schiermann and Keith Smith in rotating the shifts with a 14-hour night and a 10-hour day. The pairs work four days, 4 nights and then get four days off. Regular firemen work 24 hours on duty, 24 hours off duty, for two weeks then get eight days off, Boswell explained.

'Not All Easy-Going'

Take the last big storm, the thunderstorm which caused a lot of downed lines and then turned into a snowstorm. "Between 10 p.m. and 8 a.m. we had 51 fire calls alone, not counting the other emergency calls we get in a night," Boswell said.

Those "other" calls come via the 911 emergency line, and they run the gamut from bona fide emergencies to some rather humorous, if not weird, calls.

Lifescape

The switchboard and radio equipment contained in the alarm office cover all of Lancaster County. Dispatchers are responsible for 10 local fire stations, two rural stations and fire and rescue calls alike in Ceresco and Hallam. They can transfer calling parties to the Lincoln police or one of the local ambulance companies if necessary.

The 911 calls average about 18-20 a day, and may run from serious illness to a "public relations, community service type of thing," Boswell said.

Woman Loses Track

There's a little old blind lady who calls us "every now and then to ask what day it is, or what time it is if she loses track," he said. That falls in the category of "a genuine service," he adds.

Another obviously older lady once called to ask if the men knew where she could get some garden hose. In the same unwavering voice that the dispatchers use to calm a hysterical woman standing in her burning kitchen, they suggested the caller try a hardware store.

Sometimes the calls are serious and difficult. People react strangely to a situation of stress and excitement. It takes minutes, sometimes, for a dispatcher to extract something seemingly as simple as the address of an emergency.

One 911 call came from a friend of a friend who had called her to tell her she had taken an overdose of pills.

The "friend" couldn't exactly remember where the victim lived, but she thought it was in a northwest Lincoln trailer court.

Door-To-Door Search

The dispatchers sent a truck from an engine company out there and the firemen conducted a door-to-door search until the party was found. "Then they refused help, so the men went on to a stand-by emergency out at the airport," Boswell said.

The call for help came a few minutes later, "after the party had changed their minds," he added, and the alarm officer sent an ambulance.

Another call came from a person who had just come to Lincoln from Denver and was visiting an elderly relative who was having trouble breathing.

Gave Denver Address

"She called for help but gave us a Denver address when we asked her where she was," Boswell said. She said it was late when she got to town and she didn't really know where she was.

"We finally calmed her down enough that we got her to go outside to the nearest street corner and look at a sign and then come back in and tell us where she was," he added.

"It worked and we got help there right away."

Working at night, according to a consensus of the dispatchers, isn't all that bad, "once you get used to it."

Boswell noted, "I don't have a hard time staying awake. It's the getting to sleep that bothers me."

Police Think Robberies Linked

By GORDON WINTERS
Star Staff Writer

Police are operating under the belief that three and possibly four armed robberies in Lincoln within nine days are linked.

Inspector Roger LaPage said similarities in the descriptions of the robberies and the manner in which they committed the holdups support such a conclusion.

The three holdups police believe are linked are those that occurred nov. 27th at the H & L Beverage Store, 27th and Holdrege, Nov. 29 at the Deep Rock Gas Station, 27th and Y and the Monday night robbery of the Derby Gas Station, 17th and Washington.

The fourth that may be linked is the daylight robbery of Olson's Pantry at 1801 K on Nov. 24.

The first three robberies were committed by two young men. The number increased to three, however, in the latest robbery.

Revolvers were used in all four robberies, although a sawed-off shotgun was also used at H & L and a knife was used at Derby.

No one has been injured in the robberies, although the 65-year-old clerk at Olson's Pantry was grabbed around the neck from behind.

In that robbery attendant Danny Allen, 18, said he was behind the counter doing bookwork when someone pushed his face up and shoved a long-barreled revolver in his face.

"O.K. Give me all the money," Allen said the youth told him. another youth was holding a knife with a five or six inch blade at his side, Allen said.

He said the three ransacked the desk, cash register and told him to open the safe, from which about $400 was taken.

Just before running out the door and down the alley the vocal one of the three told him, "You squeal and I'm going to kill you."

The apparent leader of the trio, or at least the one who did the most talking, was described in police reports as being a black male about 16 years old, about 5 feet 9 inches tall, with a thin to medium build, wearing a dark blue stocking hat, a faded blue jean jacket, blue jeans, black leather jacket and a Halloween mask with a white flesh tone background.

The third was described by police as a young black male about 16 years, about 5 feet 7 inches tall, with a small build, wearing harness boots and a ski mask.

29% Of Rural School Teachers Lack B.S.

More than one out of every four rural Nebraska teachers does not have a bachelor's degree, a Nebraska State Education Association report indicates.

But the number of teachers with the minimum college degree has increased by 7% since last year, says the NSEA report distributed at the Nebraska County Superintendents Association meeting which concluded Tuesday.

The survey of salaries and conditions for Class I schools with one to six teachers indicated about 71% of all rural teachers now hold at least a bachelor's degree compared with 64% during the 1974-75 school year.

Nearly 74% of Nebraska's 1,241 school districts, more districts than any other state, are small Class I schools for kindergarten through eighth grade only.

There still is a lack of uniform salary schedules among the small schools, according to NSEA executive secretary Paul Belz.

Salary range is from $4,050 to $15,500. Average for the current year is $7,259 compared to $6,825 a year ago. Masters degree salary range is from $5,850 to $13,049, up about $1,000.

"Salaries paid rural teachers are still considerably lower than salaries paid teachers in other larger classes of districts," Belz said. That information is based on Nebraska Education Department reports.

The number of teaching jobs in rural Class I schools continued to decline, but not rapidly. There were 1,299 teachers surveyed this year, a drop of 44.

Nearly 9% of the teachers surveyed had less than a junior college education. Some in that group are paid as much as $9,149.

'Too Busy' Meyer May Cost County

County taxpayers may have to fork over an extra $10,000 to $20,000 because of the continuing courthouse feud.

County real estate needs to be reassessed for insurance purposes, and the commissioners have asked County Assessor Fritz Meyer's assistance.

But Meyer has been just "too busy" to meet with the board, Chairman Jan Gauger explained Tuesday.

In addition to the usual courthouse conflicts, Meyer recently said he will oppose Mrs. Gaugers re-election try next year and is currently involved in a tiff with Commissioner Robert Colin.

The two men, both charged with failure to pay sales tax, are offering different stories about the filling in of a false tax report on a car Colin purchased.

If the board is forced to hire outsiders to do the job, it will cost between $10,000 to $20,000, Mrs. Gauger said.

The board also set up a public hearing Dec. 16 to hear a request from Inland Shores Marinas, Inc., for a retail beer license at Branched Oak Lake.

In other action the board tentatively approved paying one foster parent a higher rate than is allowed other foster parents.

The man has had apparent success with problem teenage boys, according to Bill Janike, chief juvenile probation officer. Janike recommended the man be paid $250 above the $145 normally paid for each foster child.

Drowned Girl's Mother Settles With Lancaster

The mother of an 11-year-old girl who drowned during a Lancaster Office of Mental Retardation (LOMR) picnic this summer has reached an out-of-court settlement on her damage claim with the county.

Carol Hier, of 283 Belmont, agreed to a $3,000 settlement with the county's insurance company, said County Atty. Ron Lahners. Mrs. Hier originally sought a $250,000 settlement.

Mrs. Hier's daughter, Carrie Lynn Zweerink, drowned July 3, during a LOMR-sponsored outing at Pawnee Lake.

France has conferred the order since 1806 to honor writers, artists and educators. Prof. Dien has directed an educational exchange program involving NU students and students from the University of Bordeaux in France since 1965. She also directs a similar program for graduate students.

The order will be presented by Jean Beaulieu, French cultural attache in Chicago, at 1:30 p.m. in the Nebraska Union.

Ames, Iowa (UPI) — Design and construction authorization for most of a plan to build a new north-south freeway and bypass of the Davenport central business district was indefinitely deferred by the Iowa Transportation Commission.

Shotgun Pellets Hit Lincoln Man

The Lancaster County sheriff's office said Bruce Barnhouse, of 1819 S. 10th, was hunting with Terry Derby, 27, when a rabbit ran between the men. Derby fired a shotgun, hitting Barnhouse in his right arm.

Barnhouse was treated and released from Lincoln General Hospital.

Grandpa Grumpy Answered Santa's Call

By LIANE GUENTHER
Star Staff Writer

Grumpy had worked 22 years in a "normal" job, climbing poles and repairing lines for the New Jersey Power and Light Co.

Then one day he got a long-distance, person-to-person phone call from "Mr. S. Claus."

"Ho, ho, ho," the jolly voice at the end of the line said. "Grumpy? Is that you? I haven't heard from you since you were a little tyke."

But that wasn't why old Santa called.

"Christmas orders are already piling up, Grumpy," Mr. Claus hinted, sounding very weary. "And I'm not as spry as I once was. Sure could use some help in my shop."

Grumpy was flabbergasted. Being summoned by Santa was the biggest honor G. Grumpy ever had.

Grumpy was getting too old, anyhow, to scamper up those power poles. Besides, he needed a rest. So, he quit his job, packed his tools in a U-Haul and set out with his wife for the Arctic.

Somewhere en route he took a wrong turn, probably in Chicago. Suddenly he began seeing all kinds of billboards about "Big Red."

"Big Red? Oh, that must be Santa's nickname," he thought to himself. "We must be there."

It was cold and blizzardy, just as he had imagined.

"Is this the North Pole?" he asked a policeman.

"Might as well be," the policeman stammered through chattering teeth.

Grumpy, not accustomed to droll Midwestern humor, took the policeman at his words, found an apartment at Ruskin Place, unloaded his U-Haul and set up his shop in an empty flower store at Waverly.

Lots of children of all ages have grown fond of the over-sized elf who spends hours and hours at his work bench, sawing, sanding and staining little wooden toy trains and hobby horses, doll houses and pink elephants.

Shy youngsters usually hide behind mothers' skirts when they first visit the shop, said Grandpa (John McCrea) Grumpy. After playing peek-a-boo awhile, one little boy finally told his mommie, "He's not really grumpy, is he?"

Grammar school kids love to come in and push the wooden toys around, said Grandma (Doris) Grumpy, who's really pretty nice, too.

Grumpy says he'll try to duplicate any idea, using wood and plexiglass, as long as it's not too complicated. He's not a man for much detail; he likes to make simple toys that amuse children.

He also creates nut and fruit bowls, plant holders and lamps for "children at heart."

For now, Grandpa's is a small business, with outlets through Miller & Paine and, of course, Claus & Associates. The Grumpys have also advertised and sold some hobby horses through Country Music magazine.

With a little luck and planning, Grumpy said, the grandpa-grandma operation won't grow too big too fast.

"It was a shock at first to slow down," said the former utility man. "It's nice to look out at the snow instead of being out in it." Snow reminds him of when he used to live in the United States.

Please, don't anybody tell him this isn't the North Pole.

Broadcasters Group Tries To Halt Public Radio Study

By DICK HOLMAN
Star Staff Writer

A contingent of Nebraska Broacasters Association officials attempted Tuesday to persuade the Nebraska Educational Television Commission to abandon its study of a proposed public radio network for the state

But at the end, Stuart Enterprises President Richard Chapin of Lincoln told NETV Commission Chairman Philip Heckman of Crete "I haven't changed your mind, and you haven't changed mine "

Chapin heads the NBA committee working against public radio Heckman, Doane College president, initially suggested examining establishment of the network

NBA President Joe Stavas, general manager of KTTT in Columbus, told the commission there's "minimal need" for public or educational radio in Nebraska. He said commercial stations "are more than adequately serving (listeners') needs."

Stavas said current economic conditions make building a network unfeasible, because it "will immediately warrant added tax expenditures not only today, but in the years to come "

Nebraska commercial broadcasters, Stavas declared, are "not worried one bit ' that their revenues or audiences would be eroded by public radio That statement, however, conflicts with Stavas earlier remarks to The Lincoln Star that the new FM network would threaten commercial broadcasters' livelihood

A consultant in October recommended taking immediate action to begin building nine public radio stations in conjunction with existing NETV sites and equipment The commission accepted the report and voted to study the proposals for a year

Heckman and Commissioner Steven Sample, University of Nebraska executive vice president, stressed that the report has not been adopted or approved, and the commission has made no commitment to establish, fund or govern public radio.

Sample said any eventual commission vote would be advisory, anyway, with the final decision up to the governor and Legislature

Stavas said there's "no way" the commission can "sit in Lincoln" and ascertain the needs of each Nebraska community for public radio. Chapin challenged the commission's authority to study the matter

Jack McBride, commission secretary and NETV Network general manager, said former Gov Norbert Tiemann issued an executive order designating the commission as the agency to advise and respond to questions about public TV and radio

"It is totally appropriate," Heckman said, for the commission "to investigate the subject of educational radio "

Chapin said the consultant's report is "based on where we fail " Heckman said, "We didn t write the report "

To generate sales and revenue, commercial radio must operate within certain market limits, Heckman said, but the "taste of the public has to be lifted by options, ' even if only a small segment is interested at first

Stating he supports the commercial radio role, Heckman noted those stations "have not" met some needs and "cannot," although "I would much prefer it ' The issue, he said, is the appropriateness of exploring alternatives and "that's what we're doing "

Lincolnite Ron Kurtenbach of Sunrise Communications said he sensed "incredible hypocrisy ' from the discussion

The "larger issue," Kurtenbach said, is "How sincerely are we interested in opening up communication?" He said commercial broadcasters are "more interested in making money "

The FCC has not bound them to satisfy public entertainment needs, Kurtenbach said, and "commercial broadcasters have a very, very poor record" of openness, public service and access

Heckman said, "Commercial broadcasting is not on trial "

Asst Supt Craig K Fullerton of the Omaha Public Schools told the commission the consultant's report on KIOS-FM is erroneous The district-operated public radio station offers comprehensive programs that can be received in Lincoln as well as Omaha, Dr Fullerton said

But he supported establishing broader public radio offerings of culture and education, and to serve blind and print handicapped persons

Commissioner Edwin C Nelson of Chadron, chairman of the subcommittee studying public radio, said the panel will pursue its statewide investigation, evaluate the consultant's study and available programs, probably visit the Wisconsin public radio network and survey attitudes there

The remainder of the $25,000 federal grant awarded for the original study will be sought to pay for the subcommittee's work, to be completed next fall, Dr Nelson said

In other business, the commission

—Agreed to pursue NBA-commission-technical school cooperation to establish classroom and on the-job engineering training, to reverse the current lack of qualified applicants

—Voted to seek a federal matching grant and a construction permit to increase Channel 26 power in Omaha and improve reception That won No 2 priority behind the pending federal application to fund a new color mobile unit, for which state funds have already been appropriated

Trial Set Dec. 19 For Assessor

County Assessor Fritz Meyer will stand trial Dec. 19 at 9 a m. on a charge of aiding and abetting in the filing of false tax information.

The trial date was set by Lancaster County Judge Jeffre Cheuvront Tuesday. Meyer had pleaded innocent to the misdemeanor charge in late November

The charge stems from the filing of a sales tax form which listed incorrect information. The form itself was filed by County Commissioner Robert Colin, who was found guilty of filing a false sales tax report, a misdemeanor.

Colin was found guilty and was placed on a six-month probation, which includes 30 hours of voluntary public service.

Colin, who has already met with his probation officer, said he was put on an honor system for the volunteer work and can do any work which is not a normal part of his commissioner duties.

He said he hopes to fulfill part of his service by ringing the Salvation Army Bell and helping to deliver Christmas baskets.

Meyer is accused of helping Colin fill out the sales tax form on a new car Colin purchased this fall On the form a second car was listed as a trade in The car was actually sold privately by Colin

Antibusing Amendment Cut From Money Bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senate-House conferees, reaching final agreement on a $36 billion money bill, dropped a major Senate amendment Tuesday aimed against busing to desegregate schools

The amendment, sponsored by Sen Joseph R Biden, Jr , D-Del , was designed to prevent the Health, Education and Welfare Department from withholding education aid funds from school districts which decline to desegregate by assigning teachers or students on the basis of race.

This will be taken back to the House for a separate vote there

The Byrd proposal seeks to bar HEW from requiring that school districts bus students to schools other than the one nearest their homes to end racial segregation

Sen Edward W Brooke, R-Mass one of the conferees and a foe of the antibusing amendments, told a reporter that the House managers of the bill would offer an amendment to water down the Byrd language before the vote on it

Are Tests Detecting PKU?

By BOB GUENTHER
Star Staff Writer

Childbirth isn't any easier, but modern medicine has allowed today's mothers to spend shorter periods of time in the hospital.

Mothers and infants today are going home within three or even two days, sooner than they did in the past.

The shorter hospitalization is desirable for financial as well as other reasons, but several Lincoln doctors are concerned the infants may not be there long enough for a simple but important test.

The doctors' concern surrounds phenylketonuria (called PKU), a disorder which normal, healthy parents can pass on to their offspring.

A child afflicted with PKU has a defective liver enzyme and cannot properly metabolize phenylaline, an amino acid present in many foods, including milk.

Damages Nervous System

Undetected, PKU causes phenylaline to accumulate to the point it damages the central nervous system, making an otherwise normal child mentally retarded.

Hospitals routinely screen newborns for PKU. If a PKU problem is discovered, the child can be fed a diet low in phenylaline which minimizes brain damage.

State law currently requires the State Health Department to see to it that PKU tests are performed.

What concerns several Lincoln pediatricians and a pathologist is that the three-day hospital stay may not be long enough.

Not Enough Milk

An infant with PKU will not have had sufficient quantities of milk in three days of life for experts to detect the problem, they said.

Doctors interviewed said they knew of no instance where this has occurred, but they said they hope to head off a potential problem.

The Nebraska Academy of Pediatrics is studying the situation with an eye toward possible revisions in state law, according to Dr. Ken Fijan.

He said hospitals could leave it up to the mother to return to her doctor to have her child checked within a week or two for a PKU test.

Don't Always Come Back

But, he noted, "Mothers don't always come back to the doctor after they leave the hospital. We know only a certain percentage of children are followed by a pediatrician."

Another pediatrician, Dr. Patricia Stivrins, said, "The way the law is written, the hospital has a compunction to perform the test before the infant goes home. This may be inadequate if the infant is tested before having an adequate milk challenge."

Fijan agreed, "With the short hospital stays, we're not covering the problem adequately."

Dr. Orin Hayes, a pathologist, raised the question about the adequacy of PKU tests within three days of birth.

Hayes said he is no longer filling PKU forms out in such instances.

"I believe tests for the sake of tests is not worth the chips," he said. "I don't think we can rely on mothers to bring back urine strips at the three-week level.

"We're stuck with the law, as bad as it is," he said. "Frankly what we were after is more than PKU; it's other metabolic diseases. There's a batch of others, some occurring more frequently than PKU."

Dr. Robert Grant, head of maternal and child care for the State Health Department, agreed that at times there is a problem with PKU testing and that other tests may be needed.

Cost Discussion Wanted

But he added, "I think we all need to get together to discuss this, including such things as cost. The average test costs $5. If you have 25,000 births a year, then you've spent $125,000 to determine one or two cases."

PKU occurs once in every 14,000 births, according to the National Institute of Health. The institute said the cost of detection of PKU is small in comparison to the cost of institutionalizing a mentally retarded PKU sufferer.

Minister's Hospital Visit Wasn't Appreciated

DEAR ABBY: My mother died in a hospital a year ago, and one thing still bothers me.

I wish all those ministers and priests who go around to visit the sick would not tell them they should prepare to meet their God.

This happened to my mother, and she said she had no idea she was going to die. She did, of course, but I just know that had it not been for the minister's visits, my mother would have lived longer. She just gave up hope.

In the first place, the minister shouldn't even have visited my mother because she didn't belong to his church. She was an American Indian and didn't belong to ANY church.

We Indians believe that our church is the whole world. In all Good Books, it says, "The Lord created heaven and earth," so we worship any time, any place — not in a building, only once a week. And there is never a collection plate. Worship is free.

If you think this will help people to understand the faith of the American Indians, please put this in your column. Thank you.
JIMMY LITTLE TURTLE
HARRISBURG, PA.

DEAR JIMMY: I do and I will. Thank you for writing.

DEAR ABBY: My fiance and I are planning our wedding for next spring. All of those I've selected for my bridesmaids have accepted. My problem: Two of the girls are very overweight.

After attending a wedding not long ago where four bridesmaids were overweight and four were slim, I decided I didn't want these heavy girls to be in my wedding. The procession was terrible. Fat, skinny, fat, skinny, fat, skinny and finally fat, skinny.

I just can't let my fat friends ruin my wedding. I know I should have thought of it before I asked them, but I didn't.

Abby, this will be hard for me since we've all grown up together. How can I tell the news to my two fat friends without hurting their feelings?

FAT-FREE WEDDING

DEAR FAT-FREE: You can't. And if you are that hung up on having uniformly slim bridesmaids, hire professional models. You've made your commitments. Stick with them.

DEAR ABBY: My husband is a mail carrier, and I'm sure very few people know what their mailmen have to contend with. For example: With the crime rate so high, many people keep mean dogs to protect their property. That's fine, but these dogs should be tied up so they can't attack deliverymen.

My husband averages about one bite a week from dogs whose owners claim they "never bite anyone, but like to make a lot of noise."

Another problem: The mail carrier is charged for all postage due on mail on his route, and if the customer doesn't reimburse him, the money comes out of the mailman's pocket.

You may say, "Two or 3 cents isn't all that much," but my husband has over 300 stops to make some days, and it all adds up.

Care to comment?

PHOENIX WIFE

DEAR WIFE: I am informed that mail carriers are not obligated to deliver mail at homes where watchdogs are allowed to run loose.

As for postage-due mail: True, the carrier is charged for all postage-due mail on his route. He leaves the mail and an envelope stating the amount due, and if the customer doesn't reimburse him, he's out of luck.

DEAR ABBY: How can I keep my sons, ages 6 and 8, from being jealous of each other?

I want them to grow up and love each other, and it hurts me so much to see the terrible jealousy between them. Please help me.

MOMMY

DEAR MOMMY: Jealousy is a natural (though unattractive) human emotion. Remember that, Mommy, and explain it to your children. It may not eliminate the jealousy, but it will help to reduce their guilt feelings about it.

For Abby's booklet, "How to Have a Lovely Wedding," send $1 to Abigail Van Buren, 132 Lasky Dr., Beverly Hills, Calif. 90212. Please enclose a long, self-addressed, stamped (20¢) envelope.

'Materials Reclamation Center' Just Scrapyard

Hoffman, an 18-year General Electric employe, operates a sprawling scrapyard. And, while GE calls it the "materials reclamation center," it's still a scrapyard.

Most of Hoffman's sales are to industrial customers who make their purchases by submitting sealed bids.

What makes it unique is that once a day for an hour, this company-sponsored junkyard is opened to GE employes for their browsing pleasure. Hoffman says he usually makes 30 to 35 sales during each lunch hour for prices ranging generally between 25 cents and $30.

One happy customer is John Josefiak, who was putting up a decorative brick wall in the living room of his home. He stopped by to pick up a few pieces of steel for $3.50 to support it.

"Anytime you need something you make the rounds here and you'll be surprised what you'll find," Josefiak said.

Roy Lamon of Lanesboro was in to buy a few pieces of aluminum for $2 to build a rack to carry a couple of bicycles on the back of his camping trailer. "You can buy anything you want here, if you look hard enough," Lamon said.

Dale Prindle, an ordnance worker, was sorting through barrels of steel for material to build a fence to screen the patio behind his house.

"I've been with GE for 20 years," he said, "and I've been using this place since the day I began, I guess."

The studs holding the base of his cellar door came from Hoffman's scrapyard. So did the steel supporting his fireplace and the supports for a basketball hoop in his back yard.

"I even picked up a few odds and ends to hold my cars together," Prindle said. "This place is a great little treasure area."

Opening lead - six of spades.

In most deals declarer's main objective is to make the contract. In attempting to meet this goal, he should not allow himself to be diverted by other factors that may arise in the course of the play.

Consider this case where declarer might easily go wrong. West leads a spade to dummy's ace and the question is how to play the hand.

Let's say South leads a diamond from dummy, attempting to establish his longest suit. East goes up with the king and returns a low spade through South's K-J. It does not matter whether declarer finesses or not; in either case the defenders' spades become established before dummy's diamonds.

If declarer now attempts to make the hand by leading a club to the king and a club back, planning to finesse, he learns soon enough that West has the queen. The best South can do at this point is concede down one.

The result is the same if declarer, at trick two, starts out by playing the king and another club. There is now no way he can negotiate a ninth trick.

Yet there is a sure way to make the contract. South starts with eight tricks and all he has to do is find a ninth. He should play a low club to the ace at trick two and lead a low club back towards dummy's K-9-6. Then:

1. If West shows out, South goes up with the king and returns a club to the jack.

2. If West follows low at trick three, South inserts the nine, thus assuring three club tricks, come what may.

3. If West follows suit with the ten or the queen, South is again sure of at least three club tricks.

The safety play in clubs guarantees three club tricks and hence insures the contract against every possible lie of the cards.

CALL COMES IN . . . Novak calmly reacts to emergency.

By J. L. SCHMIDT
Star Staff Writer

Two Lincoln firemen stay awake all night to monitor the pulse of the city.

And quite a pulse it is, as the city lives and breathes long after most people have gone to bed.

In a carpeted room on the second floor of the main fire department headquarters, the two listen to a bank of radios, monitor a variety of calls for help, watch TV until sign off and then "talk to each other a lot" as their 10-hour shift ticks away in front of them on a digital clock.

They are the eyes and the ears of the other 250 firemen who are either asleep or off duty. They are the "meanies" who ring the bells that wake up the whole place in the middle of the night if a fire call comes in.

Radio Voice Steady

"Engine 8, Zone 9, 1234 Anystreet, fire in basement; Engine 8, Zone 9, 1234 Anystreet, fire in basement."

That message is enough to get the men into Engine 8 and, probably, to the scene of the fire in just a couple of minutes. For the two men maintaining the lonely vigil it represents a break in an otherwise quiet span of time.

There's a log sheet to be filled out, a pink card to be dated and filed and a master tape to be checked to insure that the call is properly recorded. The motions come with an automatic ease, made smoother with experience.

Evenings Busy

The duty shift begins at 5 p.m. and ends at 7 a.m. The main flurry of activity, depending on the day of the week and the time of the year, is between 3 and 6 p.m., according to one of the eight men who alternate the dispatch shifts, Hobart Boswell.

"That's when people are usually getting home from work and somebody finds that their slow cooker has speeded up or they decide to burn a last minute birthday cake or something," he added.

Boswell is joined by Jim Cary, Glenn Kempf, Dave Kennedy, Dwayne Novak, Bob Penner, Jerry Terry, Wes Schiermann and Keith Smith in rotating the shifts with a 14-hour night and a 10-hour day. The pairs work four days, 4 nights and then get four days off. Regular firemen work 24 hours on duty, 24 hours off duty, for two weeks then get eight days off, Boswell explained.

'Not All Easy-Going'

Take the last big storm, the thunderstorm which caused a lot of downed lines and then turned into a snowstorm. "Between 10 p.m. and 8 a.m. we had 51 fire calls alone, not counting the other emergency calls we get in a night," Boswell said.

Those "other" calls come via the 911 emergency line, and they run the gamut from bona fide emergencies to some rather humorous, if not weird, calls.

The switchboard and radio equipment contained in the alarm office cover all of Lancaster County. Dispatchers are responsible for 10 local fire stations, two rural stations and fire and rescue calls alike in Ceresco and Hallam. They can transfer calling parties to the Lincoln police or one of the local ambulance companies if necessary.

The 911 calls average about 18-20 a day, and may run from serious illness to a "public relations, community service type of thing," Boswell said.

Woman Loses Track

There's a little old blind lady who calls us "every now and then to ask what day it is, or what time it is if she loses track," he said. That falls in the category of "a genuine service," he adds.

Another obviously older lady once called to ask if the men knew where she could get some garden hose. In the same unwavering voice that the dispatchers use to calm a hysterical woman standing in her burning kitchen, they suggested the caller try a hardware store.

Sometimes the calls are serious and difficult. People react strangely to a situation of stress and excitement. It takes minutes, sometimes, for a dispatcher to extract something seemingly as simple as the address of an emergency.

One 911 call came from a friend of a friend who had called her to tell her she had taken an overdose of pills.

The "friend" couldn't exactly remember where the victim lived, but she thought it was in a northwest Lincoln trailer court.

Door-To-Door Search

The dispatchers sent a truck from an engine company out there and the firemen conducted a door-to-door search until the party was found. "Then they refused help, so the men went on to a stand-by emergency out at the airport," Boswell said.

The call for help came a few minutes later, "after the party had changed their minds," he added, and the alarm officer sent an ambulance.

Another call came from a person who had just come to Lincoln from Denver and was visiting an elderly relative who was having trouble breathing.

Gave Denver Address

"She called for help but gave us a Denver address when we asked her where she was," Boswell said. She said it was late when she got to town and she didn't really know where she was.

"We finally calmed her down enough that we got her to go outside to the nearest street corner and look at a sign and then come back in and tell us where she was," he added.

Working at night, according to a consensus of the dispatchers, isn't all that bad, "once you get used to it."

Boswell noted, "I don't have a hard time staying awake. It's the getting to sleep that bothers me."

Grandpa Grumpy Answered Santa's Cal

By LIANE GUENTHER
Star Staff Writer

Grumpy had worked 22 years in a "normal" job, climbing poles and repairing lines for the New Jersey Power and Light Co.

Then one day he got a long-distance, person-to-person phone call from "Mr. S. Claus."

"Ho, ho, ho," the jolly voice at the end of the line said. "Grumpy? Is that you? I haven't heard from you since you were a little tyke."

But that wasn't why old Santa called.

"Christmas orders are already piling up, Grumpy," Mr. Claus hinted, sounding very weary. "And I'm not as spry as I once was. Sure could use some help in my shop."

Grumpy was flabbergasted. Being summoned by Santa was the biggest honor G. Grumpy ever had.

Grumpy was getting too old, anyhow, to scamper up those power poles. Besides, he needed a rest So, he quit his job, packed his tools in a U-Haul and set out with his wife for the Arctic.

Somewhere en route he took a wrong turn, probably in Chicago. Suddenly he began seeing all kinds of billboards about "Big Red."

"Big Red? Oh, that must be Santa's nickname," he thought to himself. "We must be there."

It was cold and blizzardy, just as he had imagined.

"Is this the North Pole?" he asked a policeman.

"Might as well be," the policeman stammered through chattering teeth.

Grumpy, not accustomed to droll Midwestern humor, took the policeman at his words, found an apartment at Ruskin Place, unloaded his U-Haul and set up his shop in an empty flower store at Waverly.

Lots of children of all ages have grown fond of the over-sized elf who spends hours and hours at his work bench, sawing, sanding and staining little wooden toy trains and hobby horses, doll houses and pink elephants.

Shy youngsters usually hide behind mothers' skirts when they first visit the shop, said Grandpa (John McCrea) Grumpy. After playing peek-a-boo awhile, one little boy finally told his mommie, "He's not really grumpy, is he?"

Grammar school kids love to come in and push the wooden toys around, said Grandma (Doris) Grumpy, who's really pretty nice, too.

Grumpy says he'll try to duplicate any idea, using wood and plexiglass, as long as it's not too complicated. He's not a man for much detail; he likes to make simple toys that amuse children.

He also creates nut and fruit bowls, plant holders and lamps for "children at heart."

For now, Grandpa's is a small business, with outlets through Miller & Paine and, of course, Claus & Associates. The Grumpys have also advertised and sold some hobby horses through Country Music magazine.

With a little luck and planning, Grumpy said, the grandpa-grandma operation won't grow too big too fast.

"It was a shock at first to slow down," said the former utility man. "It's nice to look out at the snow instead of being out in it." Snow reminds him of when he used to live in the United States.

Please, don't anybody tell him this isn't the North Pole.

Curtis Helped Bring Son To U.S.

By LINDA OLIG
Star Staff Writer

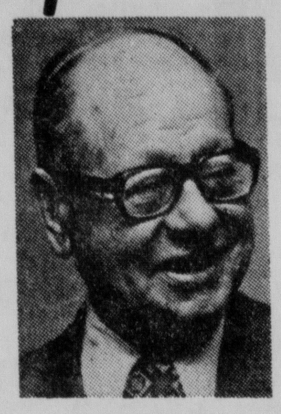
It was a belated Thanksgiving mission of sorts.

Szabolcs Julius Mesterhazy came to Lincoln Tuesday to "see the land, to see the people" and to thank all Nebraskans for electing Sen. Carl T. Curtis.

Without the sympathetic, attentive ear of Curtis, Mesterhazy told The Star, tears streaming down his lined face, his son would still be behind the Iron Curtain.

Mesterhazy, a Hungarian freedom fighter, immigrated to this country in 1957 following the Hungarian Revolution.

He came with his wife and three of their four children; the fourth, a son, was ill and had to be left behind.



Sen. Carl Curtis

Mesterhazy, now a U.S. citizen, a resident of Grosse Pointe Park, Mich., and a computer programmer for the U.S. Army, spent 18 years trying to get his son out of Hungary.

Then came the trade reform act of 1974 and the Jackson amendment, introduced by Washington Sen. Henry Jackson, which allowed for the emigration of Jews from the Soviet Union.

It was a "dirty deal," Mesterhazy said. That amendment had a flagrant oversight: not allowing for the freedom of relatives of all U.S. citizens, including his son.

Borrowing wording from the Jackson amendment, Mesterhazy wrote one of his own. With 100 copies under his arm, he took off for the nation's capitol about a year ago. His aim was to contact the legislative assistant of each U.S. senator.

After having contacted about 75 such aides, Mesterhazy was led into another office. This time, it was not an assistant he met.

Mesterhazy found himself face-to-face with Sen. Curtis whom he described as "the only one on Capitol Hill who looks like a common man," one who "cares about the people back home," not only in his state but in every state.

Curtis listened to Mesterhazy's story. Explaining that he could not introduce the proposed amendment, he set out to find another senator to fulfill the mission.

And he did, Mesterhazy said.

According to the Congressional Record of Dec. 10, 1974, Sen. Jesse A. Helms, R-N.C., introduced Mesterhazy's amendment, recounting the Hungarian immigrant's plight in attempting to be reunited with his son.

"The trade reform act, as interpreted by the administration, takes no account of a tragic situation such as this — and we can be sure that there are countless other cases similar to this one," Helms told his fellow senators.

That "citizen's amendment" now is section 409 of the trade reform act of 1974, Mesterhazy beamed.

But it didn't help him — directly, at least.

Hungary didn't sign the trade agreement.

His son was released, however, earlier this year, Mesterhazy said, claiming the step was undertaken "to make me keep my mouth shut — I made too much trouble."

It was Curtis's efforts that brought this 18-year struggle to an end, Mesterhazy insisted.

He is grateful to Curtis for his help; but he is even more grateful to Nebraskans "for producing a man who cares about freedom-loving people . . . about the people of the world," Mesterhazy said, his eyes welling up with tears.

Calling Curtis "the pepole's senator," Mesterhazy said, "There may be others like Sen. Curtis in this country but they don't get elected to the Senate."

Nitrogen Poisoning Kills 270 Cattle

By LIANE GUENTHER
Outstate Nebraska Bureau

Curtis — Nitrogen poisoning has caused about 270 cattle deaths in a three-county area in southwestern Nebraska, according to Frontier County Agent Paul Hay.

A cattleman near Dickens lost 226 head last weekend, Hay said Tuesday. The source of that poisoning has been traced to pigweed the rancher cut in an old feedlot and dried for hay.

Four other cases of poisonings, involving 46 head of cattle, have been reported recently in Frontier, Lincoln and Hayes counties, Hay said. All have been blamed on nitrogen poisoning stemming from the use of pigweed and cane hay as cattle feed.

The losses have been estimated at close to $80,000, he said.

Strikes Quickly

The county agent said nitrogen poisoning "has always been a problem." It strikes quickly and "crops up from time to time."

Nitrogen is an essential element in an animal's diet, but in the wrong place, in the wrong form and at the wrong time, it can be fatal, Hay said.

It becomes a problem when animals eat feed containing excessive levels of nitrogen. Because their systems cannot convert nitrate (NO3) fast enough, it becomes nitrite (NO2). Nitrite is very unstable and will steal oxygen from the blood to return to the nitrate form. Eventually the animals suffocate.

Drouth, Snow

Hay said the drouth last summer and the recent blizzard may indirectly be the causes of the poisonings.

For one, any stress — such as long periods without rain — can cause pigweed or cane hay to accumulate more than normal levels of nitrogen.

Secondly, "feed is at a premium (price) out here," Hay said. "Weeds are not a bad feed, actually, providing they don't have a nitrate problem."

No Grazing

Thirdly, because of the snow, cattlemen have not been able to graze their herds. Instead, livestock have been fed only stored hay, some of it with excessive levels of nitrogen.

Cattlemen who suspect their forage is high in nitrates should mix it with prairie hay, which doesn't tend to store nitrogen, Hay said.

He also suggested balancing the animals' feed with corn and alfalfa, which provide protein and energy, or supplementing their diets with range cubes for protein and Vitamin A.

Felony Count Is Dropped Against Wendy Yoshimura

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — A judge on Tuesday dismissed one of four felony counts against Wendy Yoshimura, the 32-year-old artist arrested with Patricia Hearst last Sept. 18.

Alameda County Superior Court Judge Lionel J. Wilson dismissed a charge of possessing bomb components, saying the charge was "unconstitutionally vague" under the 14th Amendment.

Miss Yoshimura still faces three counts of a county grand jury indictment — possession of explosives, a machine gun and a destructive device with the intent to injure persons and destroy property.

The charges stem from discovery of a weapons and explosives cache in Berkeley in 1972. She was identified as a person who rented the garage where the contraband was found.

Are Tests Detecting PKU?

By BOB GUENTHER
Star Staff Writer

Childbirth isn't any easier, but modern medicine has allowed today's mothers to spend shorter periods of time in the hospital.

Mothers and infants today are going home within three or even two days, sooner than they did in the past.

The shorter hospitalization is desirable for financial as well as other reasons, but several Lincoln doctors are concerned the infants may not be there long enough for a simple but important test.

The doctors' concern surrounds phenylketonuria (called PKU), a disorder which normal, healthy parents can pass on to their offspring.

A child afflicted with PKU has a defective liver enzyme and cannot properly metabolize phenylaline, an amino acid present in many foods, including milk.

Damages Nervous System

Undetected, PKU causes phenylaline to accumulate to the point it damages the central nervous system, making an otherwise normal child mentally retarded.

Hospitals routinely screen newborns for PKU. If a PKU problem is discovered, the child can be fed a diet low in phenylaline which minimizes brain damage.

State law currently requires the State Health Department to see to it that PKU tests are performed.

What concerns several Lincoln pediatricians and a pathologist is that the three-day hospital stay may not be long enough.

Not Enough Milk

An infant with PKU will not have had sufficient quantities of milk in three days of life for experts to detect the problem, they said.

Doctors interviewed said they knew of no instance where this has occurred, but they said they hope to head off a potential problem.

The Nebraska Academy of Pediatrics is studying the situation with an eye toward possible revisions in state law, according to Dr. Ken Fijan.

He said hospitals could leave it up to the mother to return to her doctor to have her child checked within a week or two for a PKU test.

Don't Always Come Back

But, he noted, "Mothers don't always come back to the doctor after they leave the hospital. We know only a certain percentage of children are followed by a pediatrician."

Another pediatrician, Dr. Patricia Stivrins, said, "The way the law is written, the hospital has a compunction to perform the test before the infant goes home. This may be inadequate if the infant is tested before having an adequate milk challenge."

Fijan agreed, "With the short hospital stays, we're not covering the problem adequately."

Dr. Orin Hayes, a pathologist, raised the question about the adequacy of PKU tests within three days of birth.

Hayes said he is no longer filling PKU forms out in such instances.

"I believe tests for the sake of tests is not worth the chips," he said. "I don't think we can rely on mothers to bring back urine strips at the three-week level.

"We're stuck with the law, as bad as it is," he said. "Frankly what we were after is more than PKU; it's other metabolic diseases. There's a batch of others, some occurring more frequently than PKU."

Dr. Robert Grant, head of maternal and child care for the State Health Department, agreed that at times there is a problem with PKU testing and that other tests may be needed.

Cost Discussion Wanted

But he added, "I think we all need to get together to discuss this, including such things as cost. The average test costs $5. If you have 25,000 births a year, then you've spent $125,000 to determine one or two cases."

PKU occurs once in every 14,000 births, according to the National Institute of Health. The institute said the cost of detection of PKU is small in comparison to the cost of institutionalizing a mentally retarded PKU sufferer.

Minister's Hospital Visit Wasn't Appreciated

DEAR ABBY: My mother died in a hospital a year ago, and one thing still bothers me.

I wish all those ministers and priests who go around to visit the sick would not tell them they should prepare to meet their God.

This happened to my mother, and she said she had no idea she was going to die. She did, of course, but I just know that had it not been for the minister's visits, my mother would have lived longer. She just gave up hope.

In the first place, the minister shouldn't even have visited my mother because she didn't belong to his church. She was an American Indian and didn't belong to ANY church.

We Indians believe that our church is the whole world. In all Good Books, it says, "The Lord created heaven and earth," so we worship any time, any place — not in a building, only once a week. And there is never a collection plate. Worship is free.

If you think this will help people to understand the faith of the American Indians, please put this in your column. Thank you.
JIMMY LITTLE TURTLE
HARRISBURG, PA.

DEAR JIMMY: I do and I will. Thank you for writing.

DEAR ABBY: My fiance and I are planning our wedding for next spring. All of those I've selected for my bridesmaids have accepted. My problem: Two of the girls are very overweight.

After attending a wedding not long ago where four bridesmaids were overweight and four were slim, I decided I didn't want these heavy girls to be in my wedding. The procession was terrible. Fat, skinny, fat, skinny, fat, skinny and finally fat, skinny.

I just can't let my fat friends ruin my wedding. I know I should have thought of it before I asked them, but I didn't.

Abby, this will be hard for me since we've all grown up together. How can I tell the news to my two fat friends without hurting their feelings?

FAT-FREE WEDDING

DEAR FAT-FREE: You can't. And if you are that hung up on having uniformly slim bridesmaids, hire professional models. You've made your commitments. Stick with them.

DEAR ABBY: My husband is a mail carrier, and I'm sure very few people know what their mailmen have to contend with. For example: With the crime rate so high, many people keep mean dogs to protect their property. That's fine, but these dogs should be tied up so they can't attack deliverymen.

My husband averages about one bite a week from dogs whose owners claim they "never bite anyone, but like to make a lot of noise."

Another problem: The mail carrier is charged for all postage due on mail on his route, and if the customer doesn't reimburse him, the money comes out of the mailman's pocket.

You may say, "Two or 3 cents isn't all that much," but my husband has over 300 stops to make some days, and it all adds up.

Care to comment?

PHOENIX WIFE

DEAR WIFE: I am informed that mail carriers are not obligated to deliver mail at homes where watchdogs are allowed to run loose.

As for postage-due mail: True, the carrier is charged for all postage-due mail on his route. He leaves the mail and an envelope stating the amount due, and if the customer doesn't reimburse him, he's out of luck.

DEAR ABBY: How can I keep my sons, ages 6 and 8, from being jealous of each other?

I want them to grow up and love each other, and it hurts me so much to see the terrible jealousy between them. Please help me.

MOMMY

DEAR MOMMY: Jealousy is a natural (though unattractive) human emotion. Remember that, Mommy, and explain it to your children. It may not eliminate the jealousy, but it will help to reduce their guilt feelings about it.

For Abby's booklet, "How to Have a Lovely Wedding," send $1 to Abigail Van Buren, 132 Lasky Dr., Beverly Hills, Calif. 90212. Please enclose a long, self-addressed, stamped (20¢) envelope.

'Materials Reclamation Center' Just Scrapyard

Hoffman, an 18-year General Electric employe, operates a sprawling scrapyard. And, while GE calls it the "materials reclamation center," it's still a scrapyard.

Most of Hoffman's sales are to industrial customers who make their purchases by submitting sealed bids.

What makes it unique is that once a day for an hour, this company-sponsored junkyard is opened to GE employes for their browsing pleasure. Hoffman says he usually makes 30 to 35 sales during each lunch hour for prices ranging generally between 25 cents and $30.

One happy customer is John Josefiak, who was putting up a decorative brick wall in the living room of his home. He stopped by to pick up a few pieces of steel for $3.50 to support it.

"Anytime you need something you make the rounds here and you'll be surprised what you'll find," Josefiak said.

Roy Lamon of Lanesboro was in to buy a few pieces of aluminum for $2 to build a rack to carry a couple of bicycles on the back of his camping trailer. "You can buy anything you want here, if you look hard enough," Lamon said.

Dale Prindle, an ordnance worker, was sorting through barrels of steel for material to build a fence to screen the patio behind his house.

"I've been with GE for 20 years," he said, "and I've been using this place since the day I began, I guess."

The studs holding the base of his cellar door came from Hoffman's scrapyard. So did the steel supporting his fireplace and the supports for a basketball hoop in his back yard.

"I even picked up a few odds and ends to hold my cars together," Prindle said. "This place is a great little treasure area."

Opening lead - six of spades.

In most deals declarer's main objective is to make the contract. In attempting to meet this goal, he should not allow himself to be diverted by other factors that may arise in the course of the play.

Consider this case where declarer might easily go wrong. West leads a spade to dummy's ace and the question is how to play the hand.

Let's say South leads a diamond from dummy, attempting to establish his longest suit. East goes up with the king and returns a low spade through South's K-J. It does not matter whether declarer finesses or not; in either case the defenders' spades become established before dummy's diamonds.

If declarer now attempts to make the hand by leading a club to the king and a club back, planning to finesse, he learns soon enough that West has the queen. The best South can do at this point is concede down one.

The result is the same if declarer, at trick two, starts out by playing the king and another club. There is now no way he can negotiate a ninth trick.

Yet there is a sure way to make the contract. South starts with eight tricks and all he has to do is find a ninth. He should play a low club to the ace at trick two and lead a low club back towards dummy's K-9-6. Then:

1. If West shows out, South goes up with the king and returns a club to the jack.

2. If West follows low at trick three, South inserts the nine, thus assuring three club tricks, come what may.

3. If West follows suit with the ten or the queen, South is again sure of at least three club tricks.

The safety play in clubs guarantees three club tricks and hence insures the contract against every possible lie of the cards.

Sculptures May Be 'Personal' Property

By J. L. SCHMIDT
Star Staff Writer

An attorney general's opinion as to whether the proposed Interstate-80 bicentennial sculptures are "real" or "personal" property may throw a whole new light on the acceptance procedure that the Nebraska Unicameral is currently engaged in through public hearings.

That opinion was made public by State Sen. Douglas Bereuter of Utica during a hearing on the sculptures at the Department of Roads headquarters in Lincoln Tuesday night. The opinion directs itself to LB605, the bill which has been the basis for the hearings as outlined by hearing chairman Sen. Ralph Kelley of Grand Island.

In a letter to Bereuter from Deputy Atty. Gen. Gerald S. Vitamvas, it was stated, in part:

"Section 21 of LB605 directs for the disposition of gifts made to the state. It contains a proviso that all gifts or devices of real property in excess of $10,000 to be used for state purposes must be approved by the governor and the Legislature. The validity of this proviso and its applicability to the sculpture project is certainly questionable."

Bereuter made the comments speaking from the floor as a neutral. When asked by Kelly why he didn't make the information available sooner he said that he had just received it upon returning to his office following the special session of the Unicameral.

"I think the Legislature is being handed the proverbial hot potato, and we shouldn't hold out our hand to accept it," Bereuter said of the decision to conduct public hearings and give an opinion on the acceptance of the sculptures by the Nebraska Department of Roads (DOR).

DOR engineer Tom Doyle said that is still the intention of his department to seek the opinion of the Governor and the Legislature before such a gift is accepted.

This comment was in light of the fact that another Attorney General's letter, directed to State Senator John Savage of Omaha, said, in part: "In view of this statuatory provision, whether or not the statuary are considered to be real or personal property, it is still within the authority of the Department of Roads to acquire such by gifts. No legislation is needed to accomplish this."

Doyle stuck with his original decision which was outlined in a September 9 letter to the Legislature, and the hearing continued.

A total of 24 persons spoke in favor of the project with 7 registered against. Testimony in the crowded hearing room of the DOR took a full 3½ hours to complete. Those speaking ranged from one sculptor whose design wasn't chosen for the project, to persons very involved in the founding of the organization that provides the financial backing for it.

One Lincolnite, Charles Fowler, noted that when the State Capitol was being constructed there were many negative comments about that building which has since become an "architectural wonder." "They even called the bronze statue of the sower, Bozo," Fowler said. That name was popularized by the press and "really seemed to stick at the time," he added, noting that those days have passed.

The artist whose work was rejected, Don Dennison of Seward, said that he felt the selection of artists from outside the state was fair, noting that Nebraskans were given a chance to compete. He also said that he felt the methods of selecting the actual sculptures was fair.

He likened abstract art to top 40 music. "You hear a lot of it day in and day out, but you don't have to listen to all of it." The same holds for the sculpture as he noted, "You don't have to look at the sculptures if you don't want to."

Lincoln businessman C. A. Yates told the group that he felt that the entire project was "a credit to the ingenuity of Nebraskans in attempting to provide something unique for the 6 million travelers who will pass through the State next year."

Negative comments came from a Unadilla woman, Mrs. Josephine Wachter, who said, "I feel the money being spent on the project could better be put to preserving the State Capitol."

Seward resident John Grasmick said that he felt that "People were informed about the project too late to do anything against it." He thanked the Legislative committee for attempting to do something about it through the use of the hearing.

Roberts Dairy Sued For Dropping Aged Employes

Omaha (AP) — The U.S. Department of Labor has filed suit in U.S. District Court alleging the Roberts Dairy Co. discharged "at least six" employes since December of 1973 because of their age.

The suit says the dairy has violated the Age Discrimination in Employment Act of 1967 by discharging the employes, and asks for their reinstatement and payment of lost wages.

The government also requests a permanent injunction against the dairy to prevent it from discharging employes in the future because of their age.

Calvin D. Fisher, president of Roberts Dairy, said the action predates his involvement with the dairy, which started in May.

He said some of the employes involved took early retirement and others were casualties of a cutback by the dairy when it went out of the retail home service business in 1973. Fisher said all now are on pensions.

John B. Renick, Labor Department attorney, said there would be no penalty or fine levied against the dairy if the government wins, aside from the reinstatement payment of lost wages and perhaps Social Security benefits to one or two of the employes who now may be 65 or older.

Fiesta's Trademarks: Hospitality, Entertainment

That's Hospitality

Ask Oklahoma State assistant football coach Harold Richardson.

He scheduled his wedding for Christmas Day prior to the Cowboys' acceptance of a Fiesta Bowl bid last year to play Brigham Young.

The date went unchanged. Richardson was married with ceremonies at the Casa Blanca Hotel, where Oklahoma State's team was staying.

No reception had been planned.

That is, until the Tempe (Ariz.) Diablos came to the rescue. The Fiesta ambassadors put their heads together and planned a reception, complete with champagne and cake.

The booster group was in Lincoln Tuesday, promoting good will, not tickets, since the Dec. 26 game has been a sellout since last August.

Both had direct tie-ins to the opposing teams.

"I used to coach at Wake Forest and competed against Frank Kush (Arizona State's head coach)," Amen pointed out. "I know his technique — entertain the opposing team so royally that it forgets it came down to play a football game.

"It's a very good idea," Amen admitted. "We used that same philosophy at Army when teams used to come to West Point. Eventually, some got smart."

Harold Richardson

Sears lived in Lincoln for nine years, leaving when Bob Devaney arrived and "put Nebraska football into the national spotlight."

"He's been inTempe four years. "I really enjoyed Lincoln, but it just doesn't have Arizona's weather," he said.

Ray Cox, the radio voice of Sun Devil football teams, was part of the entourage. He commended Fiesta officials "for waiting and seeing through the maze" of late-season bowl developments.

"The six-man bowl committee spent a hectic Saturday afternoon and Sunday morning," he pointed out. "They looked at California, UCLA and Stanford, but didn't panic and got an excellent football team."

According to Cox, a television contract initiated last year with CBS was the biggest stepping stone for the Fiesta Bowl.

"The rule by the Big Ten and Pacific Eight, opening up different possibilities, also helped the bowl situation," he said.

Cox noted that the Fiesta Bowl, joining the Rose Bowl as the only sellout post-season games for four consecutive seasons, ranked seventh among all bowls in terms of payoff a year ago.

"To achieve that status (behind the Big Four bowls, the Astro-Bluebonnet and the Liberty) in four years is a rather remarkable fact," he said.

Amen said he thought Kush "would wind up in the Big Eight this year at Colorado, but evidently you people have a lot more money down there."

"Like Nebraskans, Arizonans love their football," Sears said. "We're very proud and pull out all the stops. Since its inception, everything that goes into the Fiesta Bowl is intended to be first class from the smallest detail."

The reputation must have spread. Last year, when the New York Times News Service mapped the "major bowls," it included five — the Rose, Orange, Sugar, Cotton and Fiesta.

"Bob Devaney is well aware of our hospitality," Sears said of the Nebraska athletic director. "I think he's been a speaker at our kickoff luncheon for three out of the four years."

RANDY YORK

The Fiesta Bowl parade, set for Saturday, Dec. 20, is rapidly gaining national acclaim. It drew 84,000 spectators last year and expects to draw 115,000 this year.

"We've really put our best foot forward on pageantry this year," a member of the booster group said. "Last year, we had eight floats that were in the Rose Bowl parade.

"We've got our sights set high," he added. "In five years, we expect to be equal to or better than the Rose parade. We had to limit our entries to 150 this year. Some of those floats cost $25,000."

It's all part of the Fiesta, a Mexican word for big party.

"We're anxious to see a lot of red hats, red sweaters and Cornhuskers in Arizona," Sears said, noting one prediction for the game has already been posted at a Lincoln motel.

It said ASU 71, Nebraska 35.

Those sneaky devils from the Valley of the Sun obviously had a part in it.

Archie Griffin of Ohio State holds two fingers as he poses with the Heisman Trophy after he was named the winner of the trophy for the second consecutive year.

Griffin Snaps Heisman Jinx

NEW YORK (AP) — Ohio State's Archie Griffin, major college football's first 5,000-yard runner, overcame his lack of size, survived the taunts of 11 teams determined to ring his bell and became the first two-time winner of the coveted Heisman Trophy Tuesday.

"There was a lot of pressure this year," the 5-foot-9, 184-pound senior tailback said after becoming the first Heisman repeater, succeeding where four others failed—Army's Doc Blanchard, Doak Walker of Southern Methodist, Ohio State's Vic Janowicz and Navy's Roger Staubach.

"Being tagged the Heisman winner, naturally guys on other teams were after me more this year. They all tackled me clean, but they might say a few things like, 'Get up, Heisman Trophy-winner.'"

Griffin, who has rushed for 5,176 yards in four seasons, will wind up his collegiate career in a fourth consecutive Rose Bowl against UCLA.

He captured the 1975 Heisman by a landslide over running backs Chuck Muncie of California and Ricky Bell of Southern Cal. Griffin received 454 first-place ballots, 167 seconds and 104 thirds from 888 sports writers and broadcasters across the country. On a 3-2-1 basis, that amounted to 1,800 points. Muncie (145-104-87) received 730 points to 708 for Bell (70-169-160).

Rounding out the top 10 finishers were running backs Tony Dorsett of Pitt, Joe Washington of Oklahoma and Jimmy DuBose of Florida, quarterback John Sciarra of UCLA, running back Gordon Bell of Michigan, defensive tackle Leroy Selmon of Oklahoma and quarterback Gene Swick of Toledo.

Griffin carried four of the country's five sections—East, South, Midwest and Southwest—finishing behind Muncie in the Far West.

"I really tried not to think about the Heisman all year but I couldn't really get it off my mind a whole lot because people kept reminding me about it," Griffin said. "I got it off my mind just enough because I had a job to do every Saturday.

"In a way, it was a relief to get out on the field on Saturday even though I was getting hit pretty hard and I'd be banged up half the week. The hitting was a lot harder this year. It was rough out there."

Griffin rushed for more than 100 yards almost every Saturday starting with his sophomore year. He was stopped short in last season's Rose Bowl against Southern Cal, but his regular-season streak of 100-yard games reached a record 31 before Michigan held him to 46 in the 1975 finale.

In winning the 1974 Heisman over Southern Cal's Anthony Davis by 1,920 points to 819, Griffin rushed 236 times for 1,620 yards. This season, he carried 245 times for 1,357 yards.

"I think I helped the team more this year because my blocking and pass-catching were better," Griffin said.

"We didn't run into dirty football, but they just loved to tackle him," said Coach Woody Hayes, who accompanied hometown hero Griffin from Columbus, Ohio, to New York for Tuesday's announcement.

The matched pair of Heismans will look nice on the Griffin mantelpiece, but Archie said he'd "trade both of them for the national championship. That's been the goal of our team since I was a freshman. This is the closest now we've ever come. People think of the national championship as more of a team thing than the Heisman Trophy.

"But the Heisman is a team trophy, a team award. No matter how good a back is, you can't do anything without the other backs and the line blocking for you and the defense getting you the ball.

Huskers' Lapse Aids Iowa Victory, 72-65

By BOB OWENS
Star Sports Editor

Iowa City, Iowa — Nebraska lost its poise for only a brief period late in the game Tuesday night against Iowa, but it was long enough for the Hawkeyes to pull away to a 72-65 victory before 9,200 fans at the Iowa Fieldhouse.

Then, facing a full-court Iowa pressing defense, they turned the ball over six times in the next seven minutes and their lead dwindled to a single point at 47-46 with 9:06 to play.

Iowa Rallies

A little more than 2½ minutes later, the Hawkeyes made their move to get the lead for the first time since the final three minutes of the first half.

They achieved it on a pair of free throws by reserve Dick Peth and three consecutive jumps shots within 45 seconds from the corner by starting guard Scott Thompson.

That made it 54-50 Iowa with 5:44 left, but the tiring Huskers still had a chance to win. They came back to lead 56-54 on reserve guard Brian Banks' 10-foot jumper with 4:54 to play.

Then the turning point came — a four-point Iowa play which started when Allen Holder fouled Hawkeye Dan Frost, a usually-high scoring forward who was held in check most of the night, first by Holder, then by Bob Siegel in the second half.

Fort hit the first of a one-and-one free throw situation, but when he missed the second one, sub guard Archie Mays grabbed the rebound, put it back in the basket and was fouled by freshman reserve center Carl McPipe.

Fort Scores 25

Although high-scoring Husker guard Jerry Fort, who ended with 25 points, hit to tie the score at 58-58, the Hawkeyes took the lead for keeps on Mays' five-footer with 4:09 remaining.

The Huskers still had a chance with 39 seconds to play after McPipe's five-footer made it 64-66. But center Bruce King, Iowa's top scorer with 25 points, put in a fast-break layup after beating a Nebraska full-court press.

He added two free throws when it was ruled McPipe's foul was intentional. That ended all hopes of a road victory and left the Huskers with a 1-2 record against Big Ten teams.

"We lost our patience on their press which hurt the tempo we wanted to maintain," NU coach Joe Cipriano said. "Then there was that four-point play and a couple of missed free throws in key situations at the end."

Cipriano said the Huskers aren't getting enough board play, which hurt them down the stretch even though official statistics show they were outrebounded by only a 43-41 margin.

Olson Pleased

Winning coach Lute Olson said he felt the key for Iowa was keeping excellent defensive pressure and not losing poise despite some charging calls that went against his Hawkeyes.

"We knew Nebraska was an excellent defensive club, Olson said. "They really get out and pressure the pass well. This is a better defensive team than we're going to face most of the time. Nebraska's defense made our offense not play so well, but overall it was a well-played non-conference game."

Nebraska went into the game seeking to avoid getting into a run-and-shoot battle with Iowa, which won its opener last Saturday by scoring 111 points.

They shot a sizzling 58.6% from the field in the first half and went to the dressing room with a 34-28 lead. They didn't panic at the outset when Iowa took a 10-4 lead and came back to go in front 18-17 halfway through the first half.

Close Throughout

It was nip-and-tuck until the final minute and a half when center Larry Cox got open for a layup on a feed by Siegel, Banks scored after a steal and Fort hit a jumper with two seconds left in the half as the Huskers worked about a minute off the clock for a final shot.

Iowa was forced into 12 turnovers in the half and hit just 42.9% in the first 20 minutes.

Frost, who scored 27 points against Augustana last Saturday, had only seven points in the game and turned the ball over eight times.

Nebraska returned to Lincoln after the game to begin preparing to face undefeated Washington Saturday night at the NU Coliseum.

Sixth Position To NU

From News Wires

Nebraska was ranked sixth in both the Associated Press and United Press International wire service college football polls with all but one major college game regular season game completed.

That game will be Saturday and feature Texas A&M, ranked second in both polls, against Arkansas, 15th in UPI and 18th in AP, for the Southwest Conference championship.

Ohio State remains the No. 1 team, followed by Texas A&M, Oklahoma, Alabama, and Michigan in both listings.

In fact the top 10 is the same for both, with Penn State, Texas and Colorado following NU and Arizona State.

The Big Eight has the most teams rated from its conference with four. Kansas, with two more losses than any other rated team at 7-4, is tied for 18th according to UPI, 19th by AP.

Only four bowls will match top 10 rated teams including the Fiesta (Nebraska and Arizona State); Sugar (Alabama and Penn State); Orange (Oklahoma and Michigan) and Astro-Bluebonnet (Colorado and Texas).

Fiesta Tickets Short Of Demand

By RANDY YORK

Nebraska ticket manager Jim Pittenger confirmed Tuesday that the Cornhusker allotment of 8,200 seats for the Fiesta Bowl in Tempo, Ariz., Dec. 26, is sold out.

"The ticket crunch has been surprising even to me," Pittenger admitted. "Nebraska fans have never been faced with spending Christmas away from home. I thought it might ease the demand."

It didn't. "It appears from early tabulations that we were sold out the first two days (Nov. 24 and 25) after the Oklahoma game," Pittenger said.

Greater Crunch

He added that "even though our supply for the Orange and Sugar Bowls were greater, the crunch for the Fiesta is just as bad."

Actually, the crunch is worse than last year's Sugar Bowl because Pittenger returned about a thousand tickets from Nebraska's allotment of 14,500.

At a Tuesday morning press conference in Lincoln, Fiesta Bowl officials indicated an all-time ticket demand high for the game, a sellout in each of its first four years.

"The demand is tremendous," said Gene Sears, president of the Tempe Chamber of Commerce. "Technically, the game has been a sellout since last August.

"Since the Fiesta Bowl has wound up with teams with the best combined record of all the bowls, the crunch is really on," he said.

One Fiesta official heard that Nebraska fans have placed an ad in the Arizona State collegiate newspaper, offering $200 for tickets. He did not know how many tickets were included in the offer.

Another Fiesta official noted that he had received a ticket request from a former Miss Nebraska, now living in Phoenix.

Tempe's city manager joined the chorus. "My secretary has filled a yellow legal sized page with department heads and city officials wanting tickets, most of whom have never made such requests before," Ken McDonald said.

Fiesta brass are hoping the crunch on 51,388-seat Sun Devil Stadium eases in the future. Capacity will increase to 67,000 at the end of next football season and to 82,000 in a secondary building phase projected for completion in 1982.

Nicodemus 'Upset' Despite 61-59 Win Over Kearney

By DAVE SITTLER

"Boy we played terrible," said Nicodemus, the Nebraska women's basketball coach. "We tried to give the game away."

A relieved Nicodemus was reflecting on his club's 61-59 victory over Kearney State Tuesday night at the Nebraska Women's Physical Education Building.

It was the first win of the year for the Cornhuskers after an opening loss to Grandview College of Des Moines, Iowa. It was also the initial victory for Nicodemus, who took over the Husker gals' basketball program this season after a successful tenure at now defunct John F. Kennedy College in Wahoo.

Feels Great

"Winning the first game feels great," Nicodemus said. "But we still played terrible. I think the girls were nervous. We're a young ball club."

Young indeed. The Cornhuskers start a junior, a sophomore and three freshmen.

Freshmen forward Darcy Williamson led the Huskers in scoring with 15 points, while junior guard Kathy Hawkins and freshman guard Sherry Brink each added 14 tallies to the winning effort.

Coach Connie Hansen's Antelope's connected on 18 of 24 first half free throws. Center Julie Hall, who led all scorers with 19 points, hit 8 out of 9 charity tosses in the opening period.

"We only allowed Kearney seven field goals in the first half," Nicodemus said of the opening stanza which saw the Huskers take a 40-32 lead. "But their free throws kept them in the game."

Lead Melts

Nebraska appeared to have the game tucked away with a 57-52 lead and less than three minutes left. But two free throws by Hall, a bucket by Jackie Warrick and a free throw by Lou Senff knotted the score at 57-57 with 1:06 left.

Two reserves, Kathy Foley and Brenda Lightbody, came to the rescue for the Cornhuskers with two quick field goals before Jerri Torson's basket at the buzzer drew Kearney within two points at the final, 61-59, count.

Adding to Nebraska's woes were 25 turnovers and frigid shooting from the floor. The Huskers shot 36 per cent from the field the first half and a mere 27 the final half.

"We're going to have to be around 42 to 45 per cent consistently to be a winner," Nicodemus said. "But we blew a lot of layups. We'll get better. We're going to surprise a lot of people before this season is over."

The Cornhuskers, now 1-1, travel to Omaha Friday for a 7:30 p.m. tilt with Creighton University.

Curtis Helped Bring Son To U.S.

By LINDA OLIG
Star Staff Writer

It was a belated Thanksgiving mission of sorts.

Szabolcs Julius Mesterhazy came to Lincoln Tuesday to "see the land, to see the people" and to thank all Nebraskans for electing Sen. Carl T. Curtis.

Without the sympathetic, attentive ear of Curtis, Mesterhazy told The Star, tears streaming down his lined face, his son would still be behind the Iron Curtain.

He came with his wife and three of their four children; the fourth, a son, was ill and had to be left behind.

Mesterhazy, now a U S citizen, a resident of Grosse Pointe Park, Mich , and a computer programmer for the U S Army, spent 18 years trying to get his son out of Hungary

Then came the trade reform act of 1974 and the Jackson amendment, introduced by Washington Sen. Henry Jackson, which allowed for the emigration of Jews from the Soviet Union

Sen. Carl Curtis

It was a "dirty deal," Mesterhazy said That amendment had a flagrant oversight: not allowing for the freedom of relatives of all U S. citizens, including his son.

Borrowing wording from the Jackson amendment, Mesterhazy wrote one of his own With 100 copies under his arm, he took off for the nation's capitol about a year ago. His aim was to contact the legislative assistant of each U.S. senator.

After having contacted about 75 such aides, Mesterhazy was led into another office. This tume, it was not an assistant he met.

Mesterhazy found himself face-to-face with Sen. Curtis whom he described as "the only one on Capitol Hill who looks like a common man," one who "cares about the people 'back home," not only in his state but in every state.

Curtis listened to Mesterhazy's story. Explaining that he could not introduce the proposed amendment, he set out to find another senator to fulfill the mission.

And he did, Mesterhazy said.

According to the Congressional Record of Dec. 10, 1974, Sen. Jesse A. Helms, R-N.C., introduced Mesterhazy's amendment, recounting the Hungarian immigrant's plight in attempting to be reunited with his son.

"The trade reform act, as interpreted by the administration, takes no account of a tragic situation such as this — and we can be sure that there are countless other cases similar to this one," Helms told his fellow senators.

That "citizen's amendment" now is section 409 of the trade reform act of 1974, Mesterhazy beamed.

But it didn't help him — directly, at least.

Hungary didn't sign the trade agreement.

His son was released, however, earlier this year, Mesterhazy said, claiming the step was undertaken "to make me keep my mouth shut — I made too much trouble."

It was Curtis's efforts that brought this 18-year struggle to an end, Mesterhazy insisted.

He is grateful to Curtis for his help; but he is even more grateful to Nebraskans "for producing a man who cares about freedom-loving people . . . about the people of the world," Mesterhazy said, his eyes welling up with tears.

Calling Curtis "the pepole's senator," Mesterhazy said, "There may be others like Sen. Curtis in this country but they don't get elected to the Senate."

Nitrogen Poisoning Kills 270 Cattle

By LIANE GUENTHER
Outstate Nebraska Bureau

Curtis — Nitrogen poisoning has caused about 270 cattle deaths in a three-county area in southwestern Nebraska, according to Frontier County Agent Paul Hay.

A cattleman near Dickens lost 226 head last weekend, Hay said Tuesday. The source of that poisoning has been traced to pigweed the rancher cut in an old feedlot and dried for hay

Four other cases of poisonings, involving 46 head of cattle, have been reported recently in Frontier, Lincoln and Hayes counties, Hay said All have been blamed on nitrogen poisoning stemming from the use of pigweed and cane hay as cattle feed

The losses have been estimated at close to $80,000, he said

Strikes Quickly

The county agent said nitrogen poisoning "has always been a problem " It strikes quickly and "crops up from time to time."

Nitrogen is an essential element in an animal's diet, but in the wrong place, in the wrong form and at the wrong time, it can be fatal, Hay said

It becomes a problem when animals eat feed containing excessive levels of nitrogen. Because their systems cannot convert nitrate (NO3) fast enough, it becomes nitrite (NO2) Nitrite is very unstable and will steal oxygen from the blood to return to the nitrate form Eventually the animals suffocate.

Drouth, Snow

Hay said the drouth last summer and the recent blizzard may indirectly be the causes of the poisonings.

For one, any stress — such as long periods without rain — can cause pigweed or cane hay to accumulate more than normal levels of nitrogen.

Secondly, "feed is at a premium (price) out here," Hay said "Weeds are not a bad feed, actually, providing they don't have a nitrate problem."

No Grazing

Thirdly, because of the snow, cattlemen have not been able to graze their herds. Instead, livestock have been fed only stored hay, some of it with excessive levels of nitrogen.

Cattlemen who suspect their forage is high in nitrates should mix it with prairie hay, which doesn't tend to store nitrogen, Hay said.

He also suggested balancing the animals' feed with corn and alfalfa, which provide protein and energy, or supplementing their diets with range cubes for protein and Vitamin A.

Felony Count Is Dropped Against Wendy Yoshimura

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — A judge on Tuesday dismissed one of four felony counts against Wendy Yoshimura, the 32-year-old artist arrested with Patricia Hearst last Sept. 18.

Alameda County Superior Court Judge Lionel J. Wilson dismissed a charge of possessing bomb components, saying the charge was "unconstitutionally vague" under the 14th Amendment.

Miss Yoshimura still faces three counts of a county grand jury indictment — possession of explosives, a machine gun and a destructive device with the intent to injure persons and destroy property.

The charges stem from discovery of a weapons and explosives cache in Berkeley in 1972 She was identified as a person who rented the garage where the contraband was found.

Unseld, Hayes Pace Bullets

From News Wires

Wes Unseld and Elvin Hayes converted a pair of free throws each in the last 18 seconds Tuesday night to give the Washington Bullets a 107-104 National Basketball Association win over Los Angeles.

In other NBA action Tuesday night, New Orleans stopped Buffalo, 108-96; Houston downed Chicago, 91-77; Cleveland toppled Portland, 91-80; Boston edged the New York Knicks, 103-100 and Seattle nudged the Kansas City Kings, 101-90.

Unseld, who had 20 points and 19 rebounds, hit his free throws with 18 seconds left. Hayes, who scored only 13 points, connected on two free throws.

Dave Bing led the Bullets with 22 points, including 13 in the final period when Washington recovered from a five-point deficit to take its only lead of the game.

Nate Thurman, playing his second game for the Cavs, grabbed nine rebounds and added 11 points in 20 minutes of action as the Cavs won their second straight.

The Boston Centics scored the game's first 11 points, but had to hold on in the closing seconds to top the Knicks as Dave Cowens scored 25 points and grabbed 21 rebounds before fouling out.

With Boston leading 101-100, Walt Frazier, who scored 20 points, missed a 18-foot shot with three seconds remaining. Jim Ard then clinched the game with two free throws as time ran out.

Kings Falter

Forward Bruce Seals poured in 21 points, 10 in the final period, to lead the Seattle SuperSonics to victory over the Kansas City Kings.

The Kings, riding the deadly shooting of Larry McNeill, had pulled to 72-70 early in the fourth period when Seals went to work. The 6-8 forward hit a 10-foot jumper to give Seattle a four-point margin, then struck for five more points in the next four minutes as Seattle pulled away.

Jazz Wins

The youthful New Orleans Jazz rode the rugged play of veterans Ron Behagen and Otto Moore and rookie Jim McElroy to a win over the struggling Buffalo Braves.

Third-year pro Behagen tossed in a team-high 27 points, grabbed 13 rebounds and had nine assists in spurring the two-year-old expansion team to its first win over the Braves. Moore, an eight-year veteran, added 14 points and 14 rebounds for the Jazz, while McElroy tallied 19 points.

Meanwhile, Rudy Tomjanovich and Kevin Kunnert combined for 36 points to lead the Houston Rockets to their fourth straight victory, downing the Chicago Bulls.

Sculptures May Be 'Personal' Property

By J. L. SCHMIDT
Star Staff Writer

An attorney general's opinion as to whether the proposed Interstate-80 bicentennial sculptures are "real" or "personal" property may throw a whole new light on the acceptance procedure that the Nebraska Unicameral is currently engaged in through public hearings.

That opinion was made public by State Sen. Douglas Bereuter of Utica during a hearing on the sculptures at the Department of Roads headquarters in Lincoln Tuesday night. The opinion directs itself to LB605, the bill which has been the basis for the hearings as outlined by hearing chairman Sen. Ralph Kelley of Grand Island.

In a letter to Bereuter from Deputy Atty. Gen. Gerald S. Vitamvas, it was stated, in part:

"Section 21 of LB605 directs for the disposition of gifts made to the state. It contains a proviso that all gifts or devices of real property in excess of $10,000 to be used for state purposes must be approved by the governor and the Legislature. The validity of this proviso and its applicability to the sculpture project is certainly questionable."

Bereuter made the comments speaking from the floor as a neutral. When asked by Kelly why he didn't make the information available sooner he said that he had just received it upon returning to his office following the special session of the Unicameral.

"I think the Legislature is being handed the proverbial hot potato, and we shouldn't hold out our hand to accept it," Bereuter said of the decision to conduct public hearings and give an opinion on the acceptance of the sculptures by the Nebraska Department of Roads (DOR).

DOR engineer Tom Doyle said that is still the intention of his department to seek the opinion of the Governor and the Legislature before such a gift is accepted.

This comment was in light of the fact that another Attorney General's letter, directed to State Senator John Savage of Omaha, said, in part: "In view of this statuatory provision, whether or not the statuary are considered to be real or personal property, it is still within the authority of the Department of Roads to acquire such by gifts. No legislation is needed to accomplish this."

Doyle stuck with his original decision which was outlined in a September 9 letter to the Legislature, and the hearing continued.

A total of 24 persons spoke in favor of the project with 7 registered against. Testimony in the crowded hearing room of the DOR took a full 3½ hours to complete. Those speaking ranged from one sculptor whose design wasn't chosen for the project, to persons very involved in the founding of the organization that provides the financial backing for it.

One Lincolnite, Charles Fowler, noted that when the State Capitol was being constructed there were many negative comments about that building which has since become an "architectural wonder." "They even called the bronze statue of the sower, Bozo," Fowler said. That name was popularized by the press and "really seemed to stick at the time," he added, noting that those days have passed.

The artist whose work was rejected, Don Dennison of Seward, said that he felt the selection of artists from outside the state was fair, noting that Nebraskans were given a chance to compete. He also said that he felt the methods of selecting the actual sculptures was fair.

He likened abstract art to top 40 music. "You hear a lot of it day in and day out, but you don't have to listen to all of it." The same holds for the sculpture as he noted, "You don't have to look at the sculptures if you don't want to."

Lincoln businessman C. A. Yates told the group that he felt that the entire project was "a credit to the ingenuity of Nebraskans in attempting to provide something unique for the 6 million travelers who will pass through the State next year."

Negative comments came from a Unadilla woman, Mrs. Josephine Wachter, who said, "I feel the money being spent on the project could better be put to preserving the State Capitol."

Seward resident John Grasmick said that he felt that "People were informed about the project too late to do anything against it." He thanked the Legislative committee for attempting to do something about it through the use of the hearing.

Roberts Dairy Sued For Dropping Aged Employes

Omaha (AP) — The U.S. Department of Labor has filed suit in U.S. District Court alleging the Roberts Dairy Co. discharged "at least six" employes since December of 1973 because of their age.

The suit says the dairy has violated the Age Discrimination in Employment Act of 1967 by discharging the employes, and asks for their reinstatement and payment of lost wages.

The government also requests a permanent injunction against the dairy to prevent it from discharging employes in the future because of their age.

Calvin D. Fisher, president of Roberts Dairy, said the action predates his involvement with the dairy, which started in May.

He said some of the employes involved took early retirement and others were casualties of a cutback by the dairy when it went out of the retail home service business in 1973. Fisher said all now are on pensions.

John B. Renick, Labor Department attorney, said there would be no penalty or fine levied against the dairy if the government wins, aside from the reinstatement payment of lost wages and perhaps Social Security benefits to one or two of the employes who now may be 65 or older.

Iowa City, Iowa — One by one, members of the Nebraska basketball team and coaches walked into the motel coffee shop Tuesday morning and heard the news: Northwestern defeated Kentucky by 12 points Monday night.

The expressions were all the same — disbelief. This is the same Northwestern team that lost to Nebraska by 11 points last Saturday night in Lincoln.

The victory by Northwestern has to be a boost to Nebraska's ego and to the reputation of Big Eight Conference basketball since Kentucky travels with the elite of college basketball and has for many ears.

Of course, Kentucky, a loser in the NCAA championship game last March to UCLA, lost four starting seniors from that team and all four had been three-year regulars.

As a result, Southeastern Conference coaches picked the Kentuckians fourth in the league championship race this season and did a lot of bragging about how the SEC will be the strongest basketball league in the nation.

"We graduated a lot of good people," Kentucky coach Joe Hall said at a meeting of conference coaches and writers recently in Atlanta. "When I came out to face the team at our first practice session this fall, there were so many new faces, I felt like I had changed jobs."

Hall, however, wasn't pessimistic. "Replacing our starters won't be as big a problem as replacing our reserves. It may take us to mid-season to develop bench strength."

It now appears he was being overly optimistic.

Big Eight Has Surprises

Already in the new basketball season, there have been some surprises in Big Eight play, including the 66-58 loss by Kansas State to Texas Tech and a 105-80 loss by Iowa State to Vanderbilt, a future Husker foe Dec. 22 in Nashville.

Texas Tech has eight lettermen from last year's team which posted an 18-8 record and finished second in the Southwest Conference, so perhaps the KSU loss isn't all that much of a surprise.

Iowa State coach Ken Trickey still is having trouble getting any consistency in his run-and-gun style of play. Vanderbilt may have done something that other ISU foes may copy. The Commodores played a zone defense and Trickey said "a zone will get you out of your tempo. We stood around and had no penetration or movement." He might have added: no defense, either.

Kansas State bounced back Monday night for an impressive homecourt victory over Louisiana Tech, 86-49. Tech had all starters back from last year's 12-13 team, something that apparently isn't any asset.

Nebraska's next game Saturday night in the NU Coliseum will be against a Washington Husky team which won its first two games. The Huskies, who play at Wyoming Friday night, have all five starters from a 16-10 team.

One of those victories came over 1975 NCAA champion UCLA by 103-81 in Seattle. Washington's frontline includes 6-11 junior center James Edwards, 6-11 senior forward Lars Hansen; and 6-9 senior forward Larry Jackson.

Switzer: Kansas May Top Pitt

Switzer should have a pretty fair idea about the strengths of both teams. His Sooners walloped Pitt 46-10 on Sept. 20 and lost to Kansas 23-3 seven weeks later.

"Pitt may have improved on defense since we played them," Switzer said Monday, "but Kansas has stronger and more quality football players than Pitt."

Switzer and other Big Eight Conference football coaches were in Kansas City for their annual meeting.

Bud Moore, the Kansas coach, said he knew nothing about Pitt except the Panthers have one of the nation's finest running backs in Tony Dorsett.

Switzer said the Sooners may have benefited from their defeat by the Jayhawks.

"It may have had something to do with the way we played in the last two games," he explained. "Quarterback Steve Davis had his two finest games against Missouri and Nebraska."

Oklahoma won both games and tied Nebraska for the Big Eight championship with a 35-10 triumph over the Huskers and gained an Orange Bowl invitation.

"This was the pleasing part of our season," Switzer said. "Some ways our season was discouraging. As coach of a 10-1 team, I was discouraged because we did not play as well in some areas as we should have."

Moore said after Kansas lost to Washington State in the opener "we thought we might not win a game. Fortunately, our players had more confidence than maybe some of our coaches had."

"At the start of the season, we were more concerned about our team than any Nebraska team since 1969," said Husker Coach Tom Osborne. "We were generally pleased and somewhat surprised with the way things went.

Utah's Standouts To Spirits

CHICAGO (AP) — The American Basketball Association, encountering new financial problems almost daily, folded its Utah franchise here Tuesday after the club sold its four top players to the ABA team in St. Louis.

Sent to the Spirits of St. Louis for the cash needed to resolve Utah's outstanding debts were center Moses Malone, forwards Randy Denton and Steve Green and guard Ron Boone. The deal, for a "substantial amount of cash," will make St. Louis more competitive and will give the club a starting lineup earning about $1 million a year.

After the sale of those players, the ABA formally folded Utah, leaving owner Bill Daniels an estimated $3.1 million poorer for his experiences in the financially tough world of pro basketball.

In Salt Lake City, team officials were told they no longer had jobs, joining the former employes of the ABA clubs in San Diego and Baltimore, both of which have been folded since Oct. 15.

The action reduced the struggling league to seven teams, and supporters hoped that it would enhance their chances for merger with the rival National Basketball Association. But a number of formidable legal roadblocks still exist before any merger can even be discussed.

Prior to Tuesday's meeting, the league had been prepared to also fold the Virginia franchise and operate with six clubs. One league source said if Virginia, which nearly missed a payroll two weeks ago, did not come up with new cash to support its operation, the team would be disbanded.

No announcement was made concerning Virginia, and league officials said they would operate with seven teams. So, presumably the Virginia club came up with new cash.

In other action, ABA Commissioner Dave DeBusschere said the remaining Utah players would be placed on waivers. Among players available are guards John Roche and Rick Mount. And among the other persons looking for a new job is Coach Tom Nissalke.

Sale of the four players to St. Louis means the Spirits will have to cut four from its current roster. But the Spirits would be able to start a lineup of Malone at center, Maurice Lucas and Marvin Barnes at forwards and Boone and Don Chaney at guards, a group which should improve their 10-10 record.

It was the collapse of negotiations aimed at merging the Utah and St. Louis franchises that led to the end of the Stars. But the final result was that Utah's four best players wound up with St. Louis anyway.

In another action, the league voted to play its All-Star game in Denver this year, with last year's champion, Kentucky, playing a squad of the best players from other teams.

"This has been a year of financial problems, but our product is strong and in my mind we will finish strong," said DeBusschere. "We are looking forward to a merger possibility" with the NBA.

'Heisman Slights Best Players'

By DICK FENLON
The Louisville Times

LOUISVILLE, Ky. — The Outstanding College Football Player of the United States is being ignored. However, it is not necessary that you interrupt your reading to shed tears for him. Over 41 years, he has become accustomed to it.

I am sorry that I am not able to identify him precisely for you, but I can provide some hints. He is a center, or a guard or a tackle. Possibly even an end or a middle guard or a linebacker.

He basks in anonymity at Grambling or Jackson State, so unused to publicity that he never gives the lack of it a second thought. Or he may even be somewhere in the middle of the line at Ohio State or Southern Cal or Pitt, stolidly and unspectacularly opening the holes that enable Archie Griffin, Ricky Bell and Tony Dorsett to run to daylight and glory.

They added up the Heisman Trophy votes in New York Tuesday and, as is customary, the vast majority of the best players weren't even given a call. That's because nobody really knows who they are. For them, football is a masquerade party, and they have never been able to take off their masks.

I hate to tell you this, because I have voted in it for some years, but the Heisman Trophy poll is a joke. You can't blame the sponsor, the Downtown Athletic Club of New York, for this, because it runs a poll that is geographically balanced and scrupulously honest.

I don't suppose, even, that you can blame the people who vote, a cross-section of the nation's sports writers and sports casters, who dutifully cast their ballots each year for the only players they ever hear much about—the offensive backs.

Meantime, by my calculations, 7-11ths of the nation's football players are ignored. All of these happen to be linemen. Or, stretching the equation to include both offense and defense, 18 of each 22 get no consideration or respect, or both.

Sadly, the history of the Heisman Trophy poll is a sorry tale of blatant, unknowing discrimination. It was begun in 1935 with Jay Berwanger, a halfback from the University of Chicago, as the first trophy recipient. Larry Kelley, an end from Yale, succeeded him. After Kelley, 13 years passed before another lineman, Notre Dame's Leon Hart, was singled out.

There have been none since. Further, in all the years that two platoon football has been the vogue, which I figure to be two decades off and on, a defensive player has never come close to winning.

I suppose we can forgive the electorate for not keeping tabs on, and giving full consideration to, various pulling guards and such. How could we?

In the scuffle up front, even coaches can't tell who did what without first viewing and then reviewing the films. You may have noticed that some college teams announce their outstanding lineman of the week about Wednesday. That's because it took the coaching staff that long to decide which designated stud was knocking down the man he was supposed to.

On the other hand, the voters' obstinate refusal to give full consideration to defensive players is less worthy of understanding. Even a sports writer, inherently limited in both vision and acumen, knows what a good, hard tackle looks like. If he sees 15 or 20 a game, all perpetrated by the same player, he ought to realize that the fellow is doing something special.

But in the Heisman balloting, the defensive assassins never have a chance. No one does, really, except the quarterbacks and the running backs and—we can thank Nebraska's Johnny Rogers for the breakthrough—an occasional flanker.

Even worse, maybe, is the idea that consideration should be limited to scholars at a somewhat elite list of institutions of higher football learning. Since its inception, winners in the Heisman poll have come from just 26 schools. The names are familiar. Players from Notre Dame have won six times, Ohio State, five. The service academies, four.

Because they lack the name and the attention and the exposure, many other schools with equally gifted players go largely ignored. Grambling has never had a Heisman winner, and I am prepared to lay odds that it never will. I am not willing to bet, however, that Grambling has never had the best college football player in the United States on its roster.

Miller To Speak

Elgin, Ill. (UPI) — The athletic director of Southeast High School in Lincoln, will speak during a workshop of the 6th National Conference of High School Directors of Athletics in St. Louis, Mo.

Missouri Group Backs Onofrio

COLUMBIA, Mo. (AP) — Al Onofrio has won the unanimous support of the Intercollegiae Athletic Committee for another year as head football coach at the University of Missouri.

Athletic Director Mel Sheehan confirmed the weekend vote by the 10-member committee but noted the retention of Onofrio will not become official until it is formally approved by the university president.

Onofrio and other coaches at Missouri do not have formal contracts. They have agreements which are reviewed at the end of each season.

Onofrio has a 28-29 record over five seasons as head coach. The Tigers finished 6-5 this year after posting victories over Alabama, Illinois and Wisconsin in the first three games of the season.

Hart To Play Against Dallas

St. Louis (UPI) — Quarterback Jim Hart was removed from the injury report Tuesday and the St. Louis Cardinals said he will play Sunday against Dallas in the showdown for first place in the National Football Conference's East Division.

Husker Defense Eighth

By The Associated Press

If No. 2 ranked Texas A&M can put the clamps on Arkansas this Saturday, the Aggies can win two collegiate titles—rushing defense and total defense.

The 10-0 Aggies, who earn a trip to the Cotton Bowl by beating or tying Arkansas, held archrival Texas to 113 rushing yards and 179 yards in total offense last week. The Aggies now lead the nation in rushing defense, allowing 71.9 yards a game, and total defense, allowing 175.5 yards.

The Aggies must hold Arkansas' No. 2 rated rushing attack to 227 yards to keep ahead of Miami of Ohio in that category, while Arkansas needs 387 yards to move from second to first in rushing offense. Arkansas State now leads the nation in rushing offense with 340.5.

Alabama won the scoring defense championship, allowing 6.0 points a game, and VMI won the pass defense title.

Borg, Nastase Capture Masters' Tennis Wins

STOCKHOLM (AP) — Bjorn Borg, Sweden's young tennis hero, sent Harold Solomon spinning out of the Masters tournament Tuesday night, and Ilie Nastase partly redeemed his reputation as a rascal.

A happy patriotic crowd of 4,000 at Stockholm's Kungliga Hall cheered Borg as he hammered Solomon, the stubborn retriever from Silver Spring, Md., 6-2, 6-2.

Nastase, of Romania came back to his best behavior and his best tennis to down U.S. Open winner Manuel Orantes, the Spanish left-hander, 3-6, 6-4, 6-4.

Borg and Guillermo Vilas of Argentina now are assured of places in the semifinals. They are the two top players in the Blue Group of the round robin tournament.

Nastase's victory gave him a chance to qualify for the semifinals from the White Group, where Orantes still has to play Wimbledon champion Arthur Ashe.

The tournament has been under a cloud since the opening day, when Ashe stormed off court during a match with Nastase. Later, Nastase was disqualified, for the third time in a tournament this year, because of his behavior on court and Ashe was awarded the match.

Tuesday night, however, Nastase was a model of docility as he came from behind to demolish Orantes. Suddenly he was back in favor with the crowd, which jeered him off the court after the Ashe affair.

Orantes, one of the favorites for the $40,000 first prize, played well in the first set but made some poor shots later when the heat was on.

"I started to get tired in the second set," the Spanish lefthander said. "This is a slow court, and running about on it makes one very tired."

Nastase, 29 and three years Orantes' senior, lasted the pace better in an exciting finish.

From 3-3 in the final set three games went against service and Nastase was left leading 5-4 with his service to come.

In the seventh game, when Nastase lost a point on a highly doubtful line call, the crowd shouted and booed but the Romanian kept his cool. He went on to hit two fine backhand winners and break service.

Orantes broke back after some careless strokes from Nastase in the next game. But then it was the Spaniard's turn to make mistakes, and Nastase passed him with a backhand for another break and led 5-4.

Big Eight Awards Moore

Kansas City (AP) — You had to wonder about Bud Moore.

The day he set foot on Kansas soil to become the Jayhawks' new head football coach, he was still singing the praises of the likes of Bear Bryant and Alabama, his old coach and old stomping grounds.

"Coach Bryant this and Coach Bryant that . . . ," Bud Moore said, taking over from Don Fambrough, who had quit in the wake of contract difficulties but probably the most popular man around the Lawrence campus.

"At Alabama, we ran the wishbone like it should be run," Moore was saying, lifting eyebrows from the Kansas flatlands all the way to Oklahoma and back again. "Coach Bryant knows how to get more out of less than any coach in the country."

At the same time, Moore was saying, "Any time there is a coaching change and a team has not won, one of the first things you have to do is establish confidence." And then, there was this: "To be successful, you have to have a winner at quarterback."

All of this came from the lips of Bud Moore last December.

So what does Moore do?

Well, autumn arrives and Moore still doesn't know who his quarterback is going to be. He walks around talking about lifting Nolan Cromwell, a super safety, off the defensive side and has him running at quarterback. He also is moving this player from defense to offense and this player from offense to defense.

Three months, a rash of injured players and seven victories and only four defeats later, Moore's Jayhawks are headed for the Sun Bowl to play Pittsburgh and are ranked nationally. Nobody wonders about Bud Moore any longer.

Ex-Standouts Cite Olympics

NEW YORK (UPI) — Not terrorism, not nationalism, not commercialism, or even all three combined, should ever be enough to abolish the Olymvics Games, five celebrated Olympians all agreed Tuesday.

Those expressing that view were Jesse Owens, winner of four gold medals in the 1936 Olympics at Berlin; Bob Mathias, the only Olympian to win the decathlon twice; Glenn Cunningham, silver medalist in the 1,500 meters in 1936; Wilma Rudolph, triple gold medal winner in the 1960 Olympics in Rome, and Anne Henning, speedskating gold medalist in the 1972 Winter Olympic Games in Sapporo, Japan.

The five were present for the unveiling of an art collection of Great Moments in United States Olympic History, the paintings having been commissioned by a national merchandising company.

The 61-year-old Owens said he probably wouldn't have received any formal education had he not competed in the Olympics.

"We had no money," he said. "My father, not being a literate man, was a common laborer. The Olympics provided me not only with an opportunity to travel but to learn and grow as an individual. People who say that the Games are 'nationalistic' are the ones who never had the opportunity of standing atop the victory stand.

"It's a tremendous feeling when you stand there and watch your flag fly above all the others. You say to yourself, 'I am an Olympic champion' and the last thing in your mind is nationalism, commercialism or any other -ism."

Mathias said the Olympics are "still the greatest athletic contest in the world." The 45-year-old former Congressman said the games are "the only means, the only vehicle for young people to get together in one plwce at the same time and compete with each other."

Although mindful of the terrorist attacks which marred the 1972 Munich Games and resulted in 11 persons being killed, Mathias said he felt "it would be a disaster" to abolish the Games.

"Something like that is unfortunate," suid the husky Californian, who won his first decathlon gold medal at thy age of 17. "It's part of our times. Look at all the security precautions being taken at every airport. Does that mean we have to close the airports? By the same token, the Olympic Games certainly are a force for good and should continue."

To the growing charge that the Olympics are becoming too nationalistic, Cunningham replied he felt nationalism is what life is all about now.

"I'm 100 per cent in favor of nationalism," said the 66-year-old Kansan, once the world record holder for the mile. "I think all this business of trying to call it 'one world' is a lot of bunk because it is definitely not one world."

Rudolph, still looking as if she could beat all the other girls in the sprints even though she's the mother of a 17-year-old daughter, said she wouldn't change the concept of the Games for anything in the world. Insofar as the point system is concerned, showing each nation's total and often raising the charge of nationalism among its critics, the Tennessee gold medalist said she saw nothing wrong with the system.

"This whole country is based on a point system," she said. "Why change it in the Olympics?"

The Olympics, according to the 20-year-old Henning, benefits millions as a form of entertainment.

"I think it woudl be very sad for the world if they discontinued the Games for any reason," she said. "It is a means of 36 different nations (in the Winter Games) getting together peacefully and I wish that could happen more often than every four years."

Davis Spot To Connors

NEW YORK (AP) — Jimmy Connors, the world's top-ranked men's tennis player, will head the five-man United States Davis Cup team in an American Zone semifinal match against Mexico later this month, it was announced Tuesday by team captain Tony Trabert.

Connors will be joined by Brian Gottfried, Harold Solomon, Dick Stockton and Erik van Dillen for the competition at Mexico City.

Dolphins To Lose Morrall

MIAMI (AP) — The Miami Dolphins lost their second experienced quarterback in a week Tuesday when Earl Morrall was ruled unfit for duty, leaving the team's playoff hopes resting on the shoulders of unproven Don Strock.

Strock, a three-year benchwarmer who had not completed a National Football League pass until Morrall injured his left knee in the second half of Monday night's 20-7 victory over New England, was tabbed by Coach Don Shula as his starter for at least the next two weeks.

The Dolphins, 8-3, face their two American Conference East Division rivals, Buffalo and Baltimore, both 7-4, the next two Sundays.

Jim Del Gaizo, a former Dolphin reserve quarterback who has been in the insurance business in Miami since being cut this summer by the New York Giants, was activated by Shula as Strock's backup.

Shula made room on the roster for Del Gaizo by placing regular quarterback Bob Griese on injured reserve, ineligible to return this season. A toe injury in the Nov. 23 Houston game had sidelined Griese.

"It's believed Earl has a partial ligament tear," said Shula after getting doctors' reports on the 41-year-old Morrall. "It's not going to be operated on at the present time. We're going to try to keep him quiet for the next few days and see if he can help us in two to three weeks.

"If he can help us, it'll be with a knee brace," said Shula.

Shula said he called upon Del Gaizo as his reserve because "Del Gaizo could probably line up tomorrow and call all of our offense. That's what you need at this stage. The majority of players available would have to learn the system right from scratch."

OU's 'All In The Family' Gains Switzer's Praise

Kansas City (AP) — For Oklahoma coach Barry Switzer, the class of '75 will likely remain in a class by itself.

And he's certain there'll never be another family like the brothers Selmon of Eufaula — namely Leroy, Lucious and Dewey.

Leroy, a 256-pound defensive tackle, and Dewey, a 257-pound nose guard, were named Monday to the Associated Press 1975 college football All-America team.

Brother Lucious was the AP's All-America nose guard his senior year in 1973.

Also on this year's All-America team was Jimbo Elrod, Oklahoma's right defensive end. That gave the No. 3-ranked Sooners more players on the elite squad than any other school.

Senior Class

The three are members of a senior class which in three years has lost only one game, won the 1974 national championship, won the Big Eight Conference championship in '73 and '74 and tied for it this season.

"This has to be the greatest group of seniors ever to play at one time at the University of Oklahoma," a beaming Switzer said Monday after the All-America selections were announced. He was in Kansas City for the Big Eight coaches annual meeting.

"You can run down our list of seniors and it's like a who's who of super college football players of their era . . . Steve Davis, our quarterback, and the Selmons, of course. Joe Washington, who I think is the greatest running back in the country, even though he had a disappointing year statistically this season . . . two great wide receivers, Tinker Owens and Billy Brooks . . ."

Switzer said the Selmons, more than anyone else, have been responsible for the success the Oklahoma football program has enjoyed the past three years.

Modest, church-going Baptists, the brothers all carried better than B-averages through college and have been visibly unaffected by the acclaim they have won. The stories of their impoverished childhood on a small farm in eastern Oklahoma have become legend in Sooner land.

'Same Kind'

"All three were bonafide All-Americans," Switzer said. "No one brother carried the other. They are unspoiled, uncorrupted and unselfish. They're the same kind of polite, unassuming young men they were when I first met them."

In four years of trench warfare against some of the best offensive linemen in the nation, the Selmons, almost incredibly, have never been physically defeated.

"A pro scout told me a few days ago that in four years Leroy has been blocked to his feet just twice . . . in all four years. I knew that was right because I've been his coach. I asked the scout what were the occasions, and the guy had really done his homework. It happened once when he was double-teamed, and once another year when he got his feet tangled with the blockers and fell down.

"Leroy got up and made a great talk," Switzer said. "He talked about his mama and daddy, and thanked them for his success. He said there were a lot of players as big and as fast and as strong as him, and a lot of awards for just athletic ability. He said he was especially garteful for that particular award because it was given for scholarship first, citizenship second and athletic ability third."

Fiesta's Trademarks: Hospitality, Entertainment

That's Hospitality

Ask Oklahoma State assistant football coach Harold Richardson.

He scheduled his wedding for Christmas Day prior to the Cowboys' acceptance of a Fiesta Bowl bid last year to play Brigham Young.

The date went unchanged. Richardson was married with ceremonies at the Casa Blanca Hotel, where Oklahoma State's team was staying.

No reception had been planned.

That is, until the Tempe (Ariz.) Diablos came to the rescue. The Fiesta ambassadors put their heads together and planned a reception, complete with champagne and cake.

The booster group was in Lincoln Tuesday, promoting good will, not tickets, since the Dec. 26 game has been a sellout since last August.

Both had direct tie-ins to the opposing teams.

"I used to coach at Wake Forest and competed against Frank Kush (Arizona State's head coach)," Amen pointed out. "I know his technique — entertain the opposing team so royally that it forgets it came down to play a football game.

"It's a very good idea," Amen admitted. "We used that same philosophy at Army when teams used to come to West Point. Eventually, some got smart."

Harold Richardson

Sears lived in Lincoln for nine years, leaving when Bob Devaney arrived and "put Nebraska football into the national spotlight."

"He's been inTempe four years. "I really enjoyed Lincoln, but it just doesn't have Arizona's weather," he said.

Ray Cox, the radio voice of Sun Devil football teams, was part of the entourage. He commended Fiesta officials "for waiting and seeing through the maze" of late-season bowl developments.

"The six-man bowl committee spent a hectic Saturday afternoon and Sunday morning," he pointed out. "They looked at California, UCLA and Stanford, but didn't panic and got an excellent football team."

According to Cox, a television contract initiated last year with CBS was the biggest stepping stone for the Fiesta Bowl.

"The rule by the Big Ten and Pacific Eight, opening up different possibilities, also helped the bowl situation," he said.

Cox noted that the Fiesta Bowl, joining the Rose Bowl as the only sellout post-season games for four consecutive seasons, ranked seventh among all bowls in terms of payoff a year ago.

"To achieve that status (behind the Big Four bowls, the Astro-Bluebonnet and the Liberty) in four years is a rather remarkable fact," he said.

Amen said he thought Kush "would wind up in the Big Eight this year at Colorado, but evidently you people have a lot more money down there."

"Like Nebraskans, Arizonans love their football," Sears said. "We're very proud and pull out all the stops. Since its inception, everything that goes into the Fiesta Bowl is intended to be first class from the smallest detail."

The reputation must have spread. Last year, when the New York Times News Service mapped the "major bowls," it included five — the Rose, Orange, Sugar, Cotton and Fiesta.

"Bob Devaney is well aware of our hospitality," Sears said of the Nebraska athletic director. "I think he's been a speaker at our kickoff luncheon for three out of the four years."

RANDY YORK

The Fiesta Bowl parade, set for Saturday, Dec. 20, is rapidly gaining national acclaim. It drew 84,000 spectators last year and expects to draw 115,000 this year.

"We've really put our best foot forward on pageantry this year," a member of the booster group said. "Last year, we had eight floats that were in the Rose Bowl parade.

"We've got our sights set high," he added. "In five years, we expect to be equal to or better than the Rose parade. We had to limit our entries to 150 this year. Some of those floats cost $25,000."

It's all part of the Fiesta, a Mexican word for big party.

"We're anxious to see a lot of red hats, red sweaters and Cornhuskers in Arizona," Sears said, noting one prediction for the game has already been posted at a Lincoln motel.

It said ASU 71, Nebraska 35.

Those sneaky devils from the Valley of the Sun obviously had a part in it.

Archie Griffin of Ohio State holds two fingers as he poses with the Heisman Trophy after he was named the winner of the trophy for the second consecutive year.

Griffin Snaps Heisman Jinx

NEW YORK (AP) — Ohio State's Archie Griffin, major college football's first 5,000-yard runner, overcame his lack of size, survived the taunts of 11 teams determined to ring his bell and became the first two-time winner of the coveted Heisman Trophy Tuesday.

"There was a lot of pressure this year," the 5-foot-9, 184-pound senior tailback said after becoming the first Heisman repeater, succeeding where four others failed—Army's Doc Blanchard, Doak Walker of Southern Methodist, Ohio State's Vic Janowicz and Navy's Roger Staubach.

"Being tagged the Heisman winner, naturally guys on other teams were after me more this year. They all tackled me clean, but they might say a few things like, 'Get up, Heisman Trophy-winner.' "

Griffin, who has rushed for 5,176 yards in four seasons, will wind up his collegiate career in a fourth consecutive Rose Bowl against UCLA.

He captured the 1975 Heisman by a landslide over running backs Chuck Muncie of California and Ricky Bell of Southern Cal. Griffin received 454 first-place ballots, 167 seconds and 104 thirds from 888 sports writers and broadcasters across the country. On a 3-2-1 basis, that amounted to 1,800 points. Muncie (145-104-87) received 730 points to 708 for Bell (70-169-160).

Rounding out the top 10 finishers were running backs Tony Dorsett of Pitt, Joe Washington of Oklahoma and Jimmy DuBose of Florida, quarterback John Sciarra of UCLA, running back Gordon Bell of Michigan, defensive tackle Leroy Selmon of Oklahoma and quarterback Gene Swick of Toledo.

Griffin carried four of the country's five sections—East, South, Midwest and Southwest—finishing behind Muncie in the Far West.

"I really tried not to think about the Heisman all year but I couldn't really get it off my mind a whole lot because people kept reminding me about it," Griffin said. "I got it off my mind just enough because I had a job to do every Saturday.

"In a way, it was a relief to get out on the field on Saturday even though I was getting hit pretty hard and I'd be banged up half the week. The hitting was a lot harder this year. It was rough out there."

Griffin rushed for more than 100 yards almost every Saturday starting with his sophomore year. He was stopped short in last season's Rose Bowl against Southern Cal, but his regular-season streak of 100-yard games reached a record 31 before Michigan held him to 46 in the 1975 finale.

In winning the 1974 Heisman over Southern Cal's Anthony Davis by 1,920 points to 819, Griffin rushed 236 times for 1,620 yards. This season, he carried 245 times for 1,357 yards.

"I think I helped the team more this year because my blocking and pass-catching were better," Griffin said.

"We didn't run into dirty football, but they just loved to tackle him," said Coach Woody Hayes, who accompanied hometown hero Griffin from Columbus, Ohio, to New York for Tuesday's announcement.

The matched pair of Heismans will look nice on the Griffin mantelpiece, but Archie said he'd "trade both of them for the national championship. That's been the goal of our team since I was a freshman. This is the closest now we've ever come. People think of the national championship as more of a team thing than the Heisman Trophy.

"But the Heisman is a team trophy, a team award. No matter how good a back is, you can't do anything without the other backs and the line blocking for you and the defense getting you the ball.

Huskers' Lapse Aids Iowa Victory, 72-65

By BOB OWENS
Star Sports Editor

Iowa City, Iowa — Nebraska lost its poise for only a brief period late in the game Tuesday night against Iowa, but it was long enough for the Hawkeyes to pull away to a 72-65 victory before 9,200 fans at the Iowa Fieldhouse.

Then, facing a full-court Iowa pressing defense, they turned the ball over six times in the next seven minutes and their lead dwindled to a single point at 47-46 with 9:06 to play.

Iowa Rallies

A little more than 2½ minutes later, the Hawkeyes made their move to get the lead for the first time since the final three minutes of the first half.

They achieved it on a pair of free throws by reserve Dick Peth and three consecutive jumps shots within 45 seconds from the corner by starting guard Scott Thompson.

That made it 54-50 Iowa with 5:44 left, but the tiring Huskers still had a chance to win. They came back to lead 58-54 on reserve guard Brian Banks' 10-foot jumper with 4:54 to play.

Then the turning point came — a four-point Iowa play which started when Allen Holder fouled Hawkeye Dan Frost, a usually-high scoring forward who was held in check most of the night, first by Holder, then by Bob Siegel in the second half.

Fort hit the first of a one-and-one free throw situation, but when he missed the second one, sub guard Archie Mays grabbed the rebound, put it back in the basket and was fouled by freshman reserve center Carl McPipe.

Fort Scores 25

Although high-scoring Husker guard Jerry Fort, who ended with 25 points, hit to tie the score at 58-58, the Hawkeyes took the lead for keeps on Mays' five-footer with 4:09 remaining.

The Huskers still had a chance with 39 seconds to play after McPipe's five-footer made it 64-66. But center Bruce King, Iowa's top scorer with 25 points, put in a fast-break layup after beating a Nebraska full-court press.

He added two free throws when it was ruled McPipe's foul was intentional. That ended all hopes of a road victory and left the Huskers with a 1-2 record against Big Ten teams.

"We lost our patience on their press which hurt the tempo we wanted to maintain," NU coach Joe Cipriano said. "Then there was that four-point play and a couple of missed free throws in key situations at the end."

Cipriano said the Huskers aren't getting enough board play, which hurt them down the stretch even though official statistics show they were outrebounded by only a 43-41 margin.

Olson Pleased

Winning coach Lute Olson said he felt the key for Iowa was keeping excellent defensive pressure and not losing poise despite some charging calls that went against his Hawkeyes.

"We knew Nebraska was an excellent defensive club, Olson said. "They really get out and pressure the pass well. This is a better defensive team than we're going to face most of the time. Nebraska's defense made our offense not play so well, but overall it was a well-played non-conference game."

Nebraska went into the game seeking to avoid getting into a run-and-shoot battle with Iowa, which won its opener last Saturday by scoring 111 points.

They shot a sizzling 58.6% from the field in the first half and went to the dressing room with a 34-28 lead. They didn't panic at the outset when Iowa took a 10-4 lead and came back to go in front 18-17 halfway through the first half.

Close Throughout

It was nip-and-tuck until the final minute and a half when center Larry Cox got open for a layup on a feed by Siegel, Banks scored after a steal and Fort hit a jumper with two seconds left in the half as the Huskers worked about a minute off the clock for a final shot.

Iowa was forced into 12 turnovers in the half and hit just 42.9% in the first 20 minutes.

Frost, who scored 27 points against Augustana last Saturday, had only seven points in the game and turned the ball over eight times.

Nebraska returned to Lincoln after the game to begin preparing to face undefeated Washington Saturday night at the NU Coliseum.

Fiesta Tickets Short Of Demand

By RANDY YORK

Nebraska ticket manager Jim Pittenger confirmed Tuesday that the Cornhusker allotment of 8,200 seats for the Fiesta Bowl in Tempo, Ariz., Dec. 26, is sold out.

"The ticket crunch has been surprising even to me," Pittenger admitted. "Nebraska fans have never been faced with spending Christmas away from home. I thought it might ease the demand."

It didn't. "It appears from early tabulations that we were sold out the first two days (Nov. 24 and 25) after the Oklahoma game," Pittenger said.

Greater Crunch

He added that "even though our supply for the Orange and Sugar Bowls were greater, the crunch for the Fiesta is just as bad."

Actually, the crunch is worse than last year's Sugar Bowl because Pittenger returned about a thousand tickets from Nebraska's allotment of 14,500.

At a Tuesday morning press conference in Lincoln, Fiesta Bowl officials indicated an all-time ticket demand high for the game, a sellout in each of its first four years.

"The demand is tremendous," said Gene Sears, president of the Tempe Chamber of Commerce. "Technically, the game has been a sellout since last August.

"Since the Fiesta Bowl has wound up with teams with the best combined record of all the bowls, the crunch is really on," he said.

One Fiesta official heard that Nebraska fans have placed an ad in the Arizona State collegiate newspaper, offering $200 for tickets. He did not know how many tickets were included in the offer.

Another Fiesta official noted that he had received a ticket request from a former Miss Nebraska, now living in Phoenix.

Tempe's city manager joined the chorus. "My secretary has filled a yellow legal sized page with department heads and city officials wanting tickets, most of whom have never made such requests before," Ken McDonald said.

Fiesta brass are hoping the crunch on 51,388-seat Sun Devil Stadium eases in the future. Capacity will increase to 67,000 at the end of next football season and to 82,000 in a secondary building phase projected for completion in 1982.

Wayne Rolls Past Mt. Marty

Anderson scored 29 points and Pressler 24. Wayne drew out of a 57-57 lead to win. The Wildcats shot 58 per cent from the field.

Chuck Brewer led Mt. Marty with 32 points, most of them outside shots. Both teams are 1-3.

Nicodemus 'Upset' Despite 61-59 Win Over Kearney

By DAVE SITTLER

"Boy we played terrible," said Nicodemus, the Nebraska women's basketball coach. "We tried to give the game away."

A relieved Nicodemus was reflecting on his club's 61-59 victory over Kearney State Tuesday night at the Nebraska Women's Physical Education Building.

It was the first win of the year for the Cornhuskers after an opening loss to Grandview College of Des Moines, Iowa. It was also the initial victory for Nicodemus, who took over the Husker gals' basketball program this season after a successful tenure at now defunct John F. Kennedy College in Wahoo.

Feels Great

"Winning the first game feels great," Nicodemus said. "But we still played terrible. I think the girls were nervous. We're a young ball club."

Young indeed. The Cornhuskers start a junior, a sophomore and three freshmen.

Freshmen forward Darcy Williamson led the Huskers in scoring with 15 points, while junior guard Kathy Hawkins and freshman guard Sherry Brink each added 14 tallies to the winning effort.

Coach Connie Hansen's Antelope's connected on 18 of 24 first half free throws. Center Julie Hall, who led all scorers with 19 points, hit 8 out of 9 charity tosses in the opening period.

"We only allowed Kearney seven field goals in the first half," Nicodemus said of the opening stanza which saw the Huskers take a 40-32 lead. "But their free throws kept them in the game."

Lead Melts

Nebraska appeared to have the game tucked away with a 57-52 lead and less than three minutes left. But two free throws by Hall, a bucket by Jackie Warrick and a free throw by Lou Senff knotted the score at 57-57 with 1:06 left.

Two reserves, Kathy Foley and Brenda Lightbody, came to the rescue for the Cornhuskers with two quick field goals before Jerri Torson's basket at the buzzer drew Kearney within two points at the final, 61-59, count.

Adding to Nebraska's woes were 25 turnovers and frigid shooting from the floor. The Huskers shot 36 per cent from the field the first half and a mere 27 the final half.

"We're going to have to be around 42 to 45 per cent consistently to be a winner," Nicodemus said. "But we blew a lot of layups. We'll get better. We're going to surprise a lot of people before this season is over."

The Cornhuskers, now 1-1, travel to Omaha Friday for a 7:30 p.m. tilt with Creighton University.

Dave Bing led the Bullets with 22 points, including 13 in the final period when Washington recovered from a five-point deficit to take its only lead of the game.

Jazz Wins

The youthful New Orleans Jazz rode the rugged play of veterans Ron Behagen and Otto Moore and rookie Jim McElroy to a win over the struggling Buffalo Braves.

Third-year pro Behagen tossed in a team-high 27 points, grabbed 13 rebounds and had nine assists in spurring the two-year-old expansion team to its first win over the Braves. Moore, an eight-year veteran, added 14 points and 14 rebounds for the Jazz, while McElroy tallied 19 points.

Meanwhile, Rudy Tomjanovich and Kevin Kunnert combined for 36 points to lead the Houston Rockets to their fourth straight victory, downing the Chicago Bulls.

Chones Aids Win

Jim Chones tossed in 19 points and pulled down 16 rebounds while a tight Cleveland defense held Portland to only four field goals in the final eight and one-half minutes as the Cavaliers grabbed a victory over the Trailblazers.

Nate Thurman, playing his second game for the Cavs, grabbed nine rebounds and added 11 points in 20 minutes of action as the Cavs won their second straight.

The Boston Centics scored the game's first 11 points, but had to hold on in the closing seconds to top the Knicks as Dave Cowens scored 25 points and grabbed 21 rebounds before fouling out.

With Boston leading 101-100, Walt Frazier, who scored 20 points, missed a 18-foot shot with three seconds remaining. Jim Ard then clinched the game with two free throws as time ran out.

Senior Rick Nissen pumped in 32 points and then helped the Coyotes hang on down the stretch after nearly blowing a 23-point margin with less than 10 minutes to play.

The Cyclones, who trailed 70-47 at that point, never got closer than the final score, although they outscored their North Central Conference foes 27-9 in the final minutes.

ISU's Hercie Ivy, the No. 5 scorer in the nation last season, was high man for the losers with 26 points, though limited to only eight at halftime.

Iowa City, Iowa — One by one, members of the Nebraska basketball team and coaches walked into the motel coffee shop Tuesday morning and heard the news: Northwestern defeated Kentucky by 12 points Monday night.

The expressions were all the same — disbelief. This is the same Northwestern team that lost to Nebraska by 11 points last Saturday night in Lincoln.

The victory by Northwestern has to be a boost to Nebraska's ego and to the reputation of Big Eight Conference basketball since Kentucky travels with the elite of college basketball and has for many ears.

Of course, Kentucky, a loser in the NCAA championship game last March to UCLA, lost four starting seniors from that team and all four had been three-year regulars.

As a result, Southeastern Conference coaches picked the Kentuckians fourth in the league championship race this season and did a lot of bragging about how the SEC will be the strongest basketball league in the nation.

"We graduated a lot of good people," Kentucky coach Joe Hall said at a meeting of conference coaches and writers recently in Atlanta. "When I came out to face the team at our first practice session this fall, there were so many new faces, I felt like I had changed jobs."

Hall, however, wasn't pessimistic. "Replacing our starters won't be as big a problem as replacing our reserves. It may take us to mid-season to develop bench strength."

It now appears he was being overly optimistic.

Big Eight Has Surprises

Already in the new basketball season, there have been some surprises in Big Eight play, including the 66-58 loss by Kansas State to Texas Tech and a 105-80 loss by Iowa State to Vanderbilt, a future Husker foe Dec. 22 in Nashville.

Texas Tech has eight lettermen from last year's team which posted an 18-8 record and finished second in the Southwest Conference, so perhaps the KSU loss isn't all that much of a surprise.

Iowa State coach Ken Trickey still is having trouble getting any consistency in his run-and-gun style of play. Vanderbilt may have done something that other ISU foes may copy. The Commodores played a zone defense and Trickey said "a zone will get you out of your tempo. We stood around and had no penetration or movement." He might have added: no defense, either.

Kansas State bounced back Monday night for an impressive homecourt victory over Louisiana Tech, 86-49. Tech had all starters back from last year's 12-13 team, something that apparently isn't any asset.

Nebraska's next game Saturday night in the NU Coliseum will be against a Washington Husky team which won its first two games. The Huskies, who play at Wyoming Friday night, have all five starters from a 16-10 team.

One of those victories came over 1975 NCAA champion UCLA by 103-81 in Seattle. Washington's frontline includes 6-11 junior center James Edwards, 6-11 senior forward Lars Hansen; and 6-9 senior forward Larry Jackson.

Switzer: Kansas May Top Pitt

Switzer should have a pretty fair idea about the strengths of both teams. His Sooners walloped Pitt 46-10 on Sept. 20 and lost to Kansas 23-3 seven weeks later.

"Pitt may have improved on defense since we played them," Switzer said Monday, "but Kansas has stronger and more quality football players than Pitt."

Switzer and other Big Eight Conference football coaches were in Kansas City for their annual meeting.

Bud Moore, the Kansas coach, said he knew nothing about Pitt except the Panthers have one of the nation's finest running backs in Tony Dorsett.

Switzer said the Sooners may have benefited from their defeat by the Jayhawks.

"It may have had something to do with the way we played in the last two games," he explained. "Quarterback Steve Davis had his two finest games against Missouri and Nebraska."

Oklahoma won both games and tied Nebraska for the Big Eight championship with a 35-10 triumph over the Huskers and gained an Orange Bowl invitation.

"This was the pleasing part of our season," Switzer said. "Some ways our season was discouraging. As coach of a 10-1 team, I was discouraged because we did not play as well in some areas as we should have."

Moore said after Kansas lost to Washington State in the opener "we thought we might not win a game. Fortunately, our players had more confidence than maybe some of our coaches had."

"At the start of the season, we were more concerned about our team than any Nebraska team since 1969," said Husker Coach Tom Osborne. "We were generally pleased and somewhat surprised with the way things went.

Utah's Standouts To Spirits

CHICAGO (AP) — The American Basketball Association, encountering new financial problems almost daily, folded its Utah franchise here Tuesday after the club sold its four top players to the ABA team in St. Louis.

Sent to the Spirits of St. Louis for the cash needed to resolve Utah's outstanding debts were center Moses Malone, forwards Randy Denton and Steve Green and guard Ron Boone. The deal, for a "substantial amount of cash," will make St. Louis more competitive and will give the club a starting lineup earning about $1 million a year.

After the sale of those players, the ABA formally folded Utah, leaving owner Bill Daniels an estimated $3.1 million poorer for his experiences in the financially tough world of pro basketball.

In Salt Lake City, team officials were told they no longer had jobs, joining the former employes of the ABA clubs in San Diego and Baltimore, both of which have been folded since Oct. 15.

The action reduced the struggling league to seven teams, and supporters hoped that it would enhance their chances for merger with the rival National Basketball Association. But a number of formidable legal roadblocks still exist before any merger can even be discussed.

Prior to Tuesday's meeting, the league had been prepared to also fold the Virginia franchise and operate with six clubs. One league source said if Virginia, which nearly missed a payroll two weeks ago, did not come up with new cash to support its operation, the team would be disbanded.

No announcement was made concerning Virginia, and league officials said they would operate with seven teams. So, presumably the Virginia club came up with new cash.

In other action, ABA Commissioner Dave DeBusschere said the remaining Utah players would be placed on waivers. Among players available are guards John Roche and Rick Mount. And among the other persons looking for a new job is Coach Tom Nissalke.

Sale of the four players to St. Louis means the Spirits will have to cut four from its current roster. But the Spirits would be able to start a lineup of Malone at center, Maurice Lucas and Marvin Barnes at forwards and Boone and Don Chaney at guards, a group which should improve their 10-10 record.

It was the collapse of negotiations aimed at merging the Utah and St. Louis franchises that led to the end of the Stars. But the final result was that Utah's four best players wound up with St. Louis anyway.

In another action, the league voted to play its All-Star game in Denver this year, with last year's champion, Kentucky, playing a squad of the best players from other teams.

"This has been a year of financial problems, but our product is strong and in my mind we will finish strong," said DeBusschere. "We are looking forward to a merger possibility" with the NBA.

'Heisman Slights Best Players'

By DICK FENLON
The Louisville Times

LOUISVILLE, Ky. — The Outstanding College Football Player of the United States is being ignored. However, it is not necessary that you interrupt your reading to shed tears for him. Over 41 years, he has become accustomed to it.

I am sorry that I am not able to identify him precisely for you, but I can provide some hints. He is a center, or a guard or a tackle. Possibly even an end or a middle guard or a linebacker.

He basks in anonymity at Grambling or Jackson State, so unused to publicity that he never gives the lack of it a second thought. Or he may even be somewhere in the middle of the line at Ohio State or Southern Cal or Pitt, stolidly and unspectacularly opening the holes that enable Archie Griffin, Ricky Bell and Tony Dorsett to run to daylight and glory.

They added up the Heisman Trophy votes in New York Tuesday and, as is customary, the vast majority of the best players weren't even given a call. That's because nobody really knows who they are. For them, football is a masquerade party, and they have never been able to take off their masks.

I hate to tell you this, because I have voted in it for some years, but the Heisman Trophy poll is a joke. You can't blame the sponsor, the Downtown Athletic Club of New York, for this, because it runs a poll that is geographically balanced and scrupulously honest.

I don't suppose, even, that you can blame the people who vote, a cross-section of the nation's sports writers and sports casters, who dutifully cast their ballots each year for the only players they ever hear much about—the offensive backs.

Meantime, by my calculations, 7-11ths of the nation's football players are ignored. All of these happen to be linemen. Or, stretching the equation to include both offense and defense, 18 of each 22 get no consideration or respect, or both.

Sadly, the history of the Heisman Trophy poll is a sorry tale of blatant, unknowing discrimination. It was begun in 1935 with Jay Berwanger, a halfback from the University of Chicago, as the first trophy recipient. Larry Kelley, an end from Yale, succeeded him. After Kelley, 13 years passed before another lineman, Notre Dame's Leon Hart, was singled out.

There have been none since. Further, in all the years that two platoon football has been the vogue, which I figure to be two decades off and on, a defensive player has never come close to winning.

I suppose we can forgive the electorate for not keeping tabs on, and giving full consideration to, various pulling guards and such. How could we?

In the scuffle up front, even coaches can't tell who did what without first viewing and then reviewing the films. You may have noticed that some college teams announce their outstanding lineman of the week about Wednesday. That's because it took the coaching staff that long to decide which designated stud was knocking down the man he was supposed to.

On the other hand, the voters' obstinate refusal to give full consideration to defensive players is less worthy of understanding. Even a sports writer, inherently limited in both vision and acumen, knows what a good, hard tackle looks like. If he sees 15 or 20 a game, all perpetrated by the same player, he ought to realize that the fellow is doing something special.

But in the Heisman balloting, the defensive assassins never have a chance. No one does, really, except the quarterbacks and the running backs and—we can thank Nebraska's Johnny Rogers for the breakthrough—an occasional flanker.

Even worse, maybe, is the idea that consideration should be limited to scholars at a somewhat elite list of institutions of higher football learning. Since its inception, winners in the Heisman poll have come from just 26 schools. The names are familiar. Players from Notre Dame have won six times, Ohio State, five. The service academies, four.

Because they lack the name and the attention and the exposure, many other schools with equally gifted players go largely ignored. Grambling has never had a Heisman winner, and I am prepared to lay odds that it never will. I am not willing to bet, however, that Grambling has never had the best college football player in the United States on its roster.

Missouri Group Backs Onofrio

COLUMBIA, Mo. (AP) — Al Onofrio has won the unanimous support of the Intercollegiae Athletic Committee for another year as head football coach at the University of Missouri.

Athletic Director Mel Sheehan confirmed the weekend vote by the 10-member committee but noted the retention of Onofrio will not become official until it is formally approved by the university president.

Onofrio and other coaches at Missouri do not have formal contracts. They have agreements which are reviewed at the end of each season.

Onofrio has a 28-29 record over five seasons as head coach. The Tigers finished 6-5 this year after posting victories over Alabama, Illinois and Wisconsin in the first three games of the season.

Hart To Play Against Dallas

St. Louis (UPI) — Quarterback Jim Hart was removed from the injury report Tuesday and the St. Louis Cardinals said he will play Sunday against Dallas in the showdown for first place in the National Football Conference's East Division.

Husker Defense Eighth

By The Associated Press

If No. 2 ranked Texas A&M can put the clamps on Arkansas this Saturday, the Aggies can win two collegiate titles—rushing defense and total defense.

The 10-0 Aggies, who earn a trip to the Cotton Bowl by beating or tying Arkansas, held archrival Texas to 113 rushing yards and 179 yards in total offense last week. The Aggies now lead the nation in rushing defense, allowing 71.9 yards a game, and total defense, allowing 175.5 yards.

The Aggies must hold Arkansas' No. 2 rated rushing attack to 227 yards to keep ahead of Miami of Ohio in that category, while Arkansas needs 387 yards to move from second to first in rushing offense. Arkansas State now leads the nation in rushing offense with 340.5.

Alabama won the scoring defense championship, allowing 6.0 points a game, and VMI won the pass defense title.

Borg, Nastase Capture Masters' Tennis Wins

STOCKHOLM (AP) — Bjorn Borg, Sweden's young tennis hero, sent Harold Solomon spinning out of the Masters tournament Tuesday night, and Ilie Nastase partly redeemed his reputation as a rascal.

A happy patriotic crowd of 4,000 at Stockholm's Kungliga Hall cheered Borg as he hammered Solomon, the stubborn retriever from Silver Spring, Md., 6-2, 6-2.

Nastase, of Romania came back to his best behavior and his best tennis to down U.S. Open winner Manuel Orantes, the Spanish left-hander, 3-6, 6-4, 6-4.

Borg and Guillermo Vilas of Argentina now are assured of places in the semifinals. They are the two top players in the Blue Group of the round robin tournament.

Nastase's victory gave him a chance to qualify for the semifinals from the White Group, where Orantes still has to play Wimbledon champion Arthur Ashe.

The tournament has been under a cloud since the opening day, when Ashe stormed off court during a match with Nastase. Later, Nastase was disqualified, for the third time in a tournament this year, because of his behavior on court and Ashe was awarded the match.

Tuesday night, however, Nastase was a model of docility as he came from behind to demolish Orantes. Suddenly he was back in favor with the crowd, which jeered him off the court after the Ashe affair.

Orantes, one of the favorites for the $40,000 first prize, played well in the first set but made some poor shots later when the heat was on.

"I started to get tired in the second set," the Spanish lefthander said. "This is a slow court, and running about on it makes one very tired."

Nastase, 29 and three years Orantes' senior, lasted the pace better in an exciting finish.

From 3-3 in the final set three games went against service and Nastase was left leading 5-4 with his service to come.

In the seventh game, when Nastase lost a point on a highly doubtful line call, the crowd shouted and booed but the Romanian kept his cool. He went on to hit two fine backhand winners and break service.

Orantes broke back after some careless strokes from Nastase in the next game. But then it was the Spaniard's turn to make mistakes, and Nastase passed him with a backhand for another break and led 5-4.

Dolphins To Lose Morrall

MIAMI (AP) — The Miami Dolphins lost their second experienced quarterback in a week Tuesday when Earl Morrall was ruled unfit for duty, leaving the team's playoff hopes resting on the shoulders of unproven Don Strock.

Strock, a three-year benchwarmer who had not completed a National Football League pass until Morrall injured his left knee in the second half of Monday night's 20-7 victory over New England, was tabbed by Coach Don Shula as his starter for at least the next two weeks.

The Dolphins, 8-3, face their two American Conference East Division rivals, Buffalo and Baltimore, both 7-4, the next two Sundays.

Jim Del Gaizo, a former Dolphin reserve quarterback who has been in the insurance business in Miami since being cut this summer by the New York Giants, was activated by Shula as Strock's backup.

Shula made room on the roster for Del Gaizo by placing regular quarterback Bob Griese on injured reserve, ineligible to return this season. A toe injury in the Nov. 23 Houston game had sidelined Griese.

"It's believed Earl has a partial ligament tear," said Shula after getting doctors' reports on the 41-year-old Morrall. "It's not going to be operated on at the present time. We're going to try to keep him quiet for the next few days and see if he can help us in two to three weeks.

"If he can help us, it'll be with a knee brace," said Shula.

Shula said he called upon Del Gaizo as his reserve because "Del Gaizo could probably line up tomorrow and call all of our offense. That's what you need at this stage. The majority of players available would have to learn the system right from scratch."

OU's 'All In The Family' Gains Switzer's Praise

Kansas City (AP) — For Oklahoma coach Barry Switzer, the class of '75 will likely remain in a class by itself.

And he's certain there'll never be another family like the brothers Selmon of Eufaula — namely Leroy, Lucious and Dewey.

Leroy, a 256-pound defensive tackle, and Dewey, a 257-pound nose guard, were named Monday to the Associated Press 1975 college football All-America team.

Brother Lucious was the AP's All-America nose guard his senior year in 1973.

Also on this year's All-America team was Jimbo Elrod, Oklahoma's right defensive end. That gave the No. 3-ranked Sooners more players on the elite squad than any other school.

Senior Class

The three are members of a senior class which in three years has lost only one game, won the 1974 national championship, won the Big Eight Conference championship in '73 and '74 and tied for it this season.

"This has to be the greatest group of seniors ever to play at one time at the University of Oklahoma," a beaming Switzer said Monday after the All-America selections were announced. He was in Kansas City for the Big Eight coaches annual meeting.

"You can run down our list of seniors and it's like a who's who of super college football players of their era . . . Steve Davis, our quarterback, and the Selmons, of course. Joe Washington, who I think is the greatest running back in the country, even though he had a disappointing year statistically this season . . . two great wide receivers, Tinker Owens and Billy Brooks . . ."

Switzer said the Selmons, more than anyone else, have been responsible for the success the Oklahoma football program has enjoyed the past three years.

Modest, church-going Baptists, the brothers all carried better than B-averages through college and have been visibly unaffected by the acclaim they have won. The stories of their impoverished childhood on a small farm in eastern Oklahoma have become legend in Sooner land.

'Same Kind'

"All three were bonafide All-Americans," Switzer said. "No one brother carried the other. They are unspoiled, uncorrupted and unselfish. They're the same kind of polite, unassuming young men they were when I first met them."

In four years of trench warfare against some of the best offensive linemen in the nation, the Selmons, almost incredibly, have never been physically defeated.

"A pro scout told me a few days ago that in four years Leroy has been blocked to his feet just twice . . . in all four years. I knew that was right because I've been his coach. I asked the scout what were the occasions, and the guy had really done his homework. It happened once when he was double-teamed, and once another year when he got his feet tangled with the blockers and fell down.

"Leroy got up and made a great talk," Switzer said. "He talked about his mama and daddy, and thanked them for his success. He said there were a lot of players as big and as fast and as strong as him, and a lot of awards for just athletic ability. He said he was especially grateful for that particular award because it was given for scholarship first, citizenship second and athletic ability third."

Big Eight Awards Moore

Kansas City (AP) — You had to wonder about Bud Moore.

The day he set foot on Kansas soil to become the Jayhawks' new head football coach, he was still singing the praises of the likes of Bear Bryant and Alabama, his old coach and old stomping grounds.

"Coach Bryant this and Coach Bryant that . . . ." Bud Moore said, taking over from Don Fambrough, who had quit in the wake of contract difficulties but probably the most popular man around the Lawrence campus.

"At Alabama, we ran the wishbone like it should be run," Moore was saying, lifting eyebrows from the Kansas flatlands all the way to Oklahoma and back again. "Coach Bryant knows how to get more out of less than any coach in the country."

At the same time, Moore was saying, "Any time there is a coaching change and a team has not won, one of the first things you have to do is establish confidence." And then, there was this: "To be successful, you have to have a winner at quarterback."

All of this came from the lips of Bud Moore last December.

So what does Moore do?

Well, autumn arrives and Moore still doesn't know who his quarterback is going to be. He walks around talking about lifting Nolan Cromwell, a super safety, off the defensive side and has him running at quarterback. He also is moving this player from defense to offense and this player from offense to defense.

Three months, a rash of injured players and seven victories and only four defeats later, Moore's Jayhawks are headed for the Sun Bowl to play Pittsburgh and are ranked nationally. Nobody wonders about Bud Moore any longer.

Ex-Standouts Cite Olympics

NEW YORK (UPI) — Not terrorism, not nationalism, not commercialism, or even all three combined, should ever be enough to abolish the Olymvics Games, five celebrated Olympians all agreed Tuesday.

Those expressing that view were Jesse Owens, winner of four gold medals in the 1936 Olympics at Berlin, Bob Mathias, the only Olympian to win the decathlon twice; Glenn Cunningham, silver medalist in the 1,500 meters in 1936; Wilma Rudolph, triple gold medal winner in the 1960 Olympics in Rome, and Anne Henning, speedskating gold medalist in the 1972 Winter Olympic Games in Sapporo, Japan.

The five were present for the unveiling of an art collection of Great Moments in United States Olympic History, the paintings having been commissioned by a national merchandising company.

The 61-year-old Owens said he probably wouldn't have received any formal education had he not competed in the Olympics.

"We had no money," he said. "My father, not being a literate man, was a common laborer. The Olympics provided me not only with an opportunity to travel but to learn and grow as an individual. People who say that the Games are 'nationalistic' are the ones who never had the opportunity of standing atop the victory stand.

"It's a tremendous feeling when you stand there and watch your flag fly above all the others. You say to yourself, 'I am an Olympic champion' and the last thing in your mind is nationalism, commercialism or any other -ism."

Mathias said the Olympics are "still the greatest athletic contest in the world." The 45-year-old former Congressman said the games are "the only means, the only vehicle for young people to get together in one place at the same time and compete with each other."

Although mindful of the terrorist attacks which marred the 1972 Munich Games and resulted in 11 persons being killed, Mathias said he felt "it would be a disaster" to abolish the Games.

"Something like that is unfortunate," said the husky Californian, who won his first decathlon gold medal at thy age of 17. "It's part of our times. Look at all the security precautions being taken at every airport. Does that mean we have to close the airports? By the same token, the Olympic Games certainly are a force for good and should continue."

To the growing charge that the Olympics are becoming too nationalistic, Cunningham replied he felt nationalism is what life is all about now.

"I'm 100 per cent in favor of nationalism," said the 66-year-old Kansan, once the world record holder for the mile. "I think all this business of trying to call it 'one world' is a lot of bunk because it is definitely not one world."

Rudolph, still looking as if she could beat all the other girls in the sprints even though she's the mother of a 17-year-old daughter, said she wouldn't change the concept of the Games for anything in the world. Insofar as the point system is concerned, showing each nation's total and often raising the charge of nationalism among its critics, the Tennessee gold medalist said she saw nothing wrong with the system.

"This whole country is based on a point system," she said. "Why change it in the Olympics?"

The Olympics, according to the 20-year-old Henning, benefits millions as a form of entertainment.

"I think it would be very sad for the world if they discontinued the Games for any reason," she said. "It is a means of 36 different nations (in the Winter Games) getting together peacefully and I wish that could happen more often than every four years."

Questions And Answers For Land Buyers Listed

By Jane Bryant Quinn

New York — Here are some important questions and answers for people thinking of buying undeveloped land in a subdivision:

Jane Bryant Quinn

AM I BEING HIGH-PRESSURED INTO BUYING THIS LAND? Yes, you are if the developer has lured you to the property with free gifts; shown you beautiful renderings of improvements not yet built; held out the promise of fabulous price appreciation; shown you lovely model homes but steered you away from the undeveloped areas where your lot would be; not given you enough time to read the property report; wined and dined and wined you again; then pulled out a contract for you to sign before going home. Don't sign it. Go home and think it over.

MUST I SIGN SOMETHING IF I ACCEPT A FREE TRIP TO THE PROPERTY? No, of course not. Ask for the property report the developer has to file with the government. Take it, the contract and all the other literature home with you. Show them to a lawyer experienced in real estate transactions. The small fee you pay the lawyer might save you an expensive error. But when you accept a free property-inspection trip, be warned: Developers are expert at getting the signatures of people who consider themselves impervious to the super-sell.

IF THE GOVERNMENT APPROVES THE PROPERTY REPORT, DOES THAT MEAN THE LAND IS A GOOD INVESTMENT? No, no, no! The Office of Interstate Land Sales Registration requires developers to disclose the condition of the property, their own financial condition, and any other material facts about the proposed subdivision that might affect your decision to buy. But they don't "okay" anything. If the developer has no plans to put roads in, and discloses that fact, he has met the requirements of OILSR. If you buy that land and suddenly realize that without roads, you can't build, there is nothing OILSR can do for you.

WHAT IF MY LAND IS UNDER WATER; IT SAID SO IN THE PROPERTY REPORT BUT I DIDN'T READ IT? You're usually out of luck. If you can show that the salesman told you the land was dry, you might have a case. But oral representations are hard to prove. And in your hand you have a property report, which you signed, stating the true condition of the lot. The government is going to a lot of trouble to get those property reports accurate. If you won't read them, there's nothing much that can be done.

WHAT IF THE DEVELOPER GOES BROKE AND DOESN'T GET THE COUNTRY CLUB BUILT? That's one of the risks of the game. If he doesn't live up to his express commitments, you might in some cases be able to get out of your contract. But then again, you might not. And it's unlikely that you'll get back what you've already paid.

However, if you weren't given the property report, or it described the development in a misleading way, OILSR may be able to get your money back. (Write to OILSR, Housing and Urban Development Dept., Washington D.C. 20410) A stage agency may also be able to help, especially in a state like New York, where the laws are fairly strong.

When evaluating raw land, it is prudent to assume that nothing more will be added to the development that is there already. If you would be happy with your lot as it is, then buy. If it requires an additional large investment on the builder's part to make it livable, think twice. If amenities are essential to you, it's safest to buy in a development where they've already been built.

WILL THE VALUE OF THE LAND GO UP? It's always possible that you will be able to sell the land for more than you paid. But when you buy in an undeveloped subdivision, that's hard to do.

The land might have cost the developer only a few hundred dollars an acre. He put in some roads and electric lights, added a community center, and started selling it for several thousand dollars an acre. Local people may well consider the land overpriced. Other people are the customers of the developer, and won't be shown your piece of property. So you might not be able to resell at all. If the developer doesn't build the amenities he promised, the land will be even less attractive.

If you had to sell, and managed to find your own buyer, it's possible you might have to take a loss. It isn't written anywhere in the laws of economics that the price of land always goes up.

WHAT IF I SIGN UP FOR THE LAND AND THEN HAVE TROUBLE PAYING? The answer is in your contract. Probably you will lose the land and all the payments you have made so far. It's a mistake to buy land on the installment plan, without a deed, unless you're quite sure you can afford it.

AFTER I SIGN UP, CAN I CHANGE MY MIND? The law gives you three days to change your mind and cancel out of the sale. Do it by calling the salesman, then sending him a registered letter. But be warned that many sales contracts include a clause waiving the cooling-off period — and if you sign it, you're stuck. This gives you all the more reason to have a lawyer read the contract before you buy.

Stocks Suffer Largest Loss In 5 Weeks

NEW YORK (AP) — Profit taking pressures heightened by doubts about the prospective strength of the economic recovery struck the stock market with its largest loss in more than five weeks Tuesday.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials fell 13.14 to 843.20 for its sharpest decline since it gave up 14.64 points on Oct. 24.

Declining issues swamped gainers 1,207 to 260 among the 1,857 traded on the NYSE.

Big Board volume was a moderately active 17.93 million shares, up from 16.05 million on Monday.

Brokers noted that the market had begun to weaken Monday, when the Dow slipped 4.33 amid disappointment over market's evident inability to rally following President Ford's decision last week to support federal help for New York City.

There was also concern that the upward momentum built up by the economy in late summer and early autumn might be dissipating. Last Friday the government reported that its index of leading economic indicators posted its second monthly decline in a row in October.

And looming ahead was the report due thursday from the government on the course of wholesale prices last month.

All that added up, analysts said, to a feeling among investors of not having much to look forward to in the immediate future.

And the result was a tendency among traders with profits to show for the market's rise since early October to cash some of their holdings in.

That trend was evidenced up sharp pullbacks in some of the stocks that have been market leaders this fall. General Mtors, for example, lost 1⅛ to 55⅜.

Quaker Oats fell 2 and F.W. woolworth dropped 1 to 21⅜. Both issues had touched new highs for the year on Monday.

Syntex topped the active list at the American Stock Exchange, losing ¼ to 31⅞ on the heels of a 2¼-point decline Monday, when the company reported lower quarterly operating earnings.

Cattle Prices Drop Sharply

OMAHA, Neb. (AP)—A dull dressed trade and a general decline in quality sent cattle prices sharply lower on the Omaha livestock markets, while hogs also turned lower, but basically because of Tuesday's increased run.

There were about 7,500 cattle and calves on offer, and the cattle trade was slow. Steers turned $1.00-to-$1.50, instances $2.00 lower, while heifers trended $1.00-to-$1.25 lower, with some sales as much last $1.50 off.

Cows were called steady in moderately active trade.

There were about 800 sheep on offer. Slaughter lambs trended steady to 50-cents higher, with the advance on wooled offerings. Ewes were scarce.

Soy Oil Sale Rumor Boosts Futures Prices

Chicago (AP) — An unconfirmed report involving the sale of 90,000 tons of soybean oil, set off a run of buying in oil futures that strongly influenced higher prices for other commodity futures on the Chicago Board of Trade Tuesday.

Soy oil futures shot up the limit of 100 points, or 1 cent a pound, but closed about 10 to 15 points off the top. Soybeans gained 11 cents.

ASTROLOGICAL RESEARCH NEWS BULLETIN

The Secret Of Having Good Luck

Newest Discovery By I.A.A. May Be Biggest In The History Of Astrology

By J. C. Riley - Astrological Writer

"I am presenting here the most interesting story I have ever covered as an astrological writer. Read my story and find out how to become a luckier person. Yes, as a result of an astrological research discovery, you can actually increase your good luck. How? Find out in the following interview I had with Cary Franks, Chief Astrologer for the International Astrological Association. The interview was conducted at the Association's research center in the northern part of Canton, Ohio." (Canton, OH)

Question: "Cary, what is this luck project you are working on all about?"

Answer: "Very simply, we have uncovered the secret of having good luck. That is, we have found out why some people are so much luckier than others; why certain people get rich by being in the right place at the right time; how that certain person in everyone's circle of acquaintances (you know the guy) seems to always win door prizes, raffles, lotteries, cards and you name it; and why certain people are always lucky in love, careers and business ventures."

Question: "How did you discover the secret of good luck?"

Answer: "The whole project is called the Life-Luck Project."

"This project was commissioned by the board of directors over four years ago on March 7, 1971. Research data was gathered by: 1) Investigating historically famous, fortunate people, 2) Investigating famous fortunate people of today, 3) Observation of research test subjects (half of which were known to be lucky), 4) Analysis of more than 198,000 research questionnaires gathered from all over the country through I.A.A.'s nationally famous feature "ASTROLOGY TODAY" which has run in nearly every major publication in the country. Total number of people submitting birth information through "ASTROLOGY TODAY" was over 1.2 million. Total capital outlay for the Life-Luck Project was over $192,000.00."

Question: "What did you find out as a result of your investigation of fortunate people?" I asked.

Answer: "We confirmed what we had already suspected—that most fortunate people get that way by using astrology. Professional astrologers will tell you that nearly all rich and famous people, past and present, use astrologers. Even present and historic world leaders use or have used astrology."

"But, although the fact that rich and famous people use astrology is news to laymen, it is obvious to professional astrologers. What we were really after was exactly HOW did these fortunate people use astrology. Astrology is a science of infinite scope. Few people know that an astrologer could spend a life time ON JUST ONE HOROSCOPE. You must use specific areas for the specific things you want to accomplish with it. Also, you must know in detail how to APPLY astrological knowledge."

"Famous American tycoon J.P. Morgan used astrology to aquire his fortune. This was discovered early in our research and this fact was cited in "ASTROLOGY TODAY." J.P. Morgan's astrologer was none other than Evangeline Adams, grand-daughter of famed President John Quincy Adams. The trick? She concentrated and expanded the luck area of astrology only. J.P. Morgan invested in things dictated to be best by his horoscope. But, he would only make investments at the exact time prescribed by Miss Adams."

Question: "I understand you have combined astrology with numerology (a related field to astrology) as a result of your research. That's a first, isn't it?"

Answer: "Yes. We found that numerology is a very useful tool in producing good luck."

"For example, the letters in the alphabet have assigned numbers. Singer Dionne Warwicke took the advice from her numerologist and added an 'e' to the end of her name. Her numerologist told her this would bring about the correct, fortunate combination."

"She immediately skyrocketed to fame. She has revealed this fact on the Johnny Carson show twice."

Question: "So, what was the result of all your research?"

Answer: "The end result of our four years of research is a special horoscope which is revolutionary in the field of astrology. This horoscope is called THE LIFE-LUCK HOROSCOPE. It expands and concentrates on only the luck areas of astrology. It also uses NUMEROLOGY and even PSYCHOLOGY. (It was discovered in Germany that the psychology of color has a profound effect on luck). We tested this horoscope using our in-house research subjects in real life situations."

Question: "How did the LIFE-LUCK HOROSCOPE do in this "acid test?"

Answer: "The results were astounding! And, I'm not exaggerating when I say that. We were able to turn people into winners who had never won anything in their lives."

"But, let me qualify that statement. We also found out something else during this final test. And, that is that all people are not equally lucky. If it isn't in their horoscope; that is, if they were not born at the right time and place, they have only so much luck potential."

"But, why I am so thrilled about the results and why they are significant is this: WE WERE ABLE TO INCREASE THE GOOD LUCK IN OVER 95% OF OUR RESEARCH SUBJECTS. In other words, I will go out on the limb and say that although some people are luckier than others, there is a 95% chance that their luck horoscope will guarantee that they get all the potential luck that they have coming."

"Now, I don't want to tell you some of the amazing things that happened to our research subjects, myself, because I already sound like I'm bragging. Let me make a quick phone call and get two typical research subjects up here. I say typical because many subjects were much luckier and many were much less lucky. They are the average. But, I want to use them because they had never won anything in their lives until they used the LIFE-LUCK HOROSCOPE."

"Cary summoned two of the research subjects who had taken part in the final tests of the LIFE-LUCK HOROSCOPE. She said I was free to print their testimony. This really impressed me. Few people know that trade regulations are hard on testimonials from people. If an organization prints a testimonial with a person's name, it had better be true. Bear this in mind as you read the following testimonials from Ken Fronk and Rose Lineman."

"The two people entered the room and sat down. I first asked for the testimony of Ken Fronk of Canton. Ohio."

Question: "Ken, tell me your experience while using the LIFE-LUCK HOROSCOPE that was prepared for you."

Answer: "My LIFE-LUCK HOROSCOPE was prepared for me on March 1, 1974. The horoscope was in great detail and covered all areas of my life. But we, as research subjects, were told to concentrate on games so we could get the quickest test."

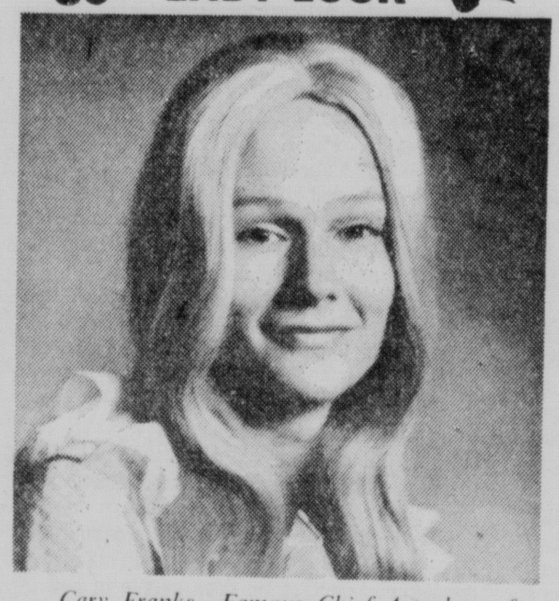
"My horoscope listed games in order, from those which I would be luckiest, to those that I would be the least lucky. It listed dates and times that I would be most lucky. It also listed what my lucky number, colors and combination of lucky colors and numbers were. I had never won anything in my life. In fact, I used to think of myself as a born loser. But, and I still can't believe it, here are the results of using my LIFE-LUCK HOROSCOPE."

"The first day my horoscope told me I would be lucky was March 16 to March 20. On March 17, I played the horses because that was listed high on my lucky area chart. I used the color and number information once I got to the track. And, that night I won $506.00!"

"Now, I will just leave out the smaller winning nights and give you the highlights."

"I was told I was going to be very lucky May 19 to May 20. Using the same procedure: On May 19, I played bingo and won a $10.00 door prize and $60.00 in bingo. On May 20, I played bingo at my Moose Club and won the $500.00 jackpot. On May 21, I played bingo again and won $50.00. On May 22, I won $525.00 on the horses and $45.00 playing bingo."

LADY LUCK



Cary Franks—Famous Chief Astrologer for I.A.A.—Director of the Life-Luck Research Project. Cary was born and educated in Cleveland, Ohio. She received a B.S. in psychology and chemistry from Case-Western Reserve University and a masters in polymer chemistry from Akron University. After graduating, she became interested in astrology. She studied the subject for 10 years and earned the highest certification given to professional astrologers. She has studied astrology in London and around the world. The mere fact that Cary is associated with this project may be lucky in itself. Many of her clients say that just being associated with her in any way seems to bring a person good luck.

"In October, the 6th to the 11th was a lucky period. But, I was told that October 9 was an especially hot day for me and I was to bet heavy. I played the horses and won the daily double and $1,040.00."

Question: "I then asked for the testimony of Rose Lineman of Fredonia, Pennsylvania."

Answer: "Well, my testimony will be much shorter than Ken's was because the only game I am interested in is bingo. I got my LIFE-LUCK HOROSCOPE on May 1, 1974."

"Prior to that time, I never won at bingo over a period of a month. I would keep monthly records. They would usually come out on the loss side with a few break-even months and a very few slight winning months. Overall, I was way in the red."

"Now compare this. By following the advice in my LIFE-LUCK HOROSCOPE, from May 1 to December 31, 1974, I had won $2,219.00 over that eight-month period. I played on the average of once a week depending on my lucky periods, averaging about $70.00 a night."

"But, there are two things that impressed me about this horoscope more than my own experience. As a favor, I had the I.A.A. do a horoscope for each of two friends of mine."

"My first friend's horoscope told her to buy an Ohio lottery ticket on December 5. She soon found out that her ticket was a winner!"

"My second friend had a spicy experience. Her horoscope told her that she would have extremely good luck in her love-life in July. It told her to be active socially that month. She had more affairs that month than I think I had in my entire life. She came out of it with a lasting one—a guy that you couldn't have tailor made any better for her."

Question: "At this point, I have only one request from you people." I pleaded, "I want my LIFE-LUCK HOROSCOPE!" "Everyone laughed at this point as though I had just made a request that a million other people had made before me."

Answer: "Yes, there is quite a demand for the LIFE-LUCK HOROSCOPE since word has leaked out. And, we are now prepared to offer it to the public now—ON A SPECIAL BASIS. But, let me show you a sample LIFE-LUCK HOROSCOPE first so you know exactly what it is."

Question: "I was shown a copy of this special horoscope. I can tell you it is something else. It is 31 pages long and contains things that you would never dream existed in a horoscope. To go into a complete description will take up too much space, so listed next are the highlights of the contents of the LIFE-LUCK HOROSCOPE."

- The LIFE-LUCK HOROSCOPE reveals the following:
  1. WHERE, WHEN and HOW you will be lucky (including a 15-year, hand prepared, future forecast).
  2. How to take advantage of your lucky opportunities.
  3. How to increase your good luck.
  4. How to avoid bad luck.
- The horoscope covers how you can be lucky, depending on your horoscope, in the following areas:
  Love - Job - Career - Investments - Stocks - Commodities - Oil Wells - Bingo - Lotteries - Cards: Poker, Black Jack, Baccarat - Inheritance - Football and Baseball Pools - Horse Racing - Dog Racing - General Games - Keno - Sports - Tip Boards - Contests - Raffles - Sweepstakes - Roulette - Slot Machines - Dice - Parlays - Legal Matters
- The LIFE-LUCK HOROSCOPE also defines the following items:
  Your Lucky: Years, Months, Days, Hours, Numbers, Colors, Metals, Stones, People (Their Signs And When They Were Born). How to Create Lucky Vibrations, How To Create A Lucky Attitude.

Question: "This is really a super product. Now what is the special condition under which it is offered here?"

Answer: "First, we would like to test our horoscope on the general public. In the past, we have found we get many letters on the success of our horoscope from people who use it. So, we know that we will get feedback from people who order their LIFE-LUCK HOROSCOPE."

"Second, we want to do more advance research on color and luck, therefore, we are willing to make the similar offer we did in our famous ASTROLOGY TODAY feature."

"We don't know what we will charge for this product when the LIFE-LUCK HOROSCOPE finally goes to market, however, I can tell you that an astrologer could charge up to $200.00 for this horoscope—if he knew how. But, those who order here through this special "TEST SUBJECT" offer and submit their birth information and their favorite color will only pay a $9.95 charge to make a duplicate copy of their horoscope plus 50c postage and handling."

"At this point, I would like to present this public message: IMPORTANT—PUBLIC BEWARE. The founder of The INTERNATIONAL Astrological Association is the originator of the famous research project ASTROLOGY TODAY. Again, under penalty of law, we could not print this if it were not true. There are presently many imitations of our horoscope and research projects. Some of these companies have names similar to The INTERNATIONAL Astrological Association. These same companies will probably try to imitate the LIFE-LUCK HOROSCOPE. It took I.A.A. a great deal of time and money to develope the LIFE-LUCK HOROSCOPE. We do not believe it can be matched in detail and quality by a hurriedly prepared imitation. To insure you are getting the true LIFE-LUCK HOROSCOPE, be sure the astrology organization is The INTERNATIONAL Astrological Association with the endorsement of certified Astrologer Cary Franks."

"We concluded the interview and Cary gave me the following information to pass on to those who wish to participate in this special project and receive their 31 page, special LIFE-LUCK HOROSCOPE prepared for them personally from their exact birth information."

1) Get a blank piece of paper. 2) At the top of the paper, print the words "LIFE-LUCK HOROSCOPE". 3) Print your name and address. 4) Print your date, time and place of birth (if you don't know the exact time, just put 12 noon). 5) Write down your favorite color. 6) Mail this along with $9.95 plus 50¢ for postage and handling, in cash, check or money order to: I.A.A.; Dept. L-251; 4626 CLEVELAND AVE. N.; CANTON, OHIO 44709.

Two persons from one household may order through this special "TEST SUBJECT" offer. Simply include $19.90 plus $1.00 postage and handling if two are ordered—BUT, THE LIMIT IS TWO (NO EXCEPTIONS, PLEASE). This product carries a full and unconditional money-back guarantee. If anyone has any questions on this project, feel free to phone The INTERNATIONAL Astrological Association at (216) 494-4282.

Questions And Answers For Land Buyers Listed

By Jane Bryant Quinn

New York — Here are some important questions and answers for people thinking of buying undeveloped land in a subdivision:

Jane Bryant Quinn

AM I BEING HIGH-PRESSURED INTO BUYING THIS LAND? Yes, you are if the developer has lured you to the property with free gifts; shown you beautiful renderings of improvements not yet built; held out the promise of fabulous price appreciation; shown you lovely model homes but steered you away from the undeveloped areas where your lot would be; not given you enough time to read the property report; wined and dined and wined you again; then pulled out a contract for you to sign before going home. Don't sign it. Go home and think it over.

MUST I SIGN SOMETHING IF I ACCEPT A FREE TRIP TO THE PROPERTY? No, of course not. Ask for the property report the developer has to file with the government. Take it, the contract and all the other literature home with you. Show them to a lawyer experienced in real estate transactions. The small fee you pay the lawyer might save you an expensive error. But when you accept a free property-inspection trip, be warned: Developers are expert at getting the signatures of people who consider themselves impervious to the super-sell.

IF THE GOVERNMENT APPROVES THE PROPERTY REPORT, DOES THAT MEAN THE LAND IS A GOOD INVESTMENT? No, no, no! The Office of Interstate Land Sales Registration requires developers to disclose the condition of the property, their own financial condition, and any other material facts about the proposed subdivision that might affect your decision to buy. But they don't "okay" anything. If the developer has no plans to put roads in, and discloses that fact, he has met the requirements of OILSR. If you buy that land and suddenly realize that without roads, you can't build, there is nothing OILSR can do for you.

WHAT IF MY LAND IS UNDER WATER; IT SAID SO IN THE PROPERTY REPORT BUT I DIDN'T READ IT? You're usually out of luck. If you can show that the salesman told you the land was dry, you might have a case. But oral representations are hard to prove. And in your hand you have a property report, which you signed, stating the true condition of the lot. The government is going to a lot of trouble to get those property reports accurate. If you won't read them, there's nothing much that can be done.

WHAT IF THE DEVELOPER GOES BROKE AND DOESN'T GET THE COUNTRY CLUB BUILT? That's one of the risks of the game. If he doesn't live up to his express commitments, you might in some cases be able to get out of your contract. But then again, you might not. And it's unlikely that you'll get back what you've already paid.

However, if you weren't given the property report, or it described the development in a misleading way, OILSR may be able to get your money back. (Write to OILSR, Housing and Urban Development Dept., Washington D.C. 20410) A stage agency may also be able to help, especially in a state like New York, where the laws are fairly strong.

When evaluating raw land, it is prudent to assume that nothing more will be added to the development that is there already. If you would be happy with your lot as it is, then buy. If it requires an additional large investment on the builder's part to make it livable, think twice. If amenities are essential to you, it's safest to buy in a development where they've already been built.

WILL THE VALUE OF THE LAND GO UP? It's always possible that you will be able to sell the land for more than you paid. But when you buy in an undeveloped subdivision, that's hard to do.

The land might have cost the developer only a few hundred dollars an acre. He put in some roads and electric lights, added a community center, and started selling it for several thousand dollars an acre. Local people may well consider the land overpriced. Other people are the customers of the developer, and won't be shown your piece of property. So you might not be able to resell at all. If the developer doesn't build the amenities he promised, the land will be even less attractive.

If you had to sell, and managed to find your own buyer, it's possible you might have to take a loss. It isn't written anywhere in the laws of economics that the price of land always goes up.

WHAT IF I SIGN UP FOR THE LAND AND THEN HAVE TROUBLE PAYING? The answer is in your contract. Probably you will lose the land and all the payments you have made so far. It's a mistake to buy land on the installment plan, without a deed, unless you're quite sure you can afford it.

AFTER I SIGN UP, CAN I CHANGE MY MIND? The law gives you three days to change your mind and cancel out of the sale. Do it by calling the salesman, then sending him a registered letter. But be warned that many sales contracts include a clause waiving the cooling-off period — and if you sign it, you're stuck. This gives you all the more reason to have a lawyer read the contract before you buy.

Stocks Suffer Largest Loss In 5 Weeks

NEW YORK (AP) — Profit taking pressures heightened by doubts about the prospective strength of the economic recovery struck the stock market with its largest loss in more than five weeks Tuesday.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials fell 13.14 to 843.20 for its sharpest decline since it gave up 14.64 points on Oct. 24.

Declining issues swamped gainers 1,207 to 260 among the 1,857 traded on the NYSE.

Big Board volume was a moderately active 17.93 million shares, up from 16.05 million on Monday.

Brokers noted that the market had begun to weaken Monday, when the Dow slipped 4.33 amid disappointment over market's evident inability to rally following President Ford's decision last week to support federal help for New York City.

There was also concern that the upward momentum built up by the economy in late summer and early autumn might be dissipating. Last Friday the government reported that its index of leading economic indicators posted its second monthly decline in a row in October.

And looming ahead was the report due thursday from the government on the course of wholesale prices last month.

All that added up, analysts said, to a feeling among investors of not having much to look forward to in the immediate future.

And the result was a tendency among traders with profits to show for the market's rise since early October to cash some of their holdings in.

That trend was evidenced up sharp pullbacks in some of the stocks that have been market leaders this fall. General Mtors, for example, lost 1⅛ to 55⅜.

Quaker Oats fell 2 and F.W. woolworth dropped 1 to 21⅜. Both issues had touched new highs for the year on Monday.

Syntex topped the active list at the American Stock Exchange, losing ¼ to 31⅞ on the heels of a 2¼-point decline Monday, when the company reported lower quarterly operating earnings.

Cattle Prices Drop Sharply

OMAHA, Neb. (AP)—A dull dressed trade and a general decline in quality sent cattle prices sharply lower on the Omaha livestock markets, while hogs also turned lower, but basically because of Tuesday's increased run.

The day's hog receipts were estimated at about 6,000 head. The trade on barrows and gilts was moderately active, but the butcher trend was 50-cents to $1.00 lower than Monday's close.

There were about 7,500 cattle and calves on offer, and the cattle trade was slow. Steers turned $1.00-to-$1.50, instances $2.00 lower, while heifers trended $1.00-to-$1.25 lower, with some sales as much last $1.50 off.

Cows were called steady in moderately active trade.

There were about 800 sheep on offer. Slaughter lambs trended steady to 50-cents higher, with the advance on wooled offerings. Ewes were scarce.

Chairman John D. Dingell, D-Mich., of the energy and power subcommittee, supported the legislation, saying that it should help alleviate threatened unemployment consequences of natural gas shortages this winter, while protecting the individual homeowner from higher prices.

Under provisions of the legislation, the higher cost of the intrastate natural gas would be passed through to industrial users that would have been curtailed in the event of a shortage.

After April 15, 1977, the Federal Power Commission would be required to report to Congress on the program.

Go Slow In '76 Is Theme Of Soviet Economic Plan

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet government, stung by farm production well below its quota this year, announced a go-slow economic plan for 1976, the most Spartan of the postwar years.

Next year's plan, the start of a new five-year economic period, calls for industrial growth of only 4.3%, compared to targets averaging 6 to 8% in recent years. Production of consumer goods, announced as "the main task" of the five-year plan now ending, will drop in growth rate to 2.7%.

"The comparatively low growth rates of production, especially in Group B (consumer products), are because of shortages in agricultural output from the 1975 crop, as well as because of a lag in putting new production units into operation," reported Nikolai Zaibakov, chairman of the State Planning Committee.

Baibakov, unveiling the proposed 1976 plan to a full meeting of the Supreme Soviet, the rubber-stamp parliament of this Communist state, did not report this year's final harvest figure but alluded to the "extremely unfavorable weather conditions."

Because of widespread drought in the spring and summer, Western experts have predicted the Soviets will fall short of their 215-million-ton grain target by 55 million tons, or about one-quarter. The shortage forced Moscow to buy heavily on the world market again this year, with puchases from the West expected to top 30 million tons.

Despite Russia's industrialized might, the economy is still heavily dependent on agriculture, which employs about one-third of the labor force.

The next five-year plan has been billed as a plan of quality, and Western economic observers said an emphasis away from quantity could help account for the reduced growth targets. Baibakov did not stress this, however.

The Soviets also reported that their over-all defense budget will remain the same as this year's at 17.4 billion rubles. That would be equivalent to about $23.4 billion but currency comparisons are regarded skeptically by most Western experts, who believe the announced Soviet defense budget represents only a portion of military spending.

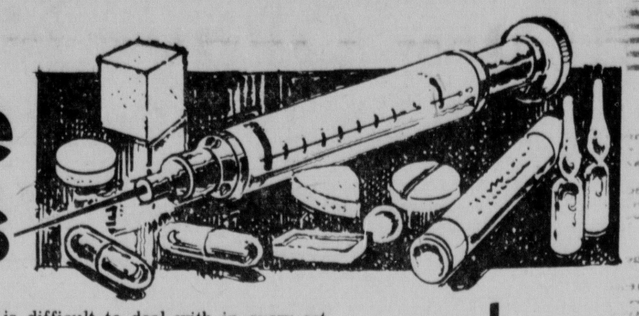
Officials At Beatrice State Home Deny Drug, Punishment Charges



(EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the last of a three-part series by The Star's Statehouse reporter, based on exclusive material from the U.S. District Court in Omaha and interview with officials of the Beatrice State Home and the State of Nebraska.)

By BOB GUENTHER
Star Staff Writer

"Dilantin, 100 milligram (mgms.); Valium, five mgms.; Phenobarbitol, ½ gram; Equanil, 400 mgms.; Chloral Hydrate, 7½ grams; Dalmane, one cap; Haldol, five mgms.; Dinfil, one tab."

That list of mood-altering drugs, some potentially addictive, is not an inventory of some recent drug bust.

It is a list of medication taken by one resident of the Beatrice State Home — some drugs once daily, other two or three times a day.

In private documents, federal investigators have called this particular resident an example of overusing medication to correct behavior problems rather than developing effective programs.

Though not familiar with the particular resident, Dr. C. T. Frericks, one of four part-time physicians at the Beatrice State Home, agreed in an interview the prescription of those eight drugs in combination was excessive.

U.S. Attorney Louis Thrasher has charged that is just one example of the ills at the Beatrice State Home. He pointed out there have been as many as 66 deaths due to improper feeding techniques and the use of a "punishment ward" there.

Charges Denied

Beatrice officials hotly deny all the allegations.

Had state and federal officials and representatives of certain retarded persons not agreed to a settlement providing for moving hundreds of the retarded from the home to community programs, however, such charges would have come out in open court.

Instead, the charges remained as a memo to U.S. District Judge Albert Schatz and were never made part of the public record.

At the request of The Star, Schatz agreed to make the documents available on two conditions: that the three parties had to agree to the release, and that the names of the retarded persons mentioned would not be published.

Findings Summarized

The memo included summations of depositions, conclusions of the U.S. Justice Department based on evidence gathered from Beatrice files by the Federal Bureau of Investigation, and evaluations of Beatrice conducted by experts.

The evidence is intended to show that most residents at Beatrice would be better served in community programs.

One of those evaluators, Dr. James Clements, who spent 2½ days at Beatrice this summer, concluded: "Physical and chemical restraints are likely being used in lieu of habilitation programs and adequate environment."

Clements' survey of medical records revealed the following percentages of residents being treated with psychotropic (mood-altering) drugs in various wards: M-2, 42%; Y-4, 64%; D-2, 78%; Infirmary II, 27%; K-2, 80%; Y-6, 64%.

Fact 'Interesting'

Clements said he found it "interesting" that the lowest use of mood-altering drugs occurred in the infirmary, the only ward where residents were confined to wheelchairs and beds.

Similarly, he called it "distressing" that sedatives, such as phenobarbitol, were administered to eight infirmary residents on an "as needed" basis.

Thrasher charged the drugs were used because Beatrice has "failed to inculcate . . . behavioral and social skills sufficient to enable such residents to retrain themselves from antisocial or dangerous conduct."

Jerry Griepentrog, director of programming at Beatrice, denied the charges. "I do not accept the assumption that we drug people in lieu of providing programs. We use certain medications in conjunction with training programs.

"We use drugs only when the program team, including the doctor, feels the drug is needed for continued growth and development. They aren't necessarily being used to make residents passive."

Some drugs, for example phenobarbitol, are used as an anti-convulsant for epileptics and not as a sedative, according to chief nurse Mrs. Minnie Stiles.

Griepentrog charged Clements failed to examine the reasons the medications were being prescribed.

While psychotropic drugs have to be used with extreme caution, he added, "You have to recognize . . . if it were not for medications, we would still have clogged psychiatric hospitals."

'Punishment' Ward?

Thrasher charged that from Nov. 12, 1974, to May 27, 1975, the isolation cell in Y-4 was used at least 174 times for such reasons as "punishment," "to calm down," "profanity," "refusal to work" and "sexual behavior."

Dr. Frederic Girardeau of the Kansas University Medical Center said, "Regardless of what Beatrice State Home calls this type of treatment, it is a classic use of punishment or aversive consequences."

"Therefore, I regard the use of Y-4 and the isolation 'cell' therein as a misuse of behavior modification procedures. In medical circles it would be considered malpractice, because it does not meet the usual standards of the professional community . . . The use of such places as Y-4 with the retarded is a vestige of the past, now professionally outdated and outmoded," Girardeau said.

A tour of Y-4 by this reporter revealed it was similar in most ways to other older wards at Beatrice. Y-4 is no longer a locked ward, Griepentrog said, as a result of a recommendation by an accrediting team which reported on the facility this summer.

Now Game Room

Griepentrog called the "punishment" label a distortion of the real purpose of Y-4. The proper term is "structured living unit," he said.

It is needed because some residents periodically behave in an uncontrollably aggressive manner, he said.

"This is difficult to deal with in every setting," he said.

"Most don't like to admit this kind of problem exists. But when you're responsible, you've got to do something about it," Griepentrog said.

Deaths Pointed To

The third major area singled out by Thrasher and evaluators for criticism was the number of deaths among Beatrice residents due to asphyxiation, aspiration and pneumonia.

Thrasher noted that 66 residents died between 1970 and 1975 due to these causes. This occurs frequently when retarded people are fed lying on their backs, he said.

Retarded persons often have coordination problems. Consequently, food may sometimes go down the windpipe instead of the esophagus. There is a provision in the settlement forbidding feeding in the supine position.

Dr. Frericks said this has always been a problem with debilitated people whether they're in a state institution, a nursing home or a hospital.

The problem with feeding occurs because a person may be so spastic or physically crippled that feeding in the supine position may be the only choice. But Frericks said he has never authorized feeding in the supine position.

Beatrice Supt. M. Elmer Wyant said, "We don't believe our experiences (with deaths from these causes) have been unusual for people with multiple physical and mental handicaps."

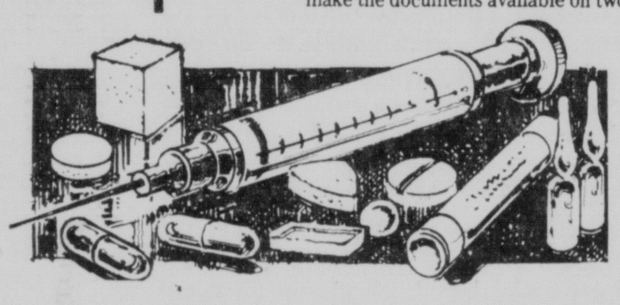
Bolsters are used in such cases to get a natural flow of gravity to the stomach, Griepentrog said.

"We do have accidents," Wyant said. "Our teams have done a beautiful job. Everybody has to be very, very alert for this problem."

In summary, Griepentrog said he felt the federal experts were not at all thorough in their examination of conditions.

"You've got to realize the severe problems we face every day of the year," Wyant said.

As with the entire problem of mental retardation, Griepentrog added, "You can't expect to understand the interworkings of this place in a few hours or days."



Watering Plants: How Much And How Often

(EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the second of five weekly articles from "Consumer Guide Rating and Raising Indoor Plants," a book about growing plants indoors which rates plants on a scale of one star ("very finicky") to five stars ("tolerant, easy"). This installment deals with one-star plants.

By VIRGINIA BEATTY
and the editors

New plant parents often ask, "How much water should I give it?" and "How often should I water?"

These are easy questions to answer: "As much as it needs" and "Whenever it needs it."

Deciding how much it needs and when it needs it, though, can be tough. Probably 90% of plant problems indoors are caused by over- and underwatering.

Watering requires judgment, skill, knowledge and experience. It is an art that everyone must learn for himself. The amount and frequency depend upon the temperature of the room, the kind of pot (clay or plastic), the size of the plant, the amount of light and the kind of plant.

When you water, water slowly and thoroughly until the water runs out the bottom of the pot. If you have the plant in a saucer, empty the saucer after the plant finishes draining. The watering process forces the air out of the root ball. Most plants will suffer serious root damage and die if they are kept constantly wet. (In a spirit of fairness, they will do the same if kept constantly dry.)

Use water that has been sitting for some time. It will be at room temperature (there are a few plants that don't like cold water, African violets for one), and a lot of the chlorine will have evaporated. If you have an ion exchange water softener, get your plant water from the tap before it goes into the softener. Plants don't like softened water.

A long-spouted watering can is useful since it makes it possible for you to put the water where you want it on th soil and avoids the soaking of the leaves and centers of plants that tend to rot if they get too wet. Adding water at the top of the pot reduces the amount of mineral salts that accumulate on the top of the soil and also reassures you that the drainage system is working. Drainage can be improved by enlarging the hole in the bottom of the pot, using more crocking (broken clay pots) or putting more sand or perlite in your potting mix.

Sometimes it's hard to tell just by looking if the plant is suffereing from overwatering or underwatering. In both cases the leaves may darken and the plant may wilt.

If the problem is underwatering, the plant will look slightly dry and shrivelled, like a carrot left out on the counter overnight. The soil will be dry rather than wet. Sometimes you can water every day and have the plant wilt from underwatering. If you dribble a little water over the top of the plant and call it watering, the root ball dries out, the soil shrinks away from the side of the pot and the next watering (even if a lot of water is used) finds the water running down between the soil and the pot. One way to get the plant back on the track is to sink the pot in tepid water until all the air bubbles come out.

On the other hand, if the problem is overwatering and the roots and stem are rotting, the plant will look plump and sloppy, like a stalk of celery left too long in the crisper. There isn't much you can do to revive a rotting plant; you can't bring a dead plant back to life. The only thing you can do is start from scratch and try again. Cut the still-healthy leaves or stems from your dying plant and root them to start new plants.

People, plants and antiques all would do better with higher humidity. Many houses and apartments are much drier than the Sahara, and that low humidity can affect even the desert plants. (In the desert, they at least have the benefit of dew condensing on them every night.)

Humidity for plants can be increased by several means. You can place them closer together so they fog each other's glasses. You can put a layer of pebbles or perlite in a metal or plastic can, place the pots on the pebbles and keep enough water in the pan so it is just below the bottoms of the pots. Or you can increase the amount of moisture in the air by using misters or foggers.

Misting is a chancy operation because it's also a great way to transmit diseases from one plant to another. If you're going to mist, do it so the moisture will evaporate by afternoon, be sure the water is warm and don't let it collect in hairy foliage or in the center of plants susceptible to rot. For plants that need a high humidity, it's usually easier in a home to keep them in a terrarium or a plastic tent.

Light is another essential for the growth of green plants, and different plants need different amounts of light — bright, filtered or shady. An easy way to test light intensity is to place a sheet of white paper in the area where you want to put a plant. Hold your right or left hand (depending on whether you're right- or left-handed) a foot above the sheet and see if there's a sharp, well-defined shadow of your hand. If there is, you have bright light. If the result is a fuzzy but recognizable shadow-hand, you have filtered light. If all you get is a blur on the paper, your light condition is shady.

Most plants that grow flowers or fruits like bright light. This is true of most succulents as well. Filtered light is good for gesneriads, figs, ferns, ivies and palms. Philodendron, Aspidistra, Dracaena, Peperomia and Spathiphyllum are happy in shade. Plants with thickened root stalks, bulbs and tubers need light while they are actively growing, but during their period of dormancy, they need a lot less.

If your plants seem to be suffering from not enough light, there are several things you can do to improve the situation:

Wash the windows. Dirty windows can cut down on light transmittal by as much as 40%. The human eye is able to adjust to the ever-decreasing light, but the plant can't. People can move about, but plants (within limits) have to stand and take it.

Move the plants. Let each plant have its day in the sun. Move them about so that each plant has a chance and turn the plant around so that each side has an equal chance to grow.

Add artificial light to extend the day length. A longer period of weak light will have the same effect as a shorter period of strong light. For dramatic effects, instead of hanging the light above the plants, place it under the plant, so that it's lit from the side or underneath. But when you change lighting conditions for a plant do so by stages so that the plant will have a suitable opportunity to adjust.

Increase light reflection by using aluminum foil, or you can use sharp white rocks in the tops of pots. The rocks have the dual purpose of reflecting light and making it an uncomfortable place for the cat to sit.

Generally, too much light is not a problem inside the house or apartment where it is very easy to move the plant back from the light or to close sheer curtains or blinds. It is a problem though, when one takes them outside on a pleasant day for a little refreshment. Too much light may cause the leaves to burn, look grey, scorched or bleached, and can cause the plant to wilt, shrivel and die. Plants and people both have to be toughened up to go out into the noonday sun. Remember, the light in open shade outdoors is about equal to what plants consider bright light inside.

When To Water

Water more often if:

Pot is clay
Temperature is above 65 degrees
Light is bright (sunny)
Humidity is low
There's wind, good air circulation
Plant is actively growing
Pot is filled with roots
Large plant is in small pot
Plant has large, thin leaves
Stems are thin or woody
Plant is old
Plant is healthy

Water less often if:

Pot is plastic or glazed clay
Temperature is below 65 degrees
Light is dim (cloudy)
Humidity is high
Air is still, circulation poor
Plant is dormant or resting
Plant has few roots in pot
Small plant is in large pot
Plant has spines, thick leaves
Stems are thick and succulent
Plant is new
Plant is sick

Hard-To-Grow Plants Listed

Calceolaria herbohybrida
Pocketbook Plant

Description: A pot plant with balloonlike red, yellow or orange spotted flowers that grow in a cluster over bright green leaves. A plant to be enjoyed as one would a bunch of cut flowers since it is very unhappy in ordinary house situations.

Requirements: Likes to be drenched and left to dry with filtered light, organic soil and a night temperature of 50 degrees Fahrenheit. If you can give them cold nights, they will keep longer, but they are annuals, and once through flowering, they will not bloom again.

Aphelandra squarrosa 'Louisae'
Zebra Plant

Description: An erect plant with large, dark green leaves with veins outlined in white. In addition to the beautiful leaves, it has a stunning yellow flower spike made up of yellow scales and flowers. A wow plant that starts its decline at the moment of purchase, it has given many green thumbers an inferiority complex.

Requirements: It needs filtered light, evenly moist organic soil and high humidity to flower. But after flowering, it likes it dry — but not too dry. Since the plant you bought or were given was a nice, compact tipend cutting, the long, scrawny, bare stem that develops can be a bit of a jolt. Like Coleus and purple passion plants, they are better looking when young.

Adiantum species and varieties.
Maidenhair Fern

Descritpion: Here's an attractive fern with wiry, black stems and wedge-shapred, emeraid green leaflets. But consider yourself warned: Unless there is high humidity in the air, the leaflets will curl and turn brown.

Requirements: Shady location, constant moisture and high humidity are what your maidenhair needs. It will tolerate house temperatures but does better with cool nights. Needs soil with high organic content. If you get scale on a strong, mature plant, reduce watering and put it in a cool place for about a month. Then cut off all the leaf stems (fronds), bring it back to a warmer location, start watering more frequently and, when it starts growing, start fertilizing.

Fuchsia hybrids
Lady's Eardrops

Description: Pot plant to small tree with dark green leaves, often with red stems. The flowers hang like large earrings that look a bit like dancing ladies and come in combinations of white, pink, red and purple. Some varieties grow upright; others have very weak stems and do best in hanging baskets.

Requirements: Filtered light and heavy soil kept evenly moist. Lots of water during its growing season; much less while resting (October-February). Cold to cool night temperatures and good air circulation. Flowers drop easily; better leave the plant put while in bloom. Flowers come on new growth, so plant has to be cut after dormancy and each stem pinched once or twice. White fly can't leave this beautiful plant alone.

Senecio cruentus
Cineraria of florists

Description: This flowering plant is about a foot tall with bright green leaves and many daisylike flowers in white and strong, bright colors. It is a beautiful plant, well proportioned between flowers and leaves, and often it is a real heartbreaker since it goes to pieces so quickly in most homes.

Requirements: Bright light is what it needs. Drench, then let dry a bit, then give it more water while it's actively growing. It should have heavy soil with good drainage. The temperature should be about 50 degrees Fahrenheit and not dry with good air circulation. This plant appears to be a real softy, but it looks well only if it's kept cold. As a temporary guest, it can add gaiety and charm to any setting, providing you give it plenty of room to show off.

Caladium hortulanum
Fancy Leaved Caladium

Description: These stocky plants are grown for the beautiful colors and markings on their large heart- or arrow-shaped leaves. The seedlings are all green, and it isn't until the fourth of fifth leaf that they begin to show their true colors.

Requirements: Your plants need filtered light, humid air and to be kept evenly moist while they are actively growing. After they have lost their leaves and are resting, they don't need as much water, and the air can be dry. They also prefer organic soil with a bit of sand to improve the drainage. If you plan to take them outside, be sure to choose green plants. The ones with all the color may strike your eye, but when the sun and fresh air strike, they don't do as well as the mostly green ones do.

House Okays New York Bailout Plan

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House on Tuesday approved by a 10-vote margin President Ford's $2.3-billion rescue plan for New York City and sent the measure to expected quick passage in the Senate despite a certain filibuster.

The House voted 213 to 203 to approve the bill as conservative Republicans and Democrats teamed up to try and scuttle it. Only 38 Republicans and 175 Democrats voted for the President's proposal.

There were no substantial changes in the Ford proposal, which would give the city up to $2.3 billion in loans annually over the next three years to stave off default. Default could come Dec. 11 if the Senate fails to approve it, but New York Mayor Abraham D. Beame said earlier Tuesday he expects approval at the end of this week or early next week.

The bill requires the city to repay each loan at the end of each fiscal year and New York will have to pay an 8% interest rate on the loans.

The bill also permits the secretary of the Treasury to require either the city or the state to put up as collateral on the loans any federal funds, such as revenue sharing money, which normally would be given New York.

It also provides that the secretary of the Treasury may make the loans after he has determined there is a reasonable chance they will be repaid, and he can set requirements he feels are needed to insure payment, but he cannot interfere with the day-to-day operations of the city.

Congress' General Accounting Office also would have the power to audit the city's books.

Beame said: "This vote shows that, despite all rumors to the contrary, New York City still has friends and supporters throughout the country. I want to thank them all."

Asked if New York City would have to return to Congress in the future for more aid, Beame said, "I don't think so. New York City and state are taking very strong measures .... If we come back, we would come back, as any city would, to have the federal government take its responsibilities," such as welfare costs, Beame said.

He said the loans will "keep us going until June 1978 when we can get back into the market."

New York Gov. Hugh Carey said he was "most grateful to Congress for the vote that has given New York State and New York City a chance, an opportunity, to avoid default.

"This has given us a chance to show the people of the United States that whatever have been our errors ... we are putting our affairs in order ... and will redeem ourselves," Carey said.

Rep. William Stanton, R-Ohio, who introduced the Ford substitute for the $7-billion loan guarantee bill before the House, said Wednesday night after Ford outlined the proposal in a news conference that a large number of Republicans would be against it.

Rep. Delbert Latta, R-Ohio, pointed out the Republican opposition by saying that the people of New York had done nothing to rid themselves over the years of the politicians who spent them into the financial crisis.

However, House Minority Leader John J. Rhodes of Arizona, one of the few Republicans in favor of aid for the city, said the bill is "certainly not a bail-out bill .... It is a stretch-out bill" to give the city and state time.

But Rep. Robert Bauman, R-Md., warned that, despite the aid, "the state and the city will be back shortly" seeking more aid.

And Rep. Henry S. Reuss, D-Wis., chairman of the House Banking Committee, said that the measure is only a "stopgap. The problem will come back to haunt us."

The measure is expected to be taken up by the Senate Wednesday, where Sen. James Allen, D-Ala., has said he will filibuster it.

But aid backers say they have enough votes to stop the filibuster and to pass the bill.

The bill will require a separate appropriation bill to be passed by Congress to fund the Ford plan, an action expected this week or next.

In other developments in the New York fiscal situation:

— The city's municipal employe pension funds said they would put $155.6 million in corporate bonds on sale Thursday to raise money to help the city meet a $100.6 million payroll.

Comptroller Harrison J. Goldin said the paychecks were due Friday and the bond sale would enable the city to pay its workers.

The sale is part of the prior agreement by the union pension funds to purchase $500 million in city paper by the end of the fiscal year on June 30.

— New York State Comptroller Arthur Levitt said the state is facing a $700 million budget deficit this fiscal year.

This is the same figure given earlier by Gov. Hugh Carey and disputed by the state's Republican leadership, which put the projected deficit at $300 million.

S.C. Carriage Driver Fights Horse Diapers

Charleston, S.C. (UPI) — A municipal judge Tuesday gave a carriage driver 10 days in which to organize a defense against charges of driving his undiapered horse through the streets of historic Charleston.

The driver, David Fuller, operator of the Charleston Carriage Co., faces a maximum fine of $100 or a 30-day jail term on the misdemeanor charge. Judge Hugo Spitz postponed a hearing on the case until Dec. 29.

The jurist allotted Fuller's attorney, Robert Guess, 10 days to prepare a legal brief and told City Atty. Morris Rosen to reply within 10 days thereafter.

Guess indicated he would argue that a new city ordinance requiring the diapering of horses was in conflict with a state law prohibiting cruelty to animals.

The city ordinance went into effect Monday, and Fuller, the first to receive a traffic summons for violating it, vowed he would go to jail before paying a fine or diapering his horse.

Vitkus Approves Of 'Leprechaun'

Washington (UPI) — An Internal Revenue Service official Tuesday said he considered expenditures for Operation Leprechaun, which gathered "sex and booze" information on 30 prominent Floridians, "money well-spent."

E. J. Vitkus, who as assistant regional commissioner for the Southeast IRS Division had authority over the operation, told a House Ways and Means subcommittee that he approved the plan.

"I see nothing that has happened in the past to lead me to believe it was improper or inappropriate to do that; I think it was money well-spent," he said when asked for his assessment.

The operation was not an unusual one for the IRS, Vitkus said. It was larger than most, he said, because of its location in an area of strong allegations of political corruption and organized crime influence.

Vitkus was reminded that in March, IRS Commissioner Donald Alexander told the same subcommittee that Operation Leprechaun abused the civil rights of individuals and that it was a mistake.

"If that was his statement, I think it was premature and unfortunate," Vitkus said. "I can honestly say I do not know of a single instance of abuse that grew out of Leprechaun," but "there were mistakes made, no question about that."

Alexander told the panel last March the operation "got out of hand;" it was an "aberration." He said, "Some things were done that shouldn't have been done."

An IRS investigation of the operation disclosed earlier that information was gathered on the sex and drinking habits of 30 prominent Floridians, including 11 court judges, two mayors, a city manager, two commissioners, a state representative, a state senator and three members of a state attorney's office.

Mexican Pot Linked To Cancer In Study

Mexico City (UPI) — A smoking machine which consumed 2,000 cigarettes made of U.S. government-issue Mexican marijuana produced bad news for pot-smokers Tuesday.

According to Dr. Milos Novotny, associate professor of chemistry at Indiana University in Bloomington, Ind., the chemical verdict was clear: Mexican marijuana cigarettes are more likely to cause cancer than those made of tobacco.

In a paper presented Tuesday to the First Chemical Congress of the North American Continent, Novotny detailed the results of an experiment in which the smoking machine at the university consumed marijuana cigarettes obtained from the National Institute of Mental Health.

Tests of the smoke "resulted in finding that higher concentrations of several known carcinogens are encountered in marijuana smoke as compared to tobacco smoke," Novotny's report said.

"The study also suggests that the marijuana constitutents that make cannabis (marijuana) attractive for its smokers, the so-called cannabinoids, are most likely precursors for formation of carcinogens.

"Consequently, more potent marijuana that contains larger amounts of the active ingredient might also produce more carcinogens when smoked," the report said.

Novotny said the tests, made with M.L. Lee, also of Indiana University and K.D. Bartle of the University of Leeds, England, confirmed biological experiments carried out earlier by a professor at the Swiss Institute for Experimental Cancer Research, in Laussane, Switzerland.

"The results were further compared with those obtained with smoke condensate from an equal amount of standard high-tar tobacco cigarettes," his report said.

Retarded Aid In Dental Tasks

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — The University of Pennsylvania has launched a program to train mentally retarded young adults to assist dentists in preparing patients, developing X rays, sterilizing instruments and maintaining equipment.

The program, billed as the first of its kind, "is a badly needed manpower force for the dental profession and gainful opportunity for the development of such disabled people," said Dr. D. Walter Cohen, dean of Penn's School of Dental Medicine.

Dr. Patricia P. Cormier, project director, said "it offers possibilities for people who have been denied opportunity in this area up until this time."

Six young women, aged 20 to 24, who never reached junior high school, are in the first class for dental assistant aids — DAIDS — that began this week. All were selected with the help of the Elwyn Institute, a well-known rehabilitation center for the mentally retarded.

Next year, for the second six-month-long class, 12 more young women will be enrolled. Dr. Cormier envisions at least another 12 for the third year, possibly including some men.

Dr. Cormier said she believes the school is developing a curriculum that can be passed on to other institutions.

"But we have a lot of work to do in this first year and surely will not have a package ready for at least some time after that," she added.

Dr. Cormier says that part of the classroom techniques will be taught by Penn dental students, giving them a chance to interact with mentally retarded "so they won't be afraid of this in their own practices and won't reject such people when they look for employes."

The skills that are being taught are repetitive but important, Dr. Cormier emphasizes, and Penn has guaranteed the students will get jobs when they finish the curriculum, which includes 180 hours of preclinical orientation and around 600 hours of clinical assisting.

"I foresee no reason why they wouldn't be able to function in the environment of group or hospital-based dental practices, university dental schools, or even in private practice where there would be a dentist, dental assistant and receptionist, and the DAID would proudly assume the over-all general tasks that are vital but tedious for most other people," Dr. Cormier says.

Elwyn researchers say they created a successful nurses aide programs several years ago, proving that the mentally retarded can handle simple tasks.

"These students do not look any different from any others," Dr. Cormier says. "They are perfectly normal in appearance ... They are some of the nicest students one could ever hope to meet ... They are kind, they are polite, and they accept responsibility well, particularly if it is repetitive."

'Buckle On The Bible Belt' Faces Wet-Dry Election

ABILENE, Tex. (AP) — "Liquor, liquor, liquor. That's all I've heard all day," grumped Burl King, Taylor County's tax assessor-collector, one recent evening.

"Some of them say they're for it or against it, but most just say they want to be eligible to vote if it comes down to it."

Lured by a possible liquor election in the "buckle on the Bible belt," record numbers of would-be Abilene voters were parading into King's office to register.

Others were flooding the Abilene Reporter-News with letters to the editor while leaders of opposing factions jockeyed for favorable headlines.

With nearly 100,000 citizens, Abilene is the second largest city in Texas that is still legally dry. Booze has been taboo for 73 years, and a vigorous effort is under way to keep it that way.

Unlike many West Texas towns, Abilene's heritage is one of religion rather than rowdiness and when citizens call it "God's country" they mean it.

And then there's Impact, a tiny oasis surrounded totally by Abilene.

By a vote of 28-to-0, Impact declared itself a city in 1960, then swiftly and just as decisively approved liquor sales for off-premises consumption. A series of legal challenges ensued, and it was Christmas 1962, before Impact dispensed its first spirits.

At the end of 1963, Impact's first full year of operation, beer and liquor revenue reportedly totaled $2.5 million, suggesting Abilene was not without a thirsty element.

The state comptroller's office in Austin reported last September that the city of Impact had received $185,420.39 from the 1% city sales tax since Jan. 1, 1971.

That computes out at $18,542,039 worth of taxable goods sold during the nearly five-year period.

Impact's business district consists of two liquor stores, a grocery store that peddles beer, a warehouse from which stores are stocked and, finally, the home of Mayor Dallas Perkins.

Perkins, who camouflages a keen mind and subtle wit behind a crackerbarrel philosophy and an exaggerated drawl, scoffs at speculation that he's the richest man in town.

"Mercy," he told an inquiring visitor.

"They take millions from Abilene that never come back."

It has been noted with more than passing interest that the lone liquor store at Buffalo Gap is quite similar to one at Impact, both in structure and prices.

"Mercy," said Perkins.

If anyone doubts the old adage about politics spawning strange bedfellows, he might consider that no one benefits more than Perkins if Abilene remains dry.

"The church councils are finding themselves siding with Impact and the private club owners, even though for not the same reasons," said one observer.

Although reticence is not among Perkins' strong suits, he sighed: "I feel like anything I'd say would just fan the flames of the uprising."

But if his honor is silent, he is about the only one. And it appears that a tactical error triggered as much hoopla as the wet-dry issue itself.

"We would like our friends, who are promoting a possible election, to know that every name on the proposed election petition will be printed on a double page ad of the Abilene Reporter-News."

It soon became clear that not all "40 congregations" had agreed to such an ad, and some of the city's most prominent ministers said so. Some denounced the ad. Some labeled it confusing.

A subsequent but smaller ad, this time signed by the executive board of the Abilene Baptist Association, appeared several days later:

"In as much as the issue has been clouded, it is the feeling of the board members that we should not and will not print the names of those who sign the current petition being circulated."

On Halloween Eve, County Clerk Mrs. Chester Hutcheson announced she had validated 4,196 signatures on the petition circulated by the Abilene Committee on Taxation and Trade (ACTT).

Although obtaining only 62 more signatures than required by law, ACTT Chairman Dub Burke Jr. quipped: "I'd like to think of it as a landslide."

Burke's jubilation was short-lived.

Even before a hassle over an election date could be resolved, Mrs. Hutcheson said she was refusing to certify the petition on the advice of Dist. Atty. Ed Paynter.

Paynter, the county's legal adviser, counseled against certification on grounds that commissioners cannot call an election for a city geographically located in two counties.

Burke vowed to appeal the decision, meanwhile circulating a similar petition for "Taylor County Justice Precinct One" and declaring:

"The ACTT doesn't anticipate having any difficulties in collecting the required number of valid signatures in two weeks, or no more than three, for sure."

Asked to comment on the developments, Perkins replied:

"Mercy."

Red Economist Gets Permission To Take Prize

MOSCOW (AP) — Leonid Kantorovich, the Soviet economist who shared this year's Nobel prize for economics, will travel to Stockholm to receive his award Dec. 10, Soviet officials said.

Permission for Kantorovich to attend the prize ceremony in the Swedish capital follows the refusal by Soviet authorities to allow civil rights dissident Andrei Sakharov to travel to Oslo to receive his Nobel Peace Prize. Sakharov was told he could not go because he possesses state secrets, a reason which he considers a pretext.

A spokesman for the Soviet Academy of Sciences said Prof. Kantorovich, 63, would fly Friday with his wife to Stockholm. Kantorovich is a pioneer in mathematical models for improving production and shared the Nobel with Tjalling Koopmans of the United States.

Kantorovich could not be reached for comment on the decision. Sakharov's comment was: "The news was expected. It is absolutely normal."

In 1958, Boris Pasternak, the author of "Doctor Zhivago," was pressured to renounce his literature prize while three Soviet scientists were allowed to receive their physics prize.

Dubuque Hosting Demo Candidates

Dubuque, Iowa (UPI) — Five Democratic presidential contenders have given firm commihments to appear at a $5-per-person roast beef dinner here Jan. 11, and three other candidates for the nomination also are expected, a local party official said.

The Dubuque County Democratic Central Committee met to lay the groundwork for the party function that will preceed Iowa precinct caucuses by one week.

All 10 candidates have been contacted, said Dubuque County Democratic Chairman Donna Smith, and only Sen. Lloyd Bentsen and Gov. George Wallace said they had other commitments.

The get-to-know the candidates night will be held at the Dubuque County Fairgrounds.

ASTROLOGICAL RESEARCH NEWS BULLETIN

The Secret Of Having Good Luck

Newest Discovery By I.A.A. May Be Biggest In The History Of Astrology

By J. C. Riley - Astrological Writer

"I am presenting here the most interesting story I have ever covered as an astrological writer. Read my story and find out how to become a luckier person. Yes, as a result of an astrological research discovery, you can actually increase your good luck. How? Find out in the following interview I had with Cary Franks, Chief Astrologer for the International Astrological Association. The interview was conducted at the Association's research center in the northern part of Canton, Ohio." (Canton, OH)

Question: "Cary, what is this luck project you are working on all about?"

Answer: "Very simply, we have uncovered the secret of having good luck. That is, we have found out why some people are so much luckier than others; why certain people get rich by being in the right place at the right time; how that certain person in everyone's circle of acquaintances (you know the guy) seems to always win door prizes, raffles, lotteries, cards and you name it; and why certain people are always lucky in love, careers and business ventures."

Question: "How did you discover the secret of good luck?"

Answer: "The whole project is called the Life-Luck Project."

"This project was commissioned by the board of directors over four years ago on March 7, 1971. Research data was gathered by: 1) Investigating historically famous, fortunate people, 2) Investigating famous fortunate people of today, 3) Observation of research test subjects (half of which were known to be lucky), 4) Analysis of more than 198,000 research questionnaires gathered from all over the country through I.A.A.'s nationally famous feature "ASTROLOGY TODAY" which has run in nearly every major publication in the country. Total number of people submitting birth information through "ASTROLOGY TODAY" was over 1.2 million. Total capital outlay for the Life-Luck Project was over $192,000.00."

Question: "What did you find out as a result of your investigation of fortunate people?" I asked.

Answer: "We confirmed what we had already suspected—that most fortunate people get that way by using astrology. Professional astrologers will tell you that nearly all rich and famous people, past and present, use astrologers. Even present and historic world leaders use or have used astrology."

"But, although the fact that rich and famous people use astrology is news to laymen, it is obvious to professional astrologers. What we were really after was exactly HOW did these fortunate people use astrology. Astrology is a science of infinite scope. Few people know that an astrologer could spend a life time ON JUST ONE HOROSCOPE. You must use specific areas for the specific things you want to accomplish with it. Also, you must know in detail how to APPLY astrological knowledge."

"Famous American tycoon J.P. Morgan used astrology to aquire his fortune. This was discovered early in our research and this fact was cited in "ASTROLOGY TODAY." J.P. Morgan's astrologer was none other than Evangeline Adams, grand-daughter of famed President John Quincy Adams. The trick? She concentrated and expanded the luck area of astrology only. J.P. Morgan invested in things dictated to be best by his horoscope. But, he would only make investments at the exact time prescribed by Miss Adams."

Question: "I understand you have combined astrology with numerology (a related field to astrology) as a result of your research. That's a first, isn't it?"

Answer: "Yes. We found that numerology is a very useful tool in producing good luck."

"For example, the letters in the alphabet have assigned numbers. Singer Dionne Warwicke took the advice from her numerologist and added an 'e' to the end of her name. Her numerologist told her this would bring about the correct, fortunate combination."

"She immediately skyrocketed to fame. She has revealed this fact on the Johnny Carson show twice."

Question: "So, what was the result of all your research?"

Answer: "The end result of our four years of research is a special horoscope which is revolutionary in the field of astrology. This horoscope is called THE LIFE-LUCK HOROSCOPE. It expands and concentrates on only the luck areas of astrology. It also uses NUMEROLOGY and even PSYCHOLOGY. (It was discovered in Germany that the psychology of color has a profound effect on luck). We tested this horoscope using our in-house research subjects in real life situations."

Answer: "The results were astounding! And, I'm not exaggerating when I say that. We were able to turn people into winners who had never won anything in their lives."

"But, let me qualify that statement. We also found out something else during this final test. And, that is that all people are not equally lucky. If it isn't in their horoscope; that is, if they were not born at the right time and place, they have only so much luck potential."

"But, why I am so thrilled about the results and why they are significant is this: WE WERE ABLE TO INCREASE THE GOOD LUCK IN OVER 95% OF OUR RESEARCH SUBJECTS. In other words, I will go out on the limb and say that although some people are luckier than others, there is a 95% chance that their luck horoscope will guarantee that they get all the potential luck that they have coming."

"Now, I don't want to tell you some of the amazing things that happened to our research subjects, myself, because I already sound like I'm bragging. Let me make a quick phone call and get two typical research subjects up here. I say typical because many subjects were much luckier and many were much less lucky. They are the average. But, I want to use them because they had never won anything in their lives until they used the LIFE-LUCK HOROSCOPE."

"Cary summoned two of the research subjects who had taken part in the final tests of the LIFE-LUCK HOROSCOPE. She said I was free to print their testimony. This really impressed me. Few people know that trade regulations are hard on testimonials from people. If an organization prints a testimonial with a person's name, it had better be true. Bear this in mind as you read the following testimonials from Ken Fronk and Rose Lineman."

"The two people entered the room and sat down. I first asked for the testimony of Ken Fronk of Canton, Ohio."

Question: "Ken, tell me your experience while using the LIFE-LUCK HOROSCOPE that was prepared for you."

Answer: "My LIFE-LUCK HOROSCOPE was prepared for me on March 1, 1974. The horoscope was in great detail and covered all areas of my life. But we, as research subjects, were told to concentrate on games so we could get the quickest test."

"My horoscope listed games in order, from those which I would be luckiest, to those that I would be the least lucky. It listed dates and times that I would be most lucky. It also listed what my lucky number, colors and combination of lucky colors and numbers were. I had never won anything in my life. In fact, I used to think of myself as a born loser. But, and I still can't believe it, here are the results of using my LIFE-LUCK HOROSCOPE."

"The first day my horoscope told me I would be lucky was March 16 to March 20. On March 17, I played the horses because that was listed high on my lucky area chart. I used the color and number information once I got to the track. And, that night I won $506.00!"

"Now, I will just leave out the smaller winning nights and give you the highlights."

"I was told I was going to be very lucky May 19 to May 20. Using the same procedure: On May 19, I played bingo and won a $10.00 door prize and $60.00 in bingo. On May 20, I played bingo at my Moose Club and won the $500.00 jackpot. On May 21, I played bingo, again and won $50.00. On May 22, I won $525.00 on the horses and $45.00 playing bingo."

LADY LUCK

Cary Franks—Famous Chief Astrologer for I.A.A.—Director of the Life-Luck Research Project. Cary was born and educated in Cleveland, Ohio. She received a B.S. in psychology and chemistry from Case-Western Reserve University and a masters in polymer chemistry from Akron University. After graduating, she became interested in astrology. She studied the subject for 10 years and earned the highest certification given to professional astrologers. She has studied astrology in London and around the world. The mere fact that Cary is associated with this project may be lucky in itself. Many of her clients say that just being associated with her in any way seems to bring a person good luck.

"In October, the 6th to the 11th was a lucky period. But, I was told that October 9 was an especially hot day for me and I was to bet heavy. I played the horses and won the daily double and $1,040.00."

Question: "I then asked for the testimony of Rose Lineman of Fredonia, Pennsylvania."

Answer: "Well, my testimony will be much shorter than Ken's was because the only game I am interested in is bingo. I got my LIFE-LUCK HOROSCOPE on May 1, 1974."

"Prior to that time, I never won at bingo over a period of a month. I would keep monthly records. They would usually come out on the loss side with a few break-even months and a very few slight winning months. Overall, I was way in the red."

"Now compare this. By following the advice in my LIFE-LUCK HOROSCOPE, from May 1 to December 31, 1974, I had won $2,219.00 over that eight-month period. I played on the average of once a week depending on my lucky periods, averaging about $70.00 a night."

"But, there are two things that impressed me about this horoscope more than my own experience. As a favor, I had the I.A.A. do a horoscope for each of two friends of mine."

"My first friend's horoscope told her to buy an Ohio lottery ticket on December 5. She soon found out that her ticket was a winner!"

"My second friend had a spicy experience. Her horoscope told her that she would have extremely good luck in her love-life in July. It told her to be active socially that month. She had more affairs that month than I think I had in my entire life. She came out of it with a lasting one—a guy that you couldn't have tailor made any better for her."

Question: "At this point, I have only one request from you people." I pleaded, "I want my LIFE-LUCK HOROSCOPE!" "Everyone laughed at this point as though I had just made a request that a million other people had made before me."

Answer: "Yes, there is quite a demand for the LIFE-LUCK HOROSCOPE since word has leaked out. And, we are now prepared to offer it to the public now—ON A SPECIAL BASIS. But, let me show you a sample LIFE-LUCK HOROSCOPE first so you know exactly what it is."

Question: "I was shown a copy of this special horoscope. I can tell you it is something else. It is 31 pages long and contains things that you would never dream existed in a horoscope. To go into a complete description will take up too much space, so listed next are the highlights of the contents of the LIFE-LUCK HOROSCOPE."

- The LIFE-LUCK HOROSCOPE reveals the following:
  1. WHERE, WHEN and HOW you will be lucky (including a 15-year, hand prepared, future forecast).
  2. How to take advantage of your lucky opportunities.
  3. How to increase your good luck.
  4. How to avoid bad luck.
- The horoscope covers how you can be lucky, depending on your horoscope, in the following areas:
  Love - Job - Career - Investments - Stocks - Commodities - Oil Wells - Bingo - Lotteries - Cards: Poker, Black Jack, Baccarat - Inheritance - Football and Baseball Pools - Horse Racing - Dog Racing - General Games - Keno - Sports - Tip Boards - Contests - Raffles - Sweepstakes - Roulette - Slot Machines - Dice - Parlays - Legal Matters
- The LIFE-LUCK HOROSCOPE also defines the following items:
  Your Lucky: Years, Months, Days, Hours, Numbers, Colors, Metals, Stones, People (Their Signs And When They Were Born). How to Create Lucky Vibrations, How To Create A Lucky Attitude.

Answer: "First, we would like to test our horoscope on the general public. In the past, we have found we get many letters on the success of our horoscope from people who use it. So, we know that we will get feedback from people who order their LIFE-LUCK HOROSCOPE."

"Second, we want to do more advance research on color and luck, therefore, we are willing to make the similar offer we did in our famous ASTROLOGY TODAY feature."

"We don't know what we will charge for this product when the LIFE-LUCK HOROSCOPE finally goes to market, however, I can tell you that an astrologer could charge up to $200.00 for this horoscope—if he knew how. But, those who order here through this special "TEST SUBJECT" offer and submit their birth information and their favorite color will only pay a $9.95 charge to make a duplicate copy of their horoscope plus 50c postage and handling."

"At this point, I would like to present this public message: IMPORTANT—PUBLIC BEWARE. The founder of The INTERNATIONAL Astrological Association is the originator of the famous research project ASTROLOGY TODAY. Again, under penalty of law, we could not print this if it were not true. There are presently many imitations of our horoscope and research projects. Some of these companies have names similar to The INTERNATIONAL Astrological Association. These same companies will probably try to imitate the LIFE-LUCK HOROSCOPE. It took I.A.A. a great deal of time and money to develope the LIFE-LUCK HOROSCOPE. We do not believe it can be matched in detail and quality by a hurriedly prepared imitation. To insure you are getting the true LIFE-LUCK HOROSCOPE, be sure the astrology organization is The INTERNATIONAL Astrological Association with the endorsement of certified Astrologer Cary Franks."

"We concluded the interview and Cary gave me the following information to pass on to those who wish to participate in this special project and receive their 31 page, special LIFE-LUCK HOROSCOPE prepared for them personally from their exact birth information."

1) Get a blank piece of paper. 2) At the top of the paper, print the words "LIFE-LUCK HOROSCOPE". 3) Print your name and address. 4) Print your date, time and place of birth (if you don't know the exact time, just put 12 noon). 5) Write down your favorite color. 6) Mail this along with $9.95 plus 50c for postage and handling, in cash, check or money order to: I.A.A.; Dept. L-251; 4626 CLEVELAND AVE. N.; CANTON, OHIO 44709.

Two persons from one household may order through this special "TEST SUBJECT" offer. Simply include $19.90 plus $1.00 postage and handling if two are ordered– BUT, THE LIMIT IS TWO (NO EXCEPTIONS, PLEASE). This product carries a full and unconditional money-back guarantee. If anyone has any questions on this project, feel free to phone The INTERNATIONAL Astrological Association at (216) 494-4282.

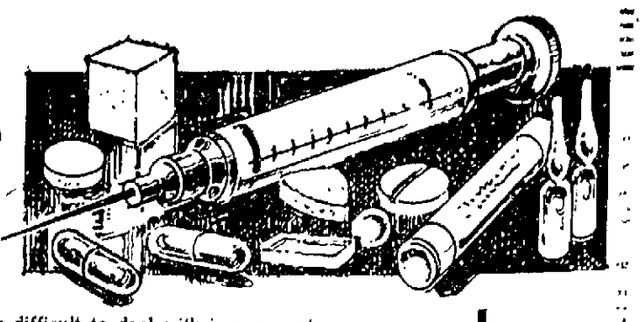
Officials At Beatrice State Home Deny Drug, Punishment Charges



(EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the last of a three-part series by The Star's Statehouse reporter, based on exclusive material from the U.S. District Court in Omaha and interview with officials of the Beatrice State Home and the State of Nebraska.)

By BOB GUENTHER
Star Staff Writer

"Dilantin, 100 milligram (mgms.); Valium, five mgms.; Phenobarbitol, ½ gram; Equanil, 400 mgms.; Chloral Hydrate, 7½ grams; Dalmane, one cap; Haldol, five mgms.; Dinfil, one tab."

That list of mood-altering drugs, some potentially addictive, is not an inventory of some recent drug bust.

It is a list of medication taken by one resident of the Beatrice State Home — some drugs once daily, other two or three times a day.

In private documents, federal investigators have called this particular resident an example of overusing medication to correct behavior problems rather than developing effective programs.

Though not familiar with the particular resident, Dr. C. T. Frericks, one of four part-time physicians at the Beatrice State Home, agreed in an interview the prescription of those eight drugs in combination was excessive.

U.S. Attorney Louis Thrasher has charged that is just one example of the ills at the Beatrice State Home. He pointed out there have been as many as 66 deaths due to improper feeding techniques and the use of a "punishment ward" there.

Charges Denied

Beatrice officials hotly deny all the allegations.

Had state and federal officials and representatives of certain retarded persons not agreed to a settlement providing for moving hundreds of the retarded from the home to community programs, however, such charges would have come out in open court.

Instead, the charges remained as a memo to U.S. District Judge Albert Schatz and were never made part of the public record.

At the request of The Star, Schatz agreed to make the documents available on two conditions: that the three parties had to agree to the release, and that the names of the retarded persons mentioned would not be published.

Findings Summarized

The memo included summations of depositions, conclusions of the U.S. Justice Department based on evidence gathered from Beatrice files by the Federal Bureau of Investigation, and evaluations of Beatrice conducted by experts.

The evidence is intended to show that most residents at Beatrice would be better served in community programs.

One of those evaluators, Dr. James Clements, who spent 2½ days at Beatrice this summer, concluded: "Physical and chemical restraints are likely being used in lieu of habilitation programs and adequate environment."

Clements' survey of medical records revealed the following percentages of residents being treated with psychotropic (mood-altering) drugs in various wards: M-2, 42%; Y-4, 64%; D-2, 78%; Infirmary II, 27%; K-2, 80%; Y-6, 64%.

Fact 'Interesting'

Clements said he found it "interesting" that the lowest use of mood-altering drugs occurred in the infirmary, the only ward where residents were confined to wheelchairs and beds.

Similarly, he called it "distressing" that sedatives, such as phenobarbitol, were administered to eight infirmary residents on an "as needed" basis.

Thrasher charged the drugs were used because Beatrice has "failed to inculcate . . . behavioral and social skills sufficient to enable such residents to retrain themselves from antisocial or dangerous conduct."

Jerry Griepentrog, director of programming at Beatrice, denied the charges. "I do not accept the assumption that we drug people in lieu of providing programs. We use certain medications in conjunction with training programs.

"We use drugs only when the program team, including the doctor, feels the drug is needed for continued growth and development. They aren't necessarily being used to make residents passive."

Some drugs, for example phenobarbitol, are used as an anti-convulsant for epileptics and not as a sedative, according to chief nurse Mrs. Minnie Stiles.

Griepentrog charged Clements failed to examine the reasons the medications were being prescribed.

While psychotropic drugs have to be used with extreme caution, he added, "You have to recognize . . . if it were not for medications, we would still have clogged psychiatric hospitals."

'Punishment' Ward?

Thrasher charged that from Nov. 12, 1974, to May 27, 1975, the isolation cell in Y-4 was used at least 174 times for such reasons as "punishment," "to calm down," "profanity," "refusal to work" and "sexual behavior."

Dr. Frederic Girardeau of the Kansas University Medical Center said, "Regardless of what Beatrice State Home calls this type of treatment, it is a classic use of punishment or aversive consequences."

"Therefore, I regard the use of Y-4 and the isolation 'cell' therein as a misuse of behavior modification procedures. In medical circles it would be considered malpractice, because it does not meet the usual standards of the professional community . . . The use of such places as Y-4 with the retarded is a vestige of the past, now professionally outdated and outmoded," Girardeau said.

A tour of Y-4 by this reporter revealed it was similar in most ways to other older wards at Beatrice. Y-4 is no longer a locked ward, Griepentrog said, as a result of a recommendation by an accrediting team which reported on the facility this summer.

Now Game Room

Griepentrog called the "punishment" label a distortion of the real purpose of Y-4. The proper term is "structured living unit," he said.

It is needed because some residents periodically behave in an uncontrollably aggressive manner, he said.

"This is difficult to deal with in every setting," he said.

"Most don't like to admit this kind of problem exists. But when you're responsible, you've got to do something about it," Griepentrog said.

Deaths Pointed To

The third major area singled out by Thrasher and evaluators for criticism was the number of deaths among Beatrice residents due to asphyxiation, aspiration and pneumonia.

Thrasher noted that 66 residents died between 1970 and 1975 due to these causes. This occurs frequently when retarded people are fed lying on their backs, he said.

Retarded persons often have coordination problems. Consequently, food may sometimes go down the windpipe instead of the esophagus. There is a provision in the settlement forbidding feeding in the supine position.

Dr. Frericks said this has always been a problem with debilitated people whether they're in a state institution, a nursing home or a hospital.

The problem with feeding occurs because a person may be so spastic or physically crippled that feeding in the supine position may be the only choice. But Frericks said he has never authorized feeding in the supine position.

Beatrice Supt. M. Elmer Wyant said, "We don't believe our experiences (with deaths from these causes) have been unusual for people with multiple physical and mental handicaps."

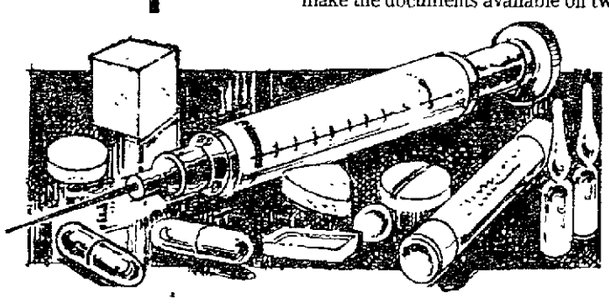
Bolsters are used in such cases to get a natural flow of gravity to the stomach, Griepentrog said.

"We do have accidents," Wyant said. "Our teams have done a beautiful job. Everybody has to be very, very alert for this problem."

In summary, Griepentrog said he felt the federal experts were not at all thorough in their examination of conditions.

"You've got to realize the severe problems we face every day of the year," Wyant said.

As with the entire problem of mental retardation, Griepentrog added, "You can't expect to understand the interworkings of this place in a few hours or days."



Watering Plants: How Much And How Often

(EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the second of five weekly articles from "Consumer Guide Rating and Raising Indoor Plants," a book about growing plants indoors which rates plants on a scale of one star ("very finicky") to five stars ("tolerant, easy"). This installment deals with one-star plants.

By VIRGINIA BEATTY
and the editors
of Consumer Guide

New plant parents often ask, "How much water should I give it?" and "How often should I water?"

These are easy questions to answer: "As much as it needs" and "Whenever it needs it."

Deciding how much it needs and when it needs it, though, can be tough. Probably 90% of plant problems indoors are caused by over- and underwatering.

Watering requires judgment, skill, knowledge and experience. It is an art that everyone must learn for himself. The amount and frequency depend upon the temperature of the room, the kind of pot (clay or plastic), the size of the plant, the amount of light and the kind of plant.

When you water, water slowly and thoroughly until the water runs out the bottom of the pot. If you have the plant in a saucer, empty the saucer after the plant finishes draining. The watering process forces the air out of the root ball. Most plants will suffer serious root damage and die if they are kept constantly wet. (In a spirit of fairness, they will do the same if kept constantly dry.)

Use water that has been sitting for some time. It will be at room temperature (there are a few plants that don't like cold water, African violets for one), and a lot of the chlorine will have evaporated. If you have an ion exchange water softener, get your plant water from the tap before it goes into the softener. Plants don't like softened water.

A long-spouted watering can is useful since it makes it possible for you to put the water where you want it on th soil and avoids the soaking of the leaves and centers of plants that tend to rot if they get too wet. Adding water at the top of the pot reduces the amount of mineral salts that accumulate on the top of the soil and also reassures you that the drainage system is working. Drainage can be improved by enlarging the hole in the bottom of the pot, using more crocking (broken clay pots) or putting more sand or perlite in your potting mix.

Sometimes it's hard to tell just by looking if the plant is suffereing from overwatering or underwatering. In both cases the leaves may darken and the plant may wilt.

If the problem is underwatering, the plant will look slightly dry and shrivelled, like a carrot left out on the counter overnight. The soil will be dry rather than wet. Sometimes you can water every day and have the plant wilt from underwatering. If you dribble a little water over the top of the plant and call it watering, the root ball dries out, the soil shrinks away from the side of the pot and the next watering (even if a lot of water is used) finds the water running down between the soil and the pot. One way to get the plant back on the track is to sink the pot in tepid water until all the air bubbles come out.

On the other hand, if the problem is overwatering and the roots and stem are rotting, the plant will look plump and sloppy, like a stalk of celery left too long in the crisper. There isn't much you can do to revive a rotting plant; you can't bring a dead plant back to life. The only thing you can do is start from scratch and try again. Cut the still-healthy leaves or stems from your dying plant and root them to start new plants.

People, plants and antiques all would do better with higher humidity. Many houses and apartments are much drier than the Sahara, and that low humidity can affect even the desert plants. (In the desert, they at least have the benefit of dew condensing on them every night.)

Humidity for plants can be increased by several means. You can place them closer together so they fog each other's glasses. You can put a layer of pebbles or perlite in a metal or plastic can, place the pots on the pebbles and keep enough water in the pan so it is just below the bottoms of the pots. Or you can increase the amount of moisture in the air by using misters or foggers.

Misting is a chancy operation because it's also a great way to transmit diseases from one plant to another. If you're going to mist, do it so the moisture will evaporate by afternoon, be sure the water is warm and don't let it collect in hairy foliage or in the center of plants susceptible to rot. For plants that need a high humidity, it's usually easier in a home to keep them in a terrarium or a plastic tent.

Light is another essential for the growth of green plants, and different plants need different amounts of light — bright, filtered or shady. An easy way to test light intensity is to place a sheet of white paper in the area where you want to put a plant. Hold your right or left hand (depending on whether you're right- or left-handed) a foot above the sheet and see if there's a sharp, well-defined shadow of your hand. If there is, you have bright light. If the result is a fuzzy but recognizable shadow-hand, you have filtered light. If all you get is a blur on the paper, your light condition is shady.

Most plants that grow flowers or fruits like bright light. This is true of most succulents as well. Filtered light is good for gesneriads, figs, ferns, ivies and palms. Philodendron, Aspidistra, Dracaena, Peperomia and Spathiphyllum are happy in shade. Plants with thickened root stalks, bulbs and tubers need light while they are actively growing, but during their period of dormancy, they need a lot less.

If your plants seem to be suffering from not enough light, there are several things you can do to improve the situation:

Wash the windows. Dirty windows can cut down on light transmittal by as much as 40%. The human eye is able to adjust to the ever-decreasing light, but the plant can't. People can move about, but plants (within limits) have to stand and take it.

Move the plants. Let each plant have its day in the sun. Move them about so that each plant has a chance and turn the plant around so that each side has an equal chance to grow.

Add artificial light to extend the day length. A longer period of weak light will have the same effect as a shorter period of strong light. For dramatic effects, instead of hanging the light above the plants, place it under the plant, so that it's lit from the side or underneath. But when you change lighting conditions for a plant do so by stages so that the plant will have a suitable opportunity to adjust.

Increase light reflection by using aluminum foil, or you can use sharp white rocks in the tops of pots. The rocks have the dual purpose of reflecting light and making it an uncomfortable place for the cat to sit.

Generally, too much light is not a problem inside the house or apartment where it is very easy to move the plant back from the light or to close sheer curtains or blinds. It is a problem though, when one takes them outside on a pleasant day for a little refreshment. Too much light may cause the leaves to burn, look grey, scorched or bleached, and can cause the plant to wilt, shrivel and die. Plants and people both have to be toughened up to go out into the noonday sun. Remember, the light in open shade outdoors is about equal to what plants consider bright light inside.

When To Water

Water more often if:

Pot is clay
Temperature is above 65 degrees
Light is bright (sunny)
Humidity is low
There's wind, good air circulation
Plant is actively growing
Pot is filled with roots
Large plant is in small pot
Plant has large, thin leaves
Stems are thin or woody
Plant is old
Plant is healthy

Water less often if:

Pot is plastic or glazed clay
Temperature is below 65 degrees
Light is dim (cloudy)
Humidity is high
Air is still, circulation poor
Plant is dormant or resting
Plant has few roots in pot
Small plant is in large pot
Plant has spines, thick leaves
Stems are thick and succulent
Plant is new
Plant is sick

Hard-To-Grow Plants Listed

Calceolaria herbohybrida
Pocketbook Plant

Description: A pot plant with balloonlike red, yellow or orange spotted flowers that grow in a cluster over bright green leaves. A plant to be enjoyed as one would a bunch of cut flowers since it is very unhappy in ordinary house situations.

Requirements: Likes to be drenched and left to dry with filtered light, organic soil and a night temperature of 50 degrees Fahrenheit. If you can give them cold nights, they will keep longer, but they are annuals, and once through flowering, they will not bloom again.

Aphelandra squarrosa 'Louisae'
Zebra Plant

Description: An erect plant with large, dark green leaves with veins outlined in white. In addition to the beautiful leaves, it has a stunning yellow flower spike made up of yellow scales and flowers. A wow plant that starts its decline at the moment of purchase, it has given many green thumbers an inferiority complex.

Requirements: It needs filtered light, evenly moist organic soil and high humidity to flower. But after flowering, it likes it dry — but not too dry. Since the plant you bought or were given was a nice, compact tipend cutting, the long, scrawny, bare stem that develops can be a bit of a jolt. Like Coleus and purple passion plants, they are better looking when young.

Adiantum species and varieties.
Maidenhair Fern

Description: Here's an attractive fern with wiry, black stems and wedge-shapred, emerald green leaflets. But consider yourself warned: Unless there is high humidity in the air, the leaflets will curl and turn brown.

Requirements: Shady location, constant moisture and high humidity are what your maidenhair needs. It will tolerate house temperatures but does better with cool nights. Needs soil with high organic content. If you get scale on a strong, mature plant, reduce watering and put it in a cool place for about a month. Then cut off all the leaf stems (fronds), bring it back to a warmer location, start watering more frequently and, when it starts growing, start fertilizing.

Fuchsia hybrids
Lady's Eardrops

Description: Pot plant to small tree with dark green leaves, often with red stems. The flowers hang like large earrings that look a bit like dancing ladies and come in combinations of white, pink, red and purple. Some varieties grow upright, others have very weak stems and do best in hanging baskets.

Requirements: Filtered light and heavy soil kept evenly moist. Lots of water during its growing season, much less while resting (October-February). Cold to cool night temperatures and good air circulation. Flowers drop easily, better leave the plant put while in bloom. Flowers come on new growth, so plant has to be cut after dormancy and each stem pinched once or twice. White fly can't leave this beautiful plant alone.

Senecio cruentus
Cineraria of florists

Description: This flowering plant is about a foot tall with bright green leaves and many daisylike flowers in white and strong, bright colors. It is a beautiful plant, well proportioned between flowers and leaves, and often it is a real heartbreaker since it goes to pieces so quickly in most homes.

Requirements: Bright light is what it needs. Drench, then let dry a bit, then give it more water while it's actively growing. It should have heavy soil with good drainage. The temperature should be about 50 degrees Fahrenheit and not dry with good air circulation. This plant appears to be a real softy, but it looks well only if it's kept cold. As a temporary guest, it can add gaiety and charm to any setting, providing you give it plenty of room to show off.

Caladium hortulanum
Fancy Leaved Caladium

Description: These stocky plants are grown for the beautiful colors and markings on their large heart- or arrow-shaped leaves. The seedlings are all green, and it isn't until the fourth or fifth leaf that they begin to show their true colors.

Requirements: Your plants need filtered light, humid air and to be kept evenly moist while they are actively growing. After they have lost their leaves and are resting, they don't need as much water, and the air can be dry. They also prefer organic soil with a bit of sand to improve the drainage. If you plan to take them outside, be sure to choose green plants. The ones with all the color may strike your eye, but when the sun and fresh air strike, they don't do as well as the mostly green ones do.

House Okays New York Bailout Plan

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House on Tuesday approved by a 10-vote margin President Ford's $2.3-billion rescue plan for New York City and sent the measure to expected quick passage in the Senate despite a certain filibuster.

The House voted 213 to 203 to approve the bill as conservative Republicans and Democrats teamed up to try and scuttle it. Only 38 Republicans and 175 Democrats voted for the President's proposal.

There were no substantial changes in the Ford proposal, which would give the city up to $2.3 billion in loans annually over the next three years to stave off default. Default could come Dec. 11 if the Senate fails to approve it, but New York Mayor Abraham D. Beame said earlier Tuesday he expects approval at the end of this week or early next week.

The bill requires the city to repay each loan at the end of each fiscal year and New York will have to pay an 8% interest rate on the loans.

The bill also permits the secretary of the Treasury to require either the city or the state to put up as collateral on the loans any federal funds, such as revenue sharing money, which normally would be given New York.

It also provides that the secretary of the Treasury may make the loans after he has determined there is a reasonable chance they will be repaid, and he can set requirements he feels are needed to insure payment, but he cannot interfere with the day-to-day operations of the city.

Congress' General Accounting Office also would have the power to audit the city's books.

Beame said: "This vote shows that, despite all rumors to the contrary, New York City still has friends and supporters throughout the country. I want to thank them all."

Asked if New York City would have to return to Congress in the future for more aid, Beame said, "I don't think so. New York City and state are taking very strong measures .... If we come back, we would come back, as any city would, to have the federal government take its responsibilities," such as welfare costs, Beame said.

He said the loans will "keep us going until June 1978 when we can get back into the market."

New York Gov. Hugh Carey said he was "most grateful to Congress for the vote that has given New York State and New York City a chance, an opportunity, to avoid default.

"This has given us a chance to show the people of the United States that whatever have been our errors ... we are putting our affairs in order ... and will redeem ourselves," Carey said.

Rep. William Stanton, R-Ohio, who introduced the Ford substitute for the $7-billion loan guarantee bill before the House, said Wednesday night after Ford outlined the proposal in a news conference that a large number of Republicans would be against it.

Rep. Delbert Latta, R-Ohio, pointed out the Republican opposition by saying that the people of New York had done nothing to rid themselves over the years of the politicians who spent them into the financial crisis.

However, House Minority Leader John J. Rhodes of Arizona, one of the few Republicans in favor of aid for the city, said the bill is "certainly not a bail-out bill .... It is a stretch-out bill" to give the city and state time.

But Rep. Robert Bauman, R-Md., warned that, despite the aid, "the state and the city will be back shortly" seeking more aid.

And Rep. Henry S. Reuss, D-Wis., chairman of the House Banking Committee, said that the measure is only a "stopgap. The problem will come back to haunt us."

The measure is expected to be taken up by the Senate Wednesday, where Sen. James Allen, D-Ala., has said he will filibuster it.

But aid backers say they have enough votes to stop the filibuster and to pass the bill.

The bill will require a separate appropriation bill to be passed by Congress to fund the Ford plan, an action expected this week or next.

In other developments in the New York fiscal situation:

— The city's municipal employe pension funds said they would put $155.6 million in corporate bonds on sale Thursday to raise money to help the city meet a $100.6 million payroll.

Comptroller Harrison J. Goldin said the paychecks were due Friday and the bond sale would enable the city to pay its workers.

The sale is part of the prior agreement by the union pension funds to purchase $500 million in city paper by the end of the fiscal year on June 30.

— New York State Comptroller Arthur Levitt said the state is facing a $700 million budget deficit this fiscal year.

This is the same figure given earlier by Gov. Hugh Carey and disputed by the state's Republican leadership, which put the projected deficit at $300 million.

S.C. Carriage Driver Fights Horse Diapers

Charleston, S.C. (UPI) — A municipal judge Tuesday gave a carriage driver 10 days in which to organize a defense against charges of driving his undiapered horse through the streets of historic Charleston.

The driver, David Fuller, operator of the Charleston Carriage Co., faces a maximum fine of $100 or a 30-day jail term on the misdemeanor charge. Judge Hugo Spitz postponed a hearing on the case until Dec. 29.

The jurist allotted Fuller's attorney, Robert Guess, 10 days to prepare a legal brief and told City Atty. Morris Rosen to reply within 10 days thereafter.

Guess indicated he would argue that a new city ordinance requiring the diapering of horses was in conflict with a state law prohibiting cruelty to animals.

The city ordinance went into effect Monday, and Fuller, the first to receive a traffic summons for violating it, vowed he would go to jail before paying a fine or diapering his horse.

Vitkus Approves Of 'Leprechaun'

Washington (UPI) — An Internal Revenue Service official Tuesday said he considered expenditures for Operation Leprechaun, which gathered "sex and booze" information on 30 prominent Floridians, "money well-spent."

E. J. Vitkus, who as assistant regional commissioner for the Southeast IRS Division had authority over the operation, told a House Ways and Means subcommittee that he approved the plan.

"I see nothing that has happened in the past to lead me to believe it was improper or inappropriate to do that; I think it was money well-spent," he said when asked for his assessment.

The operation was not an unusual one for the IRS, Vitkus said. It was larger than most, he said, because of its location in an area of strong allegations of political corruption and organized crime influence.

Vitkus was reminded that in March, IRS Commissioner Donald Alexander told the same subcommittee that Operation Leprechaun abused the civil rights of individuals and that it was a mistake.

"If that was his statement, I think it was premature and unfortunate," Vitkus said. "I can honestly say I do not know of a single instance of abuse that grew out of Leprechaun," but "there were mistakes made, no question about that."

Alexander told the panel last March the operation "got out of hand;" it was an "aberration." He said, "Some things were done that shouldn't have been done."

An IRS investigation of the operation disclosed earlier that information was gathered on the sex and drinking habits of 30 prominent Floridians, including 11 court judges, two mayors, a city manager, two commissioners, a state representative, a state senator and three members of a state attorney's office.

Retarded Aid In Dental Tasks

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — The University of Pennsylvania has launched a program to train mentally retarded young adults to assist dentists in preparing patients, developing X rays, sterilizing instruments and maintaining equipment.

The program, billed as the first of its kind, "is a badly needed manpower force for the dental profession and gainful opportunity for the development of such disabled people," said Dr. D. Walter Cohen, dean of Penn's School of Dental Medicine.

Dr. Patricia P. Cormier, project director, said "it offers possibilities for people who have been denied opportunity in this area up until this time."

Six young women, aged 20 to 24, who never reached junior high school, are in the first class for dental assistant aids — DAIDS — that began this week. All were selected with the help of the Elwyn Institute, a well-known rehabilitation center for the mentally retarded.

Next year, for the second six-month-long class, 12 more young women will be enrolled. Dr. Cormier envisions at least another 12 for the third year, possibly including some men.

Dr. Cormier said she believes the school is developing a curriculum that can be passed on to other institutions.

"But we have a lot of work to do in this first year and surely will not have a package ready for at least some time after that," she added.

Dr. Cormier says that part of the classroom techniques will be taught by Penn dental students, giving them a chance to interact with mentally retarded "so they won't be afraid of this in their own practices and won't reject such people when they look for employes."

The skills that are being taught are repetitive but important, Dr. Cormier emphasizes, and Penn has guaranteed the students will get jobs when they finish the curriculum, which includes 180 hours of preclinical orientation and around 600 hours of clinical assisting.

"I foresee no reason why they wouldn't be able to function in the environment of group or hospital-based dental practices, university dental schools, or even in private practice where there would be a dentist, dental assistant and receptionist, and the DAID would proudly assume the over-all general tasks that are vital but tedious for most other people," Dr. Cormier says.

Elwyn researchers say they created a successful nurses aide programs several years ago, proving that the mentally retarded can handle simple tasks.

"These students do not look any different from any others," Dr. Cormier says. "They are perfectly normal in appearance ... They are some of the nicest students one could ever hope to meet ... They are kind, they are polite, and they accept responsibility well, particularly if it is repetitive."

Mexican Pot Linked To Cancer In Study

Mexico City (UPI) — A smoking machine which consumed 2,000 cigarettes made of U.S. government-issue Mexican marijuana produced bad news for pot-smokers Tuesday.

According to Dr. Milos Novotny, associate professor of chemistry at Indiana University in Bloomington, Ind., the chemical verdict was clear: Mexican marijuana cigarettes are more likely to cause cancer than those made of tobacco.

In a paper presented Tuesday to the First Chemical Congress of the North American Continent, Novotny detailed the results of an experiment in which the smoking machine at the university consumed marijuana cigarettes obtained from the National Institute of Mental Health.

Tests of the smoke "resulted in finding that higher concentrations of several known carcinogens are encountered in marijuana smoke as compared to tobacco smoke," Novotny's report said.

"The study also suggests that the marijuana constitutents that make cannabis (marijuana) attractive for its smokers, the so-called cannabinoids, are most likely precursors for formation of carcinogens.

"Consequently, more potent marijuana that contains larger amounts of the active ingredient might also produce more carcinogens when smoked," the report said.

Novotny said the tests, made with M.L. Lee, also of Indiana University and K.D. Bartle of the University of Leeds, England, confirmed biological experiments carried out earlier by a professor at the Swiss Institute for Experimental Cancer Research, in Laussane, Switzerland.

"The results were further compared with those obtained with smoke condensate from an equal amount of standard high-tar tobacco cigarettes," his report said.

'Buckle On The Bible Belt' Faces Wet-Dry Election

ABILENE, Tex. (AP) — "Liquor, liquor, liquor. That's all I've heard all day," grumped Burl King, Taylor County's tax assessor-collector, one recent evening.

"Some of them say they're for it or against it, but most just say they want to be eligible to vote if it comes down to it."

Lured by a possible liquor election in the "buckle on the Bible belt," record numbers of would-be Abilene voters were parading into King's office to register.

Others were flooding the Abilene Reporter-News with letters to the editor while leaders of opposing factions jockeyed for favorable headlines.

With nearly 100,000 citizens, Abilene is the second largest city in Texas that is still legally dry. Booze has been taboo for 73 years, and a vigorous effort is under way to keep it that way.

Unlike many West Texas towns, Abilene's heritage is one of religion rather than rowdiness and when citizens call it "God's country" they mean it.

And then there's Impact, a tiny oasis surrounded totally by Abilene.

By a vote of 22-to-0, Impact declared itself a city in 1960, then swiftly and just as decisively approved liquor sales for off-premises consumption. A series of legal challenges ensued, and it was Christmas 1962, before Impact dispensed its first spirits.

At the end of 1963, Impact's first full year of operation, beer and liquor revenue reportedly totaled $2.5 million, suggesting Abilene was not without a thirsty element.

The state comptroller's office in Austin reported last September that the city of Impact had received $185,420.39 from the 1% city sales tax since Jan. 1, 1971.

Impact's business district consists of two liquor stores, a grocery store that peddles beer, a warehouse from which stores are stocked and, finally, the home of Mayor Dallas Perkins.

Perkins, who camouflages a keen mind and subtle wit behind a crackerbarrel philosophy and an exaggerated drawl, scoffs at speculation that he's the richest man in town.

"Mercy," he told an inquiring visitor.

"They take millions from Abilene that never come back."

It has been noted with more than passing interest that the lone liquor store at Buffalo Gap is quite similar to one at Impact, both in structure and prices.

"Mercy," said Perkins.

If anyone doubts the old adage about politics spawning strange bedfellows, he might consider that no one benefits more than Perkins if Abilene remains dry.

"The church councils are finding themselves siding with Impact and the private club owners, even though for not the same reasons," said one observer.

Although reticence is not among Perkins' strong suits, he sighed: "I feel like anything I'd say would just fan the flames of the uprising."

But if his honor is silent, he is about the only one. And it appears that a tactical error triggered as much hoopla as the wet-dry issue itself.

"We would like our friends, who are promoting a possible election, to know that every name on the proposed election petition will be printed on a double page ad of the Abilene Reporter-News."

It soon became clear that not all "40 congregations" had agreed to such an ad, and some of the city's most prominent ministers said so. Some denounced the ad. Some labeled it confusing.

A subsequent but smaller ad, this time signed by the executive board of the Abilene Baptist Association, appeared several days later:

"In as much as the issue has been clouded, it is the feeling of the board members that we should not and will not print the names of those who sign the current petition being circulated."

On Halloween Eve, County Clerk Mrs. Chester Hutcheson announced she had validated 4,196 signatures on the petition circulated by the Abilene Committee on Taxation and Trade (ACTT).

Although obtaining only 62 more signatures than required by law, ACTT Chairman Dub Burke Jr. quipped: "I'd like to think of it as a landslide."

Burke's jubilation was short-lived.

Even before a hassle over an election date could be resolved, Mrs. Hutcheson said she was refusing to certify the petition on the advice of Dist. Atty. Ed Paynter.

Paynter, the county's legal adviser, counseled against certification on grounds that commissioners cannot call an election for a city geographically located in two counties.

Burke vowed to appeal the decision, meanwhile circulating a similar petition for "Taylor County Justice Precinct One" and declaring:

"The ACTT doesn't anticipate having any difficulties in collecting the required number of valid signatures in two weeks, or no more than three, for sure."

Asked to comment on the developments, Perkins replied:

"Mercy."

Red Economist Gets Permission To Take Prize

MOSCOW (AP) — Leonid Kantorovich, the Soviet economist who shared this year's Nobel prize for economics, will travel to Stockholm to receive his award Dec. 10, Soviet officials said.

Permission for Kantorovich to attend the prize ceremony in the Swedish capital follows the refusal by Soviet authorities to allow civil rights dissident Andrei Sakharov to travel to Oslo to receive his Nobel Peace Prize. Sakharov was told he could not go because he possesses state secrets, a reason which he considers a pretext.

A spokesman for the Soviet Academy of Sciences said Prof. Kantorovich, 63, would fly Friday with his wife to Stockholm. Kantorovich is a pioneer in mathematical models for improving production and shared the Nobel with Tjalling Koopmans of the United States.

Kantorovich could not be reached for comment on the decision. Sakharov's comment was: "The news was expected. It is absolutely normal."

In 1958, Boris Pasternak, the author of "Doctor Zhivago," was pressured to renounce his literature prize while three Soviet scientists were allowed to receive their physics prize.

Dubuque Hosting Demo Candidates

Dubuque, Iowa (UPI) — Five Democratic presidential contenders have given firm commitments to appear at a $5-per-person roast beef dinner here Jan. 11, and three other candidates for the nomination also are expected, a local party official said.

The Dubuque County Democratic Central Committee met to lay the groundwork for the party function that will precede Iowa precinct caucuses by one week.

All 10 candidates have been contacted, said Dubuque County Democratic Chairman Donna Smith, and only Sen. Lloyd Bentsen and Gov. George Wallace said they had other commitments.

The get-to-know the candidates night will be held at the Dubuque County Fairgrounds.

DAILY CRYPTOQUOTE – Here's how to work it:

A X Y D L B A A X R
is L O N G F E L L O W

One letter simply stands for another. In this sample A is used for the three L's, X for the two O's, etc. Single letters, apostrophes, the length and formation of the words are all hints. Each day the code letters are different.

ASTROLOGICAL FORECAST

☆ By SIDNEY OMARR ☆

Wednesday, December 3, 1975

Every U.S. President born under Aquarius died in office. Only one President born under Gemini and he was assassinated. Only one President was born on the July 4 birthday of the nation. Theodore Roosevelt, a Scorpio, kept his horoscope mounted on a chessboard in the White House.

☆ ☆ ☆

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Accent on long distance, special projects, language and unique studies. You will be able to bring together persons of varying views. Key is to co-ordinate activities. Cancer, Capricorn persons play important roles.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Your cash position improves. You can be more flexible. Experiment with a variety of procedures. Expand sphere of activity. Element of timing flavors your efforts. One who seemed indifferent will display enthusiasm.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Legal agreements may not be too strong. Know it and do something about reinforcing promise. Some persons, wishing to cooperate, may be tied up in litigation. Know it and have alternatives available. Do plenty of listening, observing so as to detect subtle signals.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Highlight change, variety of experiences, chance for travel and better forms of communication. Member of opposite sex could figure prominently. Accent is on service, practicality, employment and health. Long-range program could be finalized.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): If you are playing games where emotions are involved, expect to pay a price. Key now is to organize priorities. Don't risk security, home on whim or sensationalism. Choose path that is constructive for your health and welfare. One who tempts and promises has nothing but destruction to offer.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Check ownership of property — get rundown on titles, rights and permissions. Protect your own interests. Be aware of security. Real estate seems very much in picture. See clearly; avoid tendency toward self-deception.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): What appeared a setback could boomerang in your favor. Accent on how you deal with close neighbors, relatives. Short trip might be on agenda. Capricorn figures prominently. Older individual has a say — and it behooves you to listen.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Finish what you start. Be direct, honest to your own principles. Means cash is on the line and if you are bluffing you will pay a dear price. Know it — review situation and let go of losing proposition.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Creativity is highlighted. Your style impresses. Personality is winning. Timing could be on target. One who had been a detriment to efforts may now do something to reverse that image. Cycle is high — you land on your feet.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Some relatives, who should know better, may try to hide essential facts. Key is to maintain balance and humor. There is something happening behind the scenes — You'll learn of it and be more amused than annoyed.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Friend who wants your support does not want to reveal complete story. Be flexible. Don't take others — or yourself — too seriously. Forces are scattered. Change routine. Socialize. Dine out — listen to music which "gets to you."

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Accent on promotion, ambition, dealings with those in positions of authority. You can imprint your own style. There is room for you at top. Tear down for purpose of rebuilding. Revise and review. Read between the lines.

IF TODAY IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you are a traveler, a writer, one who has insatiable curiosity and, on many occasions, eats too much. Gemini and Sagittarius persons play important roles in your life. What was started this year will blossom in 1976, with June to be your most significant month. If single, you'll probably marry.

Here is a pleasant little game that will give you a message every day. It's a numerical puzzle designed to spell out your fortune. Count the letters in your first name. If the number of letters is 6 or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 6, add 3. The result is your key number. Start at the upper left-hand corner of the rectangle and check every one of your key numbers, left to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures give you.

DAILY CRYPTOQUOTE — Here's how to work it:

is L O N G F E L L O W

One letter simply stands for another. In this sample A is used for the three L's, X for the two O's, etc. Single letters, apostrophes, the length and formation of the words are all hints. Each day the code letters are different.

ASTROLOGICAL · FORECAST

☆ By SIDNEY OMARR ☆

Wednesday, December 3, 1975

Every U.S. President born under Aquarius died in office. Only one President was born under Gemini and he was assassinated. Only one President was born on the July 4 birthday of the nation. Theodore Roosevelt, a Scorpio, kept his horoscope mounted on a chessboard in the White House.

☆ ☆ ☆

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Accent on long distance, special projects, language and unique studies. You will be able to bring together persons of varying views. Key is to co-ordinate activities. Cancer, Capricorn persons play important roles.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Your cash position improves. You can be more flexible. Experiment with a variety of procedures. Expand sphere of activity. Element of timing flavors your efforts. One who seemed indifferent will display enthusiasm.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Legal agreements may not be too strong. Know it and do something about reinforcing promise. Some persons, wishing to cooperate, may be tied up in litigation. Know it and have alternatives available. Do plenty of listening, observing so as to detect subtle signals.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Highlight change, variety of experiences, chance for travel and better forms of communication. Member of opposite sex could figure prominently. Accent is on service, practicality, employment and health. Long-range program could be finalized.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): If you are playing games where emotions are involved, expect to pay a price. Key now is to organize priorities. Don't risk security, home on whim or sensationalism. Choose path that is constructive for your health and welfare. One who tempts and promises has nothing but destruction to offer.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Check ownership of property — get rundown on titles, rights and permissions. Protect your own interests. Be aware of security. Real estate seems very much in picture. See clearly, avoid tendency toward self-deception.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): What appeared a setback could boomerang in your favor. Accent on how you deal with close neighbors, relatives. Short trip might be on agenda. Capricorn figures prominently. Older individual has a say — and it behooves you to listen.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Finish what you start. Be direct, honest to your own principles. Means cash is on the line and if you are bluffing you will pay a dear price. Know it — review situation and let go of losing proposition.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Creativity is highlighted. Your style impresses. Personality is winning. Timing could be on target. One who had been a detriment to efforts may now do something to reverse that image. Cycle is high — you land on your feet.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Some relatives, who should know better, may try to hide essential facts. Key is to maintain balance and humor. There is something happening behind the scenes — You'll learn of it and be more amused than annoyed.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Friend who wants your support does not want to reveal complete story. Be flexible. Don't take others — or yourself — too seriously. Forces are scattered. Change routine. Socialize. Dine out — listen to music which "gets to you."

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Accent on promotion, ambition, dealings with those in positions of authority. You can imprint your own style. There is room for you at top. Tear down for purpose of rebuilding. Revise and review. Read between the lines.

IF TODAY IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you are a traveler, a writer, one who has insatiable curiosity and, on many occasions, eats too much. Gemini and Sagittarius persons play important roles in your life. What wes started this year will blossom in 1976, with June to be your most significant month. If single, you'll probably marry.

(Learn "The Truth About Astrology." Send 75 cents to Omarr Booklet, The Lincoln Star, P.O. Box 1111, Los Angeles, Calif. 90053. You'll open door to fascinating study and self-revelation!)

Here is a pleasant little game that will give you a message every day. It's a numerical puzzle designed to spell out your fortune. Count the letters in your first name. If the number of letters is 6 or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 6, add 3. The result is your key number. Start at the upper left-hand corner of the rectangle and check every one of your key numbers, left to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures give you.
